Kaiser Told To Go Ahead On 500-Plane Cargo Fleet

Nelson Promises Builder Authority; Drafting of Plans To Start at Once

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Hard-driving Henry J. Kaiser, given the green light by War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson, last night started to lay the groundwork of an organization with which to build 500 70-ton flying boats of the type of the Glenn L. Martin Mars.

Also with Nelson's backing, Kaiser, who heads the company that has broken all speed records in building ships, moved to produce for the Government the engineering plans for his "dream plane," a revolutionary type of flying monster weighing 200 tons and capable of carrying 100 tons in men and weapons into battle with the Axis.

Taking the initiative in what may prove to be a history-making step, Nelson yesterday decided that the man with the most spectacular building record in the country should be given a commitment for a Government contract to build a fleet of giant air freighters, provided Kaiser can scrape up the necessary scarce materials without interfering with the supply of those materials assigned to the present Army and Navy plane program.

Will Get Authority to Start

Nelson and his aides at the War Production Board declined to comment, but from reliable information available the situation appeared to be this: The Navy, which would use the flying boats, was hesitant about giving Kaiser a final "yes." The Navy may do so soon, but whether it does or not, Nelson will give Kaiser all the authority WPB sources believe he needs to start making airplanes.

In a one-hour conference with Nelson yesterday, it was learned, the WPB chief agreed to give Kaiser this authority in letters of intent. One of the letters would authorize Kaiser to construct 500 flying boats of the Mars type with the understanding that final authorization would be contingent upon Kaiser's ability to produce engineering plans showing that he can make the boats without tearing down the rest of the military plane program.

Nelson's only statement was that a letter of intent covering the Mars planes "is being prepared." It was learned, however, that a second letter of intent covering the engineering development of the 200-ton plane also is to be prepared. Present arrangements call for development of working plans for the 200-tonner for the Maritime Commission.

Martin May Build 100

The question of what Federal agency will formally sign up with Kaiser remained to be decided, but there was little question that Nelson will sign, even if Navy or other officials do not.

The question of where the 500-plane fleet is to be built also remained open, as well as the matter of whether planes of the Mars type are to be made by airplane manufacturers. One WPB source yesterday stated it was likely that 100 of

WPB Slashes Yardage of Work Clothes

The War Production Board set styles for men's work clothes yesterday—fewer pockets, fewer buttons and buckles and no unnecessary yardage.

Unlike previous clothing orders, this one contained a minimum as well as a maximum yardage regulation for each type of garment.

"The minimum yardage restriction was provided," the WPB explained, "to prevent skimping which would interfere with a worker's freedom of action and defeat the conservation purpose of the order by making it necessary for a worker to buy a larger size or have the suit wear out in a short time as a tight-fitting garment."

The WPB estimated the order would result in an annual saving of 21 million yards of cloth, enough to provide 7 million additional garments; 125 million yards of thread, through the elimination of triple stitching; 150 million buttons and 12 million buckles, and 29 per cent of the normal shipping space involved in the shipping of work shirts, since the order prohibits the shipping of these in boxes.

Newspaper Calls It a 'Smear'

U. S. Orders Grand Jury Probe Of Chicago Tribune War Report

Attorney General Francis Biddle last night disclosed that he has ordered an immediate grand jury investigation at Chicago of the publication by "certain newspapers on Sunday, June 7, 1942, of confidential information concerning the Battle of Midway."

The announcement did not name the newspapers, but it is known that the article referred to was a dispatch to the Chicago Tribune and was printed also in the New York Daily News and the Washington Times-Herald.

Early today the Tribune said it was "no surprise" that "Washington would attack the Tribune and other newspapers which have demanded . . . the removal of high officials who have been fumbling the ball at home."

The article mentioned by Biddle cited "reliable sources in the Naval Intelligence" as authority for stating that the strength of the Japanese naval forces in the Battle of Midway was known in advance to American Navy officials. A tabulation of the three enemy forces—attack, support and occupation—sent against Midway with a description of the ships comprising each force, also was given.

At a recent off-the-record press conference, Navy officers emphasized to Washington newspapermen that publication of the story was considered to be a grave and serious matter.

Biddle disclosed that the grand jury investigation was ordered after preliminary inquiry and upon the recommendation of the Navy Department. He added that the grand jury will be asked to investigate the "possible violation of any criminal statute." Particularly, he said, a study will be made of possible violation of the Act of June 15, 1917, as amended by the Act of March 28, 1940. The acts relate to the unlawful communication of documents or information relating to the national defense.

William D. Mitchell, who was President Hoover's attorney general, was named by Biddle to conduct the grand jury investigation and resulting prosecution. Mitchell, a resident of New York, has been in charge of the preliminary inquiry, Biddle said. He will function as a special assistant to the Attorney General.

Conviction under the statutes mentioned by Biddle carries maximum penalties of $10,000 fine, 10 years in jail, or both.

In Chicago, the Tribune released a statement saying:

"Announcement of the grand jury investigation follows closely on the heels of the failure of the Administration's purge and smear campaign in the primaries against critics in

Walkathon's Promoter Is Fined $50

Sentence Is Imposed For Violating D. C. Child Labor Code

Ray C. Alvis, promoter of the walkathon at Riverside Stadium, was fined $50 in Juvenile Court yesterday for violation of the District child labor law.

At the same time, Commissioner Guy Mason made a proposal for a board "to outlaw or control and regulate all commercial exhibitions" following introduction of a bill in the Senate Thursday to outlaw walkathons or similar exhibitions here.

The trial before Judge Fay L. Bentley revealed that the juvenile performer in the walkathon, Ruth Smith, 3639 M Street Northwest, was only 15 years old and that she claimed her age to be 17.

Arraigned On Two Counts

Alvis was arraigned on two counts—working a minor after 11 p. m. and more than three hours in any one day. He pleaded "nolle contendre" and the facts were presented to the judge by Assistant Corporation Counsel Fred Icenhower and the defendant's attorney.

It was explained to the court that Albert J. Ault, District child labor inspector, found Miss Smith appearing in the walk marathon and that she said she was 17. When Ault informed Alvis of the matter, he immediately disqualified the girl.

Through his attorney, Alvis said Miss Smith was employed after she brought a note from her mother, Mrs. May Smith, granting permission for her to participate. It was in this note, the court was told, that the girl's age was given as 17.

Judge Bentley suspended sentence on the charge of employing a minor more than three hours, saying she felt this to be "a more or less technical violation."

She termed the second charge "quite serious," however, and ordered the defendant to pay a $50

Morse Warns Labor Against Outlaw Strikes

Employes Must Stay On Job, Have Faith In U. S., He Asserts

Pointing out that "unauthorized and outlaw" strikes have been on the increase, Public Member Wayne L. Morse of the War Labor Board yesterday warned organized labor that the board would not "countenance" or "condone" work stoppages even when they result from employers taking advantage of labor's no-strike pledge.

"Adequate machinery exists for the settling of such grievances without resort to work stoppages," Morse said.

Morse made his statement in a formal board opinion refusing 550 employes of the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Co., Detroit, pay for five days while they were on strike because of an alleged breach of a collective bargaining contract by the company. The employes were represented by the International Longshoremen's Association, A. F. of L.

2½-Cent Wage Increase

The board also met the union's demand for wage increases up to 20 cents an hour by granting a boost of 2½ cents an hour to bring their wages up to the 15 per cent increase in the cost of living between January, 1941 and May, 1942 provided by the "little steel" stabilization formula.

The board panel which heard the case prior to the announcement of the "little steel" formula had recommended that no increase be granted. However, the board reversed its panel and calculated the wage boost in accordance with the formula as a matter of "fairness."

"The safety of this Nation is too much in danger to justify any countenancing of work stoppages, let alone seemingly condoning them by awarding workers pay for time spent during the work stoppage resulting from a dispute with their employer," Morse wrote.

"The board appreciates the fact

Placed Rose on Casket

Veteran Who Picked Nation's Unknown Soldier Dies at 44

Sergt. Edward F. Younger, World War I veteran who selected the body of the Unknown Soldier, now buried at Arlington National Cemetery, died late Thursday night in Chicago, it was learned here yesterday.

MR. YOUNGER

Sergeant Younger, 44, a postoffice employe in Chicago, enlisted in the Army in 1917 and went overseas. Later he went to Germany with the Army of Occupation and in 1921 was selected from a group of distinguished noncommissioned officers to choose the body of the Unknown Soldier.

He told about it on May 30, 1930, when The Post brought him here as its guest to lead the District's tribute to Washington's war dead.

"I was standing outside that little church (a chapel in the French village of Chalons-sur-Marne) with five other soldiers. Our colonel walked over to us. In his hand he held a bunch of roses. He said, 'Men, it is my task to choose one of you to perform a great and sacred duty.' He stood there for a long minute. Then he called my name. 'Sergeant Younger,' he said, 'in this church are four caskets. In them lie the bodies of four nameless American soldiers. Go into the church . . . put a rose on one of the caskets. That is all.

"I went into the church and walked by the caskets. I passed the first one . . . the second . . . then something made me stop. And a voice seemed to say, 'This is a pal of yours.' I don't know how long I stood there. But, finally, I put the rose on the second casket and went back out into the sunlight."

Although funeral plans have not been completed, the Associated Press reported from Chicago that there was a possibility his body might lie in Arlington.

President Still Silent on Fate of Spies

Rumors Fly Fast As Eight Saboteurs Remain in Solitary Cells at District Jail

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The tension of coming death settled like a cold fog last night over the clean stone of the District Jail, where a band of German spies waited in solitary cells.

The spies even lacked the dark comfort of certainty. They could not mark the rushing hours, as sweeping toward some appointed time.

But they knew the hard laws of war, and took it for granted that an American military commission found them deserving of the death they came to deal out with fire and dynamite. And they knew too, that it would not be delayed much longer. The commission was through with them last Monday.

Only President Knows

When and where death will come to these invaders—and whether any one of them will find mercy—were things only President Roosevelt could answer. And he said yesterday that he had not made up his mind.

Nevertheless, the tension spread out from the death cells and engendered fantastic rumors, which grew as people heard, or read, and repeated them. The spies were already dead, it was said, or would be electrocuted before nightfall. Two would be spared. The electric chair was ready. These were some of the rumors.

When the military commission of seven generals agreed upon its judgment last Monday the prisoners were returned to the custody of President Roosevelt, the Commander in Chief of the Army, who placed them in the hands of the provost marshal of the Military District of Washington. This is Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, who has kept the spies under close guard for a month.

Since Monday the spies have remained in their cells, alone but watched by soldiers on the outside. Except for the Army doctors who examine them every day, the spies have seen nobody but the soldiers since Monday. No lawyers. No clergymen. No relatives. No friends. And not each other.

Close Guard to Continue

General Cox said last night that the spies have not asked to see anybody, and that this close guard will go on unless and until his orders are changed.

The trail that led the eight Germans to this grim pass was just as grim when it began, at some port in the Reich or in a conquered country. They boarded two submarines after being schooled in the warlike

Not Ankle Deep

The Office of War Information, warning that "we could lose this war," declared last night that production of fighting planes, tanks, most types of artillery and naval vessels fell behind schedule in June and that increasing sacrifices must be made by civilians if the war program is to be successful.

Presenting a gloomy and critical review of the military and production situation at the present time, OWI asserted that individual Americans had made great sacrifices but "as a nation we are not yet more than ankle deep in the war."

Clamor Doesn't Help

Referring by indirection to demands for the opening of a second front in Europe, the OWI declared that "popular pressure for action on this front or that of the many possible fronts can serve no useful purpose."

American military forces are being disposed "as and where the military commanders believe they get the maximum of results," and "when we cannot be strong and hit hard everywhere, we must be able to hit hard where it counts most, even at the price of leaving other areas inactive," OWI said.

The review declared that our Allies thus far have carried most of the load "and we have not given them as much help as we had led them to expect." This was due partly to enemy victories, the review added, but "by and large, we have not been producing war material to the maximum of available capacity and have not been getting that material to the fighting fronts in the time and in the volume that will be needed to win."

Decisive Year of War

"We are deep in what may be the decisive year of the war," the review continued. "But 1942 will be the decisive year only if our enemies do not succeed in inflicting crippling blows on our Allies before the year is out."

The situation at home likewise is a job done "pretty well but not well enough," OWI asserted.

Finds Jap Invasion 'Dangerous'

Gandhi Calls for Greatest Civil Disobedience Uprising

By Preston Grover
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bombay, Aug. 7.—In the bizarre setting of a canvas pavilion fitted with electric fans and a public-address system, Mohandas K. Gandhi called on his Nationalist followers today to rise with him in an unprecedented mass campaign of civil disobedience aimed at driving the British out of power in all India.

"Our movements for freedom in the past will become insignificant compared with the forthcoming movement," the frail little ascetic orator declared as he sat motionless, bare above the waist, his bare legs crossed on a couch before which a microphone had been adjusted.

"Now is the occasion when we will have to rise."

Yet with his dramatic summons to action he coupled warnings that the campaign must be passive, that he would not tolerate violence, and that Japanese invasion would be "a dangerous thing—you must remove it from your minds."

Ten thousand spectators heard him in a hush so deep that the hum of the electric fans was clearly audible throughout his address.

The occasion was the opening of an All-India Congress Party session called to sanction a resolution which will make Gandhi the nonviolent generalissimo of the independence drive. Approval, perhaps tomorrow, is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The committee adjourned until

Gandhi 'Death Fast' Opposed by Committee

London, Aug. 7 (AP).—A Reuters dispatch tonight said Mohandas K. Gandhi consulted the members of the working committee of the All Indian Congress as to whether they would approve his "fast unto death" if it became necessary.

Most of the members advised against it, but eventually left the decision to the Indian leader himself.

Germans' Southern Claw Is 160 Miles Below Rostov; Foe Closer to Stalingrad

Strategists Confer

URGENT CONFERENCE on means to save Russia now as an essential to winning the war, reported in Moscow. Page 2.

Vital River Crossed

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Saturday), Aug. 8.—German armies plunging deeper into the Caucasus have driven to the Armavir area within 60 miles of the Maikop oil fields while other Nazi forces drew closer toward the threatened Volga city of Stalingrad, the Russians announced officially today.

Indicating that the Nazi masses had stormed across the vital Kuban River in the western Caucasus, the midnight communique reported that fierce engagements were being fought in the Armavir area and to the south of Kushchevka.

Armavir is 160 miles south of Rostov on the Rostov-Baku railroad. It is almost on the Kuban River, slightly to the west of that waterway.

Reds Admit Retreat

The midnight report told of the new reverse in the Caucasus in these terse phrases:

"In the area south of Belaya Glina our troops have been waging defensive battles for several days against advancing German Fascist troops. After bloody battles against superior enemy forces our troops retreated to a new defense line in the direction of Armavir."

The violent battles of the Don bend, where some of the biggest tank engagements of the war were being fought, continued without letup.

The communique declared several German attacks were repulsed in the Kletskaya area, some 75 miles northwest of Stalingrad. One guard unit alone was said to have hurled back 17 enemy tank attacks and destroyed more than 100 tanks.

Wedge Near Stalingrad

But, the Russians acknowledged, the Germans had pushed a wedge north to Kotelnikovski closer to Stalingrad. Just how far this German threat carried toward the city of the Volga named for Joseph Stalin was not disclosed. Kotelnikovski is 95 miles southwest of Stalingrad and below the Don River.

In that battle the Germans were reported hurling tanks and automatic riflemen into the wedge their power had driven into the Soviet defenses.

The Soviet troops pressing the Germans in the Voronezh sector at the northern end of the front were reported to have forced a crossing of the Upper Don River and occupied two large populated places.

Army Bomber Explodes in Air Over Virginia

Two Ferry Pilots Die As Plane Crashes Near Charlottesville

Two civilian ferry pilots of the Air Transport Command were killed yesterday afternoon when a two-motor Army bomber exploded in midair and crashed to earth about 12 miles east of Charlottesville, Va.

They were identified as Walter R. Pinnell, 26, and Kenneth G. Clemens, 37, both of Tennessee, who were on what the press relations section of the Army Air Forces here described as "a routine flight to Nashville, Tenn." The flight's point of origin was not divulged.

The Army Air Forces said so far as it knew Pinnell and Clemens were the only occupants of the ship. Earlier reports from the scene of the crash said the torsos of two men had been found in the plane wreckage, but that portions of bodies scattered over three acres of ground at the scene of the crash had led to speculation that four and possibly five men had been aboard the ill-fated craft.

Raid Spotter Eyewitness

An eyewitness of the crash was Herman F. Nickels, an air raid spotter of The Oaks, at Keswick, who said he heard a loud explosion early in the afternoon and, on looking out of a window at his home, saw the plane enveloped in flames.

Before the crash, he said, fire destroyed one of the plane's wings. The ship plowed through a strip of woods and landed in an open field on the farm of Mrs. Kate Dabney, which is located about midway between Keswick, in Albemarle Coun-

Tokyo Radio Hints Attack On Russia

Relays Editorials Implying Japs May Open New Front

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 7.—The Tokyo radio tonight broadcast Japanese editorial comment containing the first hints from there that Japan herself might open a second front with an attack on Siberia.

The broadcast noted reports of the arrival in Moscow of Allied representatives and said the moves in the Russian capital were "indicative of further Anglo-American machinations aimed to open up a second front to save the Soviet Union from collapse."

The Japanese press, the radio added, pointed out that formation of a second front was not necessarily restricted to Europe or Western Asia or Africa.

The radio quoted the newspaper Chugai as warning that this point should be borne in mind by Japan "and that with the approach of the decisive struggle between Germany and the Soviet Union Japan should be prepared even more fully for ultimate victory."

There have been various reports, particularly from Chinese quarters, that Japan had massed a large army in Eastern Asia for an attack on Siberia.

'Twould Be Fine to Scrap Some Statues—but Which Ones?

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

The President cited some dry statistics yesterday to touch off again the sentimental subject of using some of America's less attractive monuments along with the ornamental cannon as salvage scrap for war purposes. He would replace these relics with more modern mementoes in a happier season.

Nobody could immediately be found who was willing to say which statues. The cannon could be handled more easily. But how many cannon and other war relics exist nobody here seemed to know. The President said that War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson wants some 17 million tons of scrap iron and steel for next year's output. He thought some statues would be better guns than art.

Already Navy yards have been directed to deliver over their ornamental cannon and relics, he announced. This, of course, is public property. To reach into a community and request the bronze face and girth of the town's own general, probably erected at community expense, is more ticklish. There, the Government would rely upon the townsmen's patriotic and artistic instincts.

The National Park Service said it had no idea offhand how much salvage reposes in such places as Gettysburg, Antietam, Yorktown, and in all the other one-time battlefields, as memorials. Such a count is kept locally, but the sheer weight of such metal was believed to be enormous. The President wouldn't say which statues, either. The better battlefields are black with the weather-beaten bronze.

One authority on the good and poor in monuments said: "This thing is liable to produce more noise than bullets."

But from the suggestion, with the weight of the White House behind it, may come a veritable mountain of metal. An American Legion of-

Rubber Probers Meet in Park, Reluctantly Adjourn to Hotel

President Roosevelt's special rubber investigating committee held its first meeting yesterday—on a couple of park benches in Lafayette Square.

Led there by the committee chairman, Bernard M. Baruch, who calls the spot his "office," the other two members of the committee, Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, and Dr. Karl Compton, pfesident of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and a few assistants settled down among the park idlers and the feeders of pigeons to make a preliminary examination of one of the world's knottiest problems.

There in the fresh air and under direct sunshine, which induced the two college presidents to doff their coats, the process of laying out the work went on apace until newspapermen spotted them and a crowd began to collect. Privacy being impossible after that, Baruch led his associates back to a nearby hotel in seeming sorrow that he might have to give up his al fresco "office" for something a lot stuffier. He intimated they would not try it again.

The "office" is at the same spot where in the early spring, Baruch, as an elder statesman who had been through it all before, counseled Leon Henderson on inflation control, before Henderson was made head of the Office of Price Control. It is directly across from the White House and hard by the hobby-horse statue of Gen. Andrew Jackson, who never had to worry about rubber or inflation controls in fighting his wars.

Something of a tribute was paid the membership of the special committee by sponsors of the just-vetoed independent rubber agency bill when they declared yesterday that they did not expect an attempt to be made to override the veto, if the President's committee gets "action." Congressional rules allow 60 days after a veto for a measure to be taken up and voted on again.

3 Swedish Ships Leave for Greece With Mercy Cargo

Montreal, Aug. 7 (AP).—Assured a safe passage by the Axis governments, three Swedish ships loaded with goods for the relief of Greece left this port today on a mercy voyage with last minute additions to their cargoes.

Emergency shipments of ether and chloroform were added when authorities here learned patients in Axis-occupied Greece have to undergo major surgial operations without anesthetics.

Along with other medical and surgical supplies, the ships carry 15,000 tons of Canadian grain and a fleet of 10 trucks to distribute the goods under the direction of the International Red Cross.

Other shipments are expected to follow.

British Acknowledge Loss of Six Planes; Nazis Raid England

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 7.—The R. A. F. sent a strong force of bombers through thick weather to the Ruhr Valley for the third successive night last night, blasting the big industrial center and inland river port of Duisburg and other points.

The air ministry acknowledged that six planes were missing after these attacks and other raids on Nazi airdrmes in the Low Countries, but did not disclose the number of participating planes. However, a British source said that in the days before the 1000-bomber raids last night's force would have been regarded as "a whopper."

The German high command admitted there had been material damage to buildings and said the raids had caused some casualties in residential quarters in several towns. It claimed seven British bombers were shot down.

The Luftwaffe sent only a small force against Britain in attacks on Scotland and East Anglia last night, and this afternoon a few raiders dropped bombs in three places in the southwest of England causing a small number of casualties.

German raiders were reported to have dropped fire bombs on a northeast coast tonight, a few hours after a lone raider flew low over the northeast coast of Scotland and dropped a stick of bombs which killed three men and injured ten seriously.

Baltimore Pilot Tells Of Raids on Cologne

Baltimore, Aug. 7 (AP).—British plane followed British plane so closely during the R. A. F.'s mass raid in Cologne in late may that the pilots' chief concern was to avoid bumping into each other. R. A. F. Flight Sergt. Michael Stein Jacobs of Baltimore told his wife in a letter today.

"Over the target we weren't worried about the defenses so much as bumping into other aircraft," he wrote.

"... everywhere you looked there were planes. It seemed like one big formation.

"This was the conversation over the 'intercom' (the plane's intercommunication system), especially from the rear gunner: 'Hello, Captain, two Wellingtons on the starboard, one Halifax just above, and I think there's a Sterling right behind.'"

Mrs. Jacobs also received a cablegram from her husband after another of the R. A. F.'s great raids on Germany, saying simply:

"Dropped a big one on Hamburg for you."

tomorrow without any action on the resolution.

The Congress Party's working committee just prior to the opening today authorized its president, as soon as the resolution is indorsed to appeal to President Roosevelt, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of China and Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassador to Britain, to support the demand that Great Britain grant India independence immediately.

Britain's previous offers of dominion status after the war is over have been rejected, not only by the All-India Congress Party, but by other major factions in the vast diversity of religions and politics among India's nearly 400 million people.

Differences Still Apparent

Those diversities were evident still today, with leaders of various hues of opinion suggesting one thing and another as a "solution" to the perennial Indian problem, now sharpened by the war.

Addressing the 360 Congress Party delegates and the thousands of others who had paid up to 100 rupees each for places inside the canvas-walled field, Gandhi declared this afternoon that he did not want to be "the instrument of Russia's defeat, nor of China's," remarking:

"If that happened, I would hate myself."

He urged Indian independence as an essential to Indian cooperation in the war against the Axis.

"We shall get our freedom by fighting. It cannot fall from the skies.

'Greater Friend of British'

"I know full well that the British will have to give us our freedom when we have made sufficient sacrifice and proved our strength.

"We must remove hatred for the British from our hearts. At least in my heart there is no such hatred.

"As a matter of fact I am a greater friend of the British now than I ever was," he added. "My friendship demands that I make them aware of their mistakes."

Despite his mention of fighting, he cautioned:

"It may be that in a moment of anger they (the British) might do things that might provoke you.

"Nevertheless, you should not resort to violence. Put violence to shame."

Then this cryptic utterance.

"When such things happen, you may take it that you will not find me alive, wherever I may be. Their blood will be on your head. If you don't understand this it will be better if you reject the resolution.

Japs Already Fighting Reds —Magnuson

By The Associated Press

Seattle, Aug. 7.—"Japan already is at war with Russia and it is common knowledge in Washington, D. C., that the Japs have already sunk several Russian ships in the Pacific," Representative Warren G. Magnuson (Democrat) of Washington, a member of the Naval Affairs Committee, said today.

"The last was sunk very recently," he said. "They are justifying their action on the ground that the Russians were carrying American materials."

"War between Japan and Russia started," he told interviewers, "when the Japs began strengthening their forces in Manchuria, and when they seized Attu and Kiska Islands in the Aleutians."

Japs Fear More Raids

Copyright by Chicago Sun

A gnawing fear of large-scale bombings of Tokyo and her "tinder box" cities probably is restraining Japan from attacking Siberia, military spokesmen said here yesterday.

They added, however, that the entire Manchukuo-Siberian border might flame into war at almost any time if Japan comes to feel the risk is worth it, or if Hitler insists strongly enough that a second front be opened on Russia's back door.

Information received in military quarters in this country places the Japanese strength in Manchukuo at 25 divisions, or approximately 350,000 men.

Japs Lose Heavily in Aleutians

Santa Monica, Calif., Aug. 7 (AP).—Japanese occupation of Attu and Kiska in the Aleutian Islands has been costly to the invaders, Artemus L. Gates, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, told a press conference today, and it will be even more costly.

Gates said:

"By being in the Aleutian Islands the Japanese are that much nearer to our shores and naturally to the extent of those miles our danger is greater."

Hepburn Sees Two-Ocean Attack

Fergus, Ontario, Aug. 7 (AP).—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario, who recently predicted an imminent Japanese bombing of the American mainland, declared today: "I believe we are going to have an attack on the Atlantic Coast very soon, and a two-ocean attack in the near future."

Axis Troops Held Ready

Ankara, Turkey, Aug. 7 (AP).—An authoritative source who would not be identified said today the Germans, awaiting signs of a second front, were holding between 150,000 and 180,000 Italian and Nazi mechanized troops in readiness in Greece instead of sending them to Africa.

If the second Allied front is not opened by the middle of September, this source said, the men undoubtedly will go to Africa, their original destination.

Mihailovich Wants Second Front

"Somewhere in Yugoslavia," Aug. 7 (INS).—Gen. Dragoljub "Draja" Mihailovich, commander in chief of the Yugoslav army, has sent word to a high official of the Yugoslav government in London urging that a second front in Europe be opened in Yugoslavia.

"Conditions for a second front in Europe are very favorable," General Mihailovich said, "because a second front has existed for more than a year that is pinning down more than 30 Axis divisions.

"This second front is in the heart of Yugoslavia, where we are conducting an incessant guerrila campaign immobilizing permanently in Yugoslavia 17 Italian, 7 Bulgarian, 4 German and 6 Hungarian divisions."

War Sidelights

De Gaulle Visits Troops In Africa

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 7.—Fighting French headquarters announced today that General De Gaulle had arrived in Cairo to inspect his troops in Egypt, Syria and French Equatorial Africa.

Women Fire-Watchers

London, Aug. 7 (AP).—Compulsory fire-watching by women 20 to 45 years old was introduced today with a statement by Home Secretary Herbert Morrison that the measure was taken "on the assumption that the weight of Luftwaffe raids will increase" and "because of the seriousness of the man power situation." Millions of women will be affected, he said.

Polish Units Move

Cairo, Aug. 7 (AP).—New contingents of the Polish army were reported here today to be on their way to the middle east from Rusia, equipped with British and American weapons.

They were expected to reinforce the Polish brigade which already has played a part in campaigns in this area for the past two years.

So far there are 30,000 Poles serving in their own army in the eastern Mediterranean. In addition, some 10,000 Polish civilians are in this area, including many women who have joined Polish Women's auxiliary units.

Congress, many of whom reside in the territory where this newspaper circulates most widely.

"Such an investigation, with all the attendant leaks of information and half truths to friendly newspapers can easily be dragged out until the November election. If the Tribune's patriotism can be impugned in the minds of the electors, the Administration's campaign to retain control of Congress will be helped immeasurably.

"Stanley Johnston, the war correspondent who wrote the epic series on the Battle of the Coral Sea, furnished the Tribune with the story on which the Navy and Department of Justice are basing their grand jury investigation.

"Johnston, who has been recommended for a bravery citation for his part in the Coral Sea engagement, made up an estimate of the size and strength of the Japanese armada the Navy defeated west of Midway Island. It was this article, published in the Tribune on June 7, that is being used by Attorney General Biddle in ordering a Federal Grand Jury in Chicago to go after the Tribune.

"That Washington would attack the Tribune and other newspapers which have demanded an all-out war effort and the removal of high officials who have been fumbling the ball at home came as no surprise. The political plot has been brewing for months."

There was no immediate comment either from the Daily News or the Times-Herald. Both newspapers said they published the Tribune's story.

Rommel Counts On Small Boats For Gas, Bullets

By Larry Allen

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Eastern Mediterranean Fleet, Aug. 7.—Nazi Marshall Erwin Rommel is counting on speedy motor torpedo boats and barges to bring what he needs quickly: gasoline and ammunition.

The sudden appearance of increasing numbers of these small craft in the vicinity of Matruh and Sidi Barrani indicates he is hoping they can keep his advanced lines at El Alamein supplied while Axis cargo ships escorted by warships pour materials and men into Tobruk and Bengasi.

Saves Long Overland Haul

Whatever the enemy gets in by speedboat to Matruh and Sidi Barrani saves just that much from the long overland haul through sandstorms and blistering heat. That is why Rommel has clung to these two small, shallow-water ports despite smashing bombardments by the British fleet and heavy raids by American and British planes.

British naval guns made Matruh virtually useless for large ships, while only small craft were able to get into Sidi Barrani even under the best of conditions.

Nevertheless, air reconnaissance shows there has been a constant line of barges and E-boats operating about these ports.

Planes Attack Tobruk

Cairo, Aug. 7 (AP).—United States Army Air Force bombers "effectively attacked" shipping and the harbor at Tobruk yesterday evening, the R. A. F. Middle East news service reported today. Details were not given.

An earlier British communique said they set a large fire.

The American attack followed a heavy raid on Tobruk the previous night by R. A. F. bombers, which started fires in the dock area and were believed to have hit two ships.

There was little other land or air activity on the Egyptian battlefront, today's British communique said.

Officer Killed In Plane Crash

Wilmington, N. C., Aug. 7 (AP).—Lieut. Elmer A. Sommerfield, 24-year-old Army Air Corps officer from Benton Harbor, Mich., was killed today when his plane crashed and burned on a take-off at Camp Davis.

Allies Rain Heavy Bombs On Jap Bases

By the United Press

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia (Saturday), Aug. 8.—Allied bombers, using monster 2000-pound bombs for the first time in the southwest Pacific, have heavily blasted the Japanese bases of Lae, New Guinea, and Rabaul, New Britain Island, shooting down seven Japanese Zero fighters in the course of the latter attack, a United Nations communique revealed today.

In the raid on Rabaul, first since July 17, the bombers were reported to have dropped 15 tons of bombs on the enemy base controlling the approaches to New Guinea and the Coral Sea.

The attacking force was made up of heavy bombers which disdained the perils of daylight to carry out the raid and accounted for seven Japanese fighters which attempted to intercept them.

Rabaul is on the northeastern tip of New Britain, some 530 miles northeast of the great Allied base at Port Moresby, New Guinea. It has been pounded many times since the Japs occupied it in their sweep southward earlier this year but yesterday the Allied airmen lashed out against it with greater fury than ever.

Allied medium bombers also raided the enemy base at Lae, New Guinea, twice on Friday, one time in darkness, directly hitting the airfield runway with 2000-pound bombs, the communique said.

"At Rabaul, against heavy anti-aircraft fire and fighter interception, Allied heavy bombers successfully struck the Vunakanau airdrome," it said. "Fifteen bombs hit the target area. Twenty Zero fighters engaged our formation. Seven enemy fighters were shot down in combat and others were damaged. One of our planes is missing. We sustained minor damage and some casualties in others."

Meanwhile Gen. Douglas MacArthur was described by Norman Stockton, war correspondent of the Melbourne Herald, as an "offensive-minded" leader who "has been placed in the position where apparently he cannot take the offensive."

"The United States has considered that this country (Australia), in the wider strategy of global war, must play a secondary role for the balance of 1942—perhaps longer," Stockton asserted.

At the same time an authoritative source declared that the greatest part of Australian defense forces are Australian, not American, and that both the Australian and American public have been somewhat confused concerning the real facts of the situation.

American equipment which has been sent to Australia is a "trickle" which could be replaced by three days of United States war production, he said, adding that in the main Australia was carrying her own load.

Stockton said that "by sacrificing the initiative which material aid would have permitted we have lost Gona, Tulagi and Kieta, and the Japanese are constantly nibbling at other islands and other potential bases."

British Get Lighter, More Accurate Rifle

London, Aug. 7 (AP).—The British army is being equipped with a new rifle, lighter and more accurate than the old model.

This was disclosed today when King George VI inspected eastern command troops. The King examined one of the rifles and talked to the crack shot of a famous regiment who said the rifle "is so accurate that when I first handled it, it seemed as though I could not miss."

Nazis Practice Defense

London, Aug. 7 (AP).—German troops have completed maneuvers in the interior of Holland in the course of which special attention was given to defense against parachute troops, it was reported today.

Kaiser Given 'Go' On Cargo Planes

these planes will be built by Glenn Martin.

In another development yesterday in the thrilling story of a man who came to Washington with an idea and inexhaustible energy and in a little more than a week has convinced Government officials that he can build a new air fleet, officials in the WPB iron and steel branch said they were willing to recommend that Kaiser be allowed to expand his California steel plant which is scheduled to go into production early in 1943.

Has Asked for Steel

Kaiser has asked WPB to allocate to him a little more than 31,000 tons of steel, which would enable him so to enlarge his steel-making facilities as to expand production by 600,000 tons of ingot steel and 458,000 tons of finished steel. Pending study of detailed plans of the expansion project and determination of whether the expanded facilities represented a balanced production program and whether there would be adequate supplies of iron ore and coke to keep the larger plant running, iron and steel branch officials said they could not give a final answer on the project.

They added, however, that Kaiser's planning heretofore has been of a high order and they expected that they would recommend approval to WPB.

Kaiser last night was confident he would be able to find the necessary steel, steel alloys, aluminum and magnesium. Chrome for alloying steel will be in production soon, he said. Nickel, another necessary alloy, he also expects to find.

Kaiser declared that he would go outside WPB allocations for his material. He said he has had geologists hunting material sources for months and disclosed that the Interior Department has promised to put its mining and other experts to work for him.

"You will remember that I said we would put the United States to work," Kaiser declared. "We might just as well start out with the Government."

Kaiser said he would start putting his plane-making organization together at once. He said it would be an organization capable of doing the work.

"It is only through work, more work and still more work, that this country can win the war," he said.

Chennault Finds U. S. Planes Better Than New Zeros

Chungking, Aug. 7 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, Commander of the U. S. Army Air Force in China, said today the new Zeros, of which 15 have been shot down thus far over Hengyang, "are far better than the old ones, but inferior to our planes, and it will take at least two years before the Japs are able to construct anything equaling our newest."

U. S., British Strategists Confer Upon Means to Save Russia

French, Norwegian Military Aides Also At Kremlin Parley

By E. C. Daniel, Jr.

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 7.—Urgent conferences on means to save Russia now as an essential to winning of the war were reported in session at Moscow today among strategists and diplomats of the United Nations. This information came from sources whose identity could not be disclosed.

Known to be conferring with Russian militarists in the Kremlin were:

Admiral William H. Standley, American Ambassador to Russia, who flew from the alternate capital at Kuibyshev;

Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley of the United States Air Forces, who flew to Moscow from the United States with a personal message from President Roosevelt to Premier Joseph Stalin;

Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, British Ambassador to Russian who flew from Kuibyshev to the Kremlin;

Roger Garreau, head of the fighting French Mission to Russia;

Maj. Gen. William Steffens, Norwegian military attache to Kuibyshev.

Others May Be Present

The established presence of these conferees suggested that others representing their own and other United Nations were in Moscow to help determine how to relieve the pressure on the Red armies defending the Caucasus oil and the Volga lifeline of supply.

Indeed, Axis radio broadcasts of the last several days have rumored that Prime Minister Churchill has been in Moscow along with William C. Bullitt, special envoy of President Roosevelt.

Axis sources several days ago put out the rumor that Premier Stalin had gone to the southern front to direct the defense of the Caucasus and his namesake city, Stalingrad. It was said in Moscow today that General Bradley had not yet had the opportunity to deliver Mr. Roosevelt's message to Stalin.

Another Axis broadcast launched the report that Laurence A. Steinhardt, former United States Ambassador to Russia and now the American envoy to Turkey, had gone to Moscow from Ankara, but Moscow dispatches said he was not there and not expected.

Concerns Arms Supply

The purpose of Bradley's mission was given in a Russian communique as "a discussion with the appropriate Soviet authorities of practical questions connected with the supply of arms and war materials to the U. S. S. R. from the United States."

British official sources maintained a fast silence on the Moscow conferences except to disclose that their ambassador was in on them.

Among the subjects likely to be under discussion in Moscow were the "second front" and the supply of implements for Russian military use against the Germans all along the eastern front.

The supply lines are threatened perilously in the south and no less urgently in the north where materiel moves to Murmansk and Archangel along the warship-and plane-infested frigid routes.

Nazis Nearer Their Objectives

REDS SUFFER NEW REVERSES IN CAUCASUS—Plunging deeper into the Caucasus, German armies have driven to the Armavir area (1) within 60 miles of the Maikop oil fields. relieve the pressure on the south by the action around Voronezh.

At sea, the Russians said, Red fleet warships operating in the Baltic sank an enemy transport of 10,000 tons. No details on this feat were given.

But with all the Russian resistance, bolstered now by reserves, the penetration into the Caucasus in the Armavir region was the deepest thus far reported by the Soviets in that important sector.

(German military sources yesterday said the Nazis have captured Amavir.)

Germans Claim Gains

The fresh reserves apparently were checking the superior Nazi forces in all save the area below Glina, through which the German tanks have plunged toward Armavir and the Maikop oil fields.

(The Germans asserted they were within 30 miles of Maikop; that they were approaching Krasnodar on the Kuban River, 150 miles southwest of Rostov; and had stormed the rail junction of Timashevskaya, 60 miles north of Krasnodar.

(The Germans said they were "engaged in a struggle with newly arrived enemy forces" between the Don and Sal Rivers—the Kotelnikovski zone southwest of Stalingrad. Russian counterattacks with large forces of tanks—mentioned for the first time in the Caucasus—were acknowledged here, and the Germans claimed no advance. Other Russian attacks were acknowledged in the Don bend; around Rzhev, northwest of Moscow; and in the extreme north. A Russian division was declared annihilated in the Western Caucasus.)

The stoutness of the Russian defenses was attested in yesterday's mid-day communique which listed the destruction of 41 tanks plus hundreds of troops.

American Bombers Destroy 10 Jap Planes Near Canton

By the United Press

Chungking, Aug. 7.—United States Army headquarters announced today that American bombers wiped out at least ten Japanese planes on an airdrome near Canton yesterday, while the Chinese high command reported the killing of more than 1000 Jap soldiers in Kiangsi Province and north of Hankow, where a munitions train was blown up.

The bombers, escorted by 23 pursuit group fighter planes, also scored numerous hits on runways of the raided Japanese airfield, located at Tienho, a communique said. The Americans took the enemy completely by surprise, as they did in destroying several planes on the White Cloud airdrome at Canton on July 4 and in blasting at 50 to 60 planes caught massed on the same field July 13.

All American aircraft returned safely, the communique added. The bases were not revealed, but there are American planes at Hengyang, 260 miles north of Canton. Others are understood to be at Kweilin, capital of Kwangsi Province, 225 miles northwest of Canton.

Observers suggested that the raid was in retaliation for the attack in which the Japanese lost four of their improved Zero fighter planes over Hengyang on Wednesday.

Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the United States Air Force in China, said the Japanese were "making an all-out effort to drive the United States Air Forces in Central China from their bases, but they'll run their head against an unbreakable wall."

In addition to using their new planes, he said, they were assigning "their best pilots, who have been specially trained for combat with the Americans, for their suicide raids against Hengyang."

He denounced as "lies" the Japanese claims to have bombed Chungking, Kunming and Kweilin on Wednesday, for on that day he "visited two of these cities, and there were no Jap planes within many miles."

A Chinese war communique reported that Chinese troops storming Linchwan, American-bombed highway center in Kiangsi, 50 miles southeast of Nanchang, killed 500 Japanese soldiers at Wulitang, a little more than a mile south of Linchwan, in fighting which see-sawed back and forth from Monday to Wednesday. The village was in Chinese hands for the sixth time in the three days when the battle died down.

Bloody fighting was going on in the Eastern and Northwestern suburbs of Linchwan.

In the suburbs of Tunghsiang, 28 miles northeast of Linchwan, on the Hangchow-Nanchang Railway, the Chinese have killed about 300 Japanese in an attack which has continued since Monday.

Truman Probers Urge WPB to Curb 'Big Steel' Influence in Organization

Senator Asks Strict Metal Quota System

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

War Production Board action to clip the power of "big steel" representatives in its organization, and to set up a strict quota system for distributing steel, were urged by leaders of the Senate Defense Investigating Committee last night as immediate steps for speeding the war effort.

Calling steel the "backbone" of America's war program, Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the committee, declared that the WPB "should take effective steps to reduce the influence of the representatives of the largest steel producers in its iron and steel branch."

Points to Bewilderment

Truman, speaking over station WJSV, said that under the present distribution system the Government does not know "where and how" a considerable portion of the steel is used. And "we hope the WPB will set up a strict plan of quotas or allocations." He said it was "encouraging" that Reese Taylor, chief of the iron and steel branch, was urging this system to the WPB.

Senator Kilgore (Democrat), of West Virginia, a committee member, joined in calling for a system of direct allocations of steel orders and said that the Nation's entire steel industry should be integrated to "use what we have" in the way of small steel plants.

Hearings End Second Day

These proposals were advanced after a second day of Truman committee hearings in which Committee Counsel Hugh Fulton pressed for information to show that the big steel companies, through advisers and dollar-a-year men in WPB, representing big steel interests, had dominated the planning of America's steel expansion program to the benefit of the largest steel firms.

Key War Agencies Criticized

Truman, in his speech, and Fulton, in examination of witnesses, attributed present shortages of steel in part both to opposition of steel interests against expanding production, and to failure of key war agencies to estimate their war needs correctly.

Truman said:

"Instead of increasing facilities, the steel magnates, fearful that their profits after the war would be lessened by competition of new steel-making facilities, insisted that there could be no shortage and supported their position by referring to the smallness of the orders which the War and Navy Departments estimated they could make in the future.

"A considerable portion of the blame for this situation must rest on the War and Navy Departments for their absolute failure during peacetime to work out any worthwhile estimates of what they would need in wartime."

Small Firm Get Puny Contract

Kilgore's plan for integrating all steel-making facilities was advanced as John F. Budke, vice president of the Parkersburg Iron & Steel Co., testified that his firm, one of the oldest sheet mills in the country, and able to turn out 2500 tons of steel products a month for war purposes, had received Government orders for but 820 tons since the first of this year.

Budke said that while the larger continuous-operation mills could roll sheets $10 to $12 a ton cheaper than his firm, "we do not know" that this amount "diminishes the price at which these mills sell sheets to the Government." He said his firm would be willing to sell sheets at the same price as the continuous mills, and "will be content to take an infinitely smaller profit."

Rolland C. Allen, deputy chief of the iron and steel branch, under questioning by Fulton, said that last February and March, at his suggestion, a committee of steel industry representatives had been asked to work out a building schedule that would bring order into the steel expansion program.

Expansion Deferred

Two months later, Allen said, the order came through to "defer" all projects in the expansion program which could not be completed by July 1, 1943. He explained that the clearance committee of the iron and steel branch, with others of its employes, and representatives of the Army and Navy Munitions Board, was given the job of deciding what projects could not be completed.

Members of the first committee to plan the program, it was testified, were employes of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, Inland Steel, and Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. Of these five, Allen said, Bethlehem and Republic were later ordered to defer some of their expansion, the other three were allowed to continue while a number of smaller companies were required to defer all their projected expansion.

Allen said that he had appointed the important clearance committee which goes over all new projects, and on a question by Fulton, said "it never entered my mind" to appoint representatives of small steel companies to this group. He added that they were appointed for their value to the work of the committee, and that he regarded them "as individuals" who were employed by the Government to represent its best interests.

$75-Per-Room Limit Puts Crimp in Dorm Furnishing

Curtains and hassocks for dormitories about to be constructed for 15,000 Government girls were on the "definitely uncertain" list yesterday as officials strove to meet a $75-per-room furnishing limit.

More than 15,000 lamps have been ordered, based on the rule of one to a girl and several for lounges. But bids for other articles are still being formulated. The lamps had to be bargained for, at a price not disclosed, so that they could be assembled before a priorities freeze date of August 15.

The dormitories to be built under a special Lanham Act grant, will be in downtown Washington park areas, and in Arlington, Va., and Suitland, Md., where large groups of Government workers are concentrated.

The Public Buildings Administration is in charge of construction with Gladys Miller, decorating and home designing expert, in charge of furnishings. Miss Miller had hoped to use hassocks for chairs in some instances, to give the dormitories more "style," and her original plans called for bright curtains lined for blackouts.

Meanwhile, the FHA reported yesterday that very few Washingtonians are asking for special loans from the Federal Housing Authority to remodel and enlarge their homes to permit them to take in warworkers. In some parts of the country, the FHA reported, many homeowners are asking for such loans.

During the first six months of the year, however, 828 loans for amounts totalling $371,125 were granted District of Columbia residents for minor repairs and remodelling projects—and some of this may benefit warworkers. Loans for the same period last year amounted to $555,865, but the rules were less stringent then.

The FHA yesterday called attention to the fact that while some of their activities have been lessened by the new regulation governing installment paying, repairs and remodelling designed to conserve fuel are exempt from the provisions. Included in these would be requests for loans to convert oil burners to coal furnace burners, and for insulation to cut down the amount of heat needed.

Four More Are Appointed To Key Posts With WAVES

The Navy Department announced yesterday that Lieut. Comdr. Mildred H. McAfee, director of the WAVES, had appointed Elizabeth Bolard Crandall to be dean of women at the WAVE officer training school at Smith College.

Miss Crandall, 36-year-old graduate of Western Reserve University and assistant dean of Leland Stanford University, has been commissioned a lieutenant. She will report to the Bureau of Naval Personnel August 17 for work in connection with the Smith College program.

Three other WAVE appointments were announced yesterday. Lieut. (j. g.) Virginia Carlin, 32 of New York City, and Ensign Dorothy Foster of Atlanta will be sworn in today as assistants to ommander McAfee. The former is a graduate of Wellesley College and the latter of Randolph-Macon College. Both were employed by retail stores when appointed.

Mrs. Bernice Drake Lill, registrar of Sweet Briar College, Va., was commissioned lieutenant and named recruiting officer of the Richmond area.

Knox Orders Truman Charge Probe

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

A "very careful investigation" of the charges made by Senator Harry S. Truman against the Bureau of Ships for its treatment of Higgins Industries of New Orleans has been ordered by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, Truman (Democrat) of Missouri announced yesterday.

Knox informed the Senator by letter that he is "very seriously concerned" about the charges made against the bureau and said he is having a probe made of "the entire matter."

Knox said that when the investigation is completed, he wants to discuss it with Truman. The latter said he will be given an opportunity to do so.

Tydings to Ask Compulsory Job Transfers

Mandatory transfers of Government personnel from nonessential to war agencies, either through congressional action or a congressional demand for executive action, yesterday appeared to be due in the near future.

Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland, chairman of a special Senate subcommittee which investigated the Government's wartime efficiency, disclosed that he intends to call for such transfers soon, following up recommendaions made by his committee.

He said he is now drafting legislation which would authorize the switching of employes, with or without their consent. His committee's report had urged this utilization of nonessential personnel here, but the group was told by the Civil Service Commission that the commission had no power to force the transfers if workers did not want to leave.

His bill would transfer the workers at a salary increase, and would allow them to go back to their old jobs after the war.

In the meantime, he said that he was studying the Man-Power Act to make sure that the President did not already have sufficient authority to effect the transfers.

If the necessary power is already there, he asserted, he will ask on the floor that it be utilized; if it is not, he will introduce his bill to create it.

In its report, his committee cited long lists of bureaus and agencies which would be curtailed or completely eliminated, freeing funds and personnel for use in the vital war agencies. It was further pointed out that many workers could be sent from the peacetime bureaus without causing any drastic curtailment, if adequate civil service machinery were set up.

Investigation Of ADA Starts Next Week

A congressional investigation of the Alley Dwelling Authority, asked several months ago by the ADA itself, will get under way next week, Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland promised yesterday.

Tydings is chairman of a special Senate District Subcommittee appointed to conduct the probe.

He announced that he would call a meeting of the group as soon as possible next week to map out the investigation, with the intention of proceeding on it immediately.

Serving on the committee with him are Senators McCarran, Hughes, Burton and Capper.

John Ihlder, ADA chief, requested that his agency be examined by the committee after the Senate had eliminated from the ADA appropriation a 12-million-dollar revolving fund on which it had previously operated.

In the meantime, Renah F. Camalier, committee counsel, is gathering data on various ADA functions and projects in an effort to have all preliminary work taken care of when the investigation is finally launched.

OPA to Issue Universal Book to Cover All Future Rationing

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The Office of Price Administration yesterday disclosed plans to place a universal ration book in the hands of every American to enable OPA to start new rationing programs in a hurry if the need arises.

Paul M. O'Leary, deputy administrator in charge of rationing, said proofs of a sample universal book are being prepared now by the Government Printing Office.

"If it can be made workable, we would have in our hands an instrument that would enable us to start a rationing program almost overnight, instead of having to take six to ten weeks as in the past when we have had to let the emergencies wait while we got scores of millions of coupon books printed," O'Leary said.

O'Leary took pains to deny rumors that OPA is going to ration certain specific commodities, but pointed out that rationing machinery is being planned for many commodities which do not require rationing at present.

Later, in a speech at Richmond, Va., O'Leary said OPA is preparing to "ration a number of important commodities if and when we are asked to do so."

He singled out fuel oil on the Eastern Seaboard as a "very likely subject for rationing in the not distant future," pointed out that OPA plans being made because of the Eastern oil shortage were "now no secret." However, it was understood that fuel oil would probably not be rationed through the proposed "universal" book because the shortage is confined to the East, and because all Eastern families do not use oil for heating purposes.

"In this respect we are like the fire department," he said. "It gets its firefighting equipment ahead of time so when the alarm sounds, they don't have to go shopping for a fire engine in order to go to the fire."

Price Administrator Leon Henderson, in protesting congressional action reducing OPA's appropriation, has stated that the fund cut imperilled a number of rationing programs being considered by OPA.

Adequate rationing of scarce commodities is one of the President's seven points to keep down the cost of living.

The universal book would have the virtue of preventnig "runs" on commodities about to be rationed, it was said. In the case of sugar, reports that rationing was being considered had the effect of emptying dealer shelves before rationing could be started. Then, to preserve what stocks remained, it was necessary to "freeze" all sugar supplies for a week while books were distributed. Had universal books been in the hands of the public when sugar rationing was first considered, the "runs" and resultant freeze order might have been avoided, it is believed.

As planned, the book would permit a combination of the English point system of rationing with the coupon rationing in effect for sugar. (The point system gives a consumer a designated amount of coupon points, for such articles as clothing, which he may spend in any desired manner. Different kinds of clothes have set point values.)

It would contain a number of differently colored pages, each with a certain amount of numbered coupons. Any commodity could be put on a direct coupon ration basis by assigning it a page of specially colored coupons. Groups of other commodities might be lumped together under the point system on other pages.

R.A.F. Pours Bombs on Ruhr Valley for Third Successive Night, Blasting Duisberg Anew

British Acknowledge Loss of Six Planes; Nazis Raid England

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 7.—The R. A. F. sent a strong force of bombers through thick weather to the Ruhr Valley for the third successive night last night, blasting the big industrial center and inland river port of Duisburg and other points.

The air ministry acknowledged that six planes were missing after these attacks and other raids on Nazi airdrmes in the Low Countries, but did not disclose the number of participating planes. However, a British source said that in the days before the 1000-bomber raids last night's force would have been regarded as "a whopper."

The German high command admitted there had been material damage to buildings and said the raids had caused some casualties in residential quarters in several towns. It claimed seven British bombers were shot down.

The Luftwaffe sent only a small force against Britain in attacks on Scotland and East Anglia last night, and this afternoon a few raiders dropped bombs in three places in the southwest of England causing a small number of casualties.

German raiders were reported to have dropped fire bombs on a northeast coast tonight, a few hours after a lone raider flew low over the northeast coast of Scotland and dropped a stick of bombs which killed three men and injured ten seriously.

Baltimore Pilot Tells Of Raids on Cologne

Baltimore, Aug. 7 (AP).—British plane followed British plane so closely during the R. A. F.'s mass raid in Cologne in late may that the pilots' chief concern was to avoid bumping into each other. R. A. F. Flight Sergt. Michael Stein Jacobs of Baltimore told his wife in a letter today.

"Over the target we weren't worried about the defenses so much as bumping into other aircraft," he wrote.

"... everywhere you looked there were planes. It seemed like one big formation.

"This was the conversation over the 'intercom' (the plane's intercommunication system), especially from the rear gunner: 'Hello, Captain, two Wellingtons on the starboard, one Halifax just above, and I think there's a Sterling right behind.'"

Mrs. Jacobs also received a cablegram from her husband after another of the R. A. F.'s great raids on Germany, saying simply:

"Dropped a big one on Hamburg for you."

Allies Rain Heavy Bombs On Jap Bases

By the United Press

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia (Saturday), Aug. 8.—Allied bombers, using monster 2000-pound bombs for the first time in the southwest Pacific, have heavily blasted the Japanese bases of Lae, New Guinea, and Rabaul, New Britain Island, shooting down seven Japanese Zero fighters in the course of the latter attack, a United Nations communique revealed today.

In the raid on Rabaul, first since July 17, the bombers were reported to have dropped 15 tons of bombs on the enemy base controlling the approaches to New Guinea and the Coral Sea.

The attacking force was made up of heavy bombers which disdained the perils of daylight to carry out the raid and accounted for seven Japanese fighters which attempted to intercept them.

Rabaul is on the northeastern tip of New Britain, some 530 miles northeast of the great Allied base at Port Moresby, New Guinea. It has been pounded many times since the Japs occupied it in their sweep southward earlier this year but yesterday the Allied airmen lashed out against it with greater fury than ever.

Allied medium bombers also raided the enemy base at Lae, New Guinea, twice on Friday, one time in darkness, directly hitting the airfield runway with 2000-pound bombs, the communique said.

"At Rabaul, against heavy anti-aircraft fire and fighter interception, Allied heavy bombers successfully struck the Vunakanau airdrome," it said. "Fifteen bombs hit the target area. Twenty Zero fighters engaged our formation. Seven enemy fighters were shot down in combat and others were damaged. One of our planes is missing. We sustained minor damage and some casualties in others."

Meanwhile Gen. Douglas MacArthur was described by Norman Stockton, war correspondent of the Melbourne Herald, as an "offensive-minded" leader who "has been placed in the position where apparently he cannot take the offensive."

"The United States has considered that this country (Australia), in the wider strategy of global war, must play a secondary role for the balance of 1942—perhaps longer," Stockton asserted.

At the same time an authoritative source declared that the greatest part of Australian defense forces are Australian, not American, and that both the Australian and American public have been somewhat confused concerning the real facts of the situation.

American equipment which has been sent to Australia is a "trickle" which could be replaced by three days of United States war production, he said, adding that in the main Australia was carrying her own load.

Stockton said that "by sacrificing the initiative which material aid would have permitted we have lost Gona, Tulagi and Kieta, and the Japanese are constantly nibbling at other islands and other potential bases."

U. S., British Strategists Confer Upon Means to Save Russia

French, Norwegian Military Aides Also At Kremlin Parley

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 7.—Urgent conferences on means to save Russia now as an essential to winning of the war were reported in session at Moscow today among strategists and diplomats of the United Nations. This information came from sources whose identity could not be disclosed.

Known to be conferring with Russian militarists in the Kremlin were:

Admiral William H. Standley, American Ambassador to Russia, who flew from the alternate capital at Kuibyshev;

Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley of the United States Air Forces, who flew to Moscow from the United States with a personal message from President Roosevelt to Premier Joseph Stalin;

Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, British Ambassador to Russian who flew from Kuibyshev to the Kremlin;

Roger Garreau, head of the fighting French Mission to Russia;

Maj. Gen. William Steffens, Norwegian military attache to Kuibyshev.

Others May Be Present

The established presence of these conferees suggested that others representing their own and other United Nations were in Moscow to help determine how to relieve the pressure on the Red armies defending the Caucasus oil and the Volga lifeline of supply.

Indeed, Axis radio broadcasts of the last several days have rumored that Prime Minister Churchill has been in Moscow along with William C. Bullitt, special envoy of President Roosevelt.

Axis sources several days ago put out the rumor that Premier Stalin had gone to the southern front to direct the defense of the Caucasus and his namesake city, Stalingrad. It was said in Moscow today that General Bradley had not yet had the opportunity to deliver Mr. Roosevelt's message to Stalin.

Another Axis broadcast launched the report that Laurence A. Steinhardt, former United States Ambassador to Russia and now the American envoy to Turkey, had gone to Moscow from Ankara, but Moscow dispatches said he was not there and not expected.

Concerns Arms Supply

The purpose of Bradley's mission was given in a Russian communique as "a discussion with the appropriate Soviet authorities of practical questions connected with the supply of arms and war materials to the U. S. S. R. from the United States."

British official sources maintained a fast silence on the Moscow conferences except to disclose that their ambassador was in on them.

Among the subjects likely to be under discussion in Moscow were the "second front" and the supply of implements for Russian military use against the Germans all along the eastern front.

The supply lines are threatened perilously in the south and no less urgently in the north where materiel moves to Murmansk and Archangel along the warship-and plane-infested frigid routes.

Nazis Practice Defense

London, Aug. 7 (AP).—German troops have completed maneuvers in the interior of Holland in the course of which special attention was given to defense against parachute troops, it was reported today.

Nazis Nearer Their Objectives

REDS SUFFER NEW REVERSES IN CAUCASUS—Plunging deeper into the Caucasus, German armies have driven to the Armavir area (1) within 60 miles of the Maikop oil fields. Other Nazi forces (2) also moved closer to Stalingrad, vital Volga city. The Soviet midnight communique reported fierce engagements were being fought to the south of Kushchevka (3)

relieve the pressure on the south by the action around Voronezh.

At sea, the Russians said, Red fleet warships operating in the Baltic sank an enemy transport of 10,000 tons. No details on this feat were given.

But with all the Russian resistance, bolstered now by reserves, the penetration into the Caucasus in the Armavir region was the deepest thus far reported by the Soviets in that important sector.

(German military sources yesterday said the Nazis have captured Amavir.)

Germans Claim Gains

The fresh reserves apparently were checking the superior Nazi forces in all save the area below Glina, through which the German tanks have plunged toward Armavir and the Maikop oil fields.

(The Germans asserted they were within 30 miles of Maikop; that they were approaching Krasnodar on the Kuban River, 150 miles southwest of Rostov; and had stormed the rail junction of Timashevskaya, 60 miles north of Krasnodar.

(The Germans said they were "engaged in a struggle with newly arrived enemy forces" between the Don and Sal Rivers—the Kotelnikovski zone southwest of Stalingrad. Russian counterattacks with large forces of tanks—mentioned for the first time in the Caucasus—were acknowledged here, and the Germans claimed no advance. Other Russian attacks were acknowledged in the Don bend; around Rzhev, northwest of Moscow; and in the extreme north. A Russian division was declared annihilated in the Western Caucasus.)

The stoutness of the Russian defenses was attested in yesterday's mid-day communique which listed the destruction of 41 tanks plus hundreds of troops.

American Bombers Destroy 10 Jap Planes Near Canton

By the United Press

Chungking, Aug. 7.—United States Army headquarters announced today that American bombers wiped out at least ten Japanese planes on an airdrome near Canton yesterday, while the Chinese high command reported the killing of more than 1000 Jap soldiers in Kiangsi Province and north of Hankow, where a munitions train was blown up.

The bombers, escorted by 23 pursuit group fighter planes, also scored numerous hits on runways of the raided Japanese airfield, located at Tienho, a communique said. The Americans took the enemy completely by surprise, as they did in destroying several planes on the White Cloud airdrome at Canton on July 4 and in blasting at 50 to 60 planes caught massed on the same field July 19.

All American aircraft returned safely, the communique added. The bases were not revealed, but there are American planes at Hengyang, 260 miles north of Canton. Others are understood to be at Kweilin, capital of Kwangsi Province, 235 miles northwest of Canton.

Observers suggested that the raid was in retaliation for the attack in which the Japanese lost four of their improved Zero fighter planes over Hengyang on Wednesday.

Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the United States Air Force in China, said the Japanese were "making an all-out effort to drive the United States Air Forces in Central China from their bases, but they'll run their head against an unbreakable wall."

In addition to using their new planes, he said, they were assigning "their best pilots, who have been specially trained for combat with the Americans, for their suicide raids against Hengyang."

He denounced as "lies" the Japanese claims to have bombed Chungking, Kunming and Kweilin on Wednesday, for on that day he "visited two of these cities, and there were no Jap planes within many miles."

A Chinese war communique reported that Chinese troops storming Linchwan, American-bombed highway center in Kiangsi, 50 miles southeast of Nanchang, killed 500 Japanese soldiers at Wulitang, a little more than a mile south of Linchwan, in fighting which see-sawed back and forth from Monday to Wednesday. The village was in Chinese hands for the sixth time in the three days when the battle died down.

Bloody fighting was going on in the Eastern and Northwestern suburbs of Linchwan.

In the suburbs of Tunghsiang, 28 miles northeast of Linchwan, on the Hangchow-Nanchang Railway, the Chinese have killed about 300 Japanese in an attack which has continued since Monday.

Gandhi Demands Civil Disobedience

tomorrow without any action on the resolution.

The Congress Party's working committee just prior to the opening today authorized its president, as soon as the resolution is indorsed to appeal to President Roosevelt, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of China and Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassador to Britain, to support the demand that Great Britain grant India independence immediately.

Britain's previous offers of dominion status after the war is over have been rejected, not only by the All-India Congress Party, but by other major factions in the vast diversity of religions and politics among India's nearly 400 million people.

Differences Still Apparent

Those diversities were evident still today, with leaders of various hues of opinion suggesting one thing and another as a "solution" to the perennial Indian problem, now sharpened by the war.

Addressing the 380 Congress Party delegates and the thousands of others who had paid up to 100 rupees each for places inside the canvas-walled field, Gandhi declared this afternoon that he did not want to be "the instrument of Russia's defeat, nor of China's," remarking:

"If that happened, I would hate myself."

He urged Indian independence as an essential to Indian cooperation in the war against the Axis.

"We shall get our freedom by fighting. It cannot fall from the skies.

'Greater Friend of British'

"I know full well that the British will have to give us our freedom when we have made sufficient sacrifice and proved our strength.

"We must remove hatred for the British from our hearts. At least in my heart there is no such hatred.

"As a matter of fact I am a greater friend of the British now than I ever was," he added. "My friendship demands that I make them aware of their mistakes."

Despite his mention of fighting, he cautioned:

"It may be that in a moment of anger they (the British) might do things that might provoke you.

"Nevertheless, you should not resort to violence. Put violence to shame."

Then this cryptic utterance.

"When such things happen, you may take it that you will not find me alive, wherever I may be. Their blood will be on your head. If you don't understand this it will be better if you reject the resolution.

Japs Already Fighting Reds —Magnuson

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Aug. 7.—"Japan already is at war with Russia and it is common knowledge in Washington, D. C., that the Japs have already sunk several Russian ships in the Pacific," Representative Warren G. Magnuson (Democrat) of Washington, a member of the Naval Affairs Committee, said today.

"The last was sunk very recently," he said. "They are justifying their action on the ground that the Russians were carrying American materials."

"War between Japan and Russia started," he told interviewers, "when the Japs began strengthening their forces in Manchuria, and when they seized Attu and Kiska Islands in the Aleutians."

Japs Fear More Raids

Copyright by Chicago Sun

A gnawing fear of large-scale bombings of Tokyo and her "tinder box" cities probably is restraining Japan from attacking Siberia, military spokesmen said here yesterday.

They added, however, that the entire Manchukuo-Siberian border might flame into war at almost any time if Japan comes to feel the risk is worth it, or if Hitler insists strongly enough that a second front be opened on Russia's back door.

Information received in military quarters in this country places the Japanese strength in Manchukuo at 25 divisions, or approximately 350,000 men.

Japs Lose Heavily in Aleutians

Santa Monica, Calif., Aug. 7 (AP).—Japanese occupation of Attu and Kiska in the Aleutian Islands has been costly to the invaders, Artemus L. Gates, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, told a press conference today, and it will be even more costly.

Gates said:

"By being in the Aleutian Islands the Japanese are that much nearer to our shores and naturally to the extent of those miles our danger is greater."

Hepburn Sees Two-Ocean Attack

Fergus, Ontario, Aug. 7 (AP).—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario, who recently predicted an imminent Japanese bombing of the American mainland, declared today: "I believe we are going to have an attack on the Atlantic Coast very soon, and a two-ocean attack in the near future."

Axis Troops Held Ready

Ankara, Turkey, Aug. 7 (AP).—An authoritative source who would not be identified said today the Germans, awaiting signs of a second front, were holding between 150,000 and 180,000 Italian and Nazi mechanized troops in readiness in Greece instead of sending them to Africa.

If the second Allied front is not opened by the middle of September, this source said, the men undoubtedly will go to Africa, their original destination.

Mihailovich Wants Second Front

"Somewhere in Yugoslavia," Aug. 7 (INS).—Gen. Dragoljub "Draja" Mihailovich, commander in chief of the Yugoslav army, has sent word to a high official of the Yugoslav government in London urging that a second front in Europe be opened in Yugoslavia.

"Conditions for a second front in Europe are very favorable," General Mihailovich said, "because a second front has existed for more than a year that is pinning down more than 30 Axis divisions.

"This second front is in the heart of Yugoslavia, where we are conducting an incessant guerrila campaign immobilizing permanently in Yugoslavia 17 Italian, 7 Bulgarian, 4 German and 6 Hungarian divisions."

War Sidelights

De Gaulle Visits Troops In Africa

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 7.—Fighting French headquarters announced today that General De Gaulle had arrived in Cairo to inspect his troops in Egypt, Syria and French Equatorial Africa.

Women Fire-Watchers

London, Aug. 7 (AP).—Compulsory fire-watching by women 20 to 45 years old was introduced today with a statement by Home Secretary Herbert Morrison that the measure was taken "on the assumption that the weight of Luftwaffe raids will increase" and "because of the seriousness of the man power situation." Millions of women will be affected, he said.

Polish Units Move

Cairo, Aug. 7 (AP).—New contingents of the Polish army were reported here today to be on their way to the middle east from Rusia, equipped with British and American weapons.

They were expected to reinforce the Polish brigade which already has played a part in campaigns in this area for the past two years.

So far there are 30,000 Poles serving in their own army in the eastern Mediterranean. In addition, some 10,000 Polish civilians are in this area, including many women who have joined Polish Women's auxiliary units.

U. S. Is Probing Chicago Tribune

Congress, many of whom reside in the territory where this newspaper circulates most widely.

"Such an investigation, with all the attendant leaks of information and half truths to friendly newspapers can easily be dragged out until the November election. If the Tribune's patriotism can be impugned in the minds of the electors, the Administration's campaign to retain control of Congress will be helped immeasurably.

"Stanley Johnston, the war correspondent who wrote the epic series on the Battle of the Coral Sea, furnished the Tribune with the story on which the Navy and Department of Justice are basing their grand jury investigation.

"Johnston, who has been recommended for a bravery citation for his part in the Coral Sea engagement, made up an estimate of the size and strength of the Japanese armada the Navy defeated west of Midway Island. It was this article, published in the Tribune on June 7, that is being used by Attorney General Biddle in ordering a Federal Grand Jury in Chicago to go after the Tribune.

"That Washington would attack the Tribune and other newspapers which have demanded an all-out war effort and the removal of high officials who have been fumbling the ball at home came as no surprise. The political plot has been brewing for months."

There was no immediate comment either from the Daily News or the Times-Herald. Both newspapers said they published the Tribune's story.

Rommel Counts On Small Boats For Gas, Bullets

By Larry Allen
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Eastern Mediterranean Fleet, Aug. 7.—Nazi Marshall Erwin Rommel is counting on speedy motor torpedo boats and barges to bring what he needs quickly: gasoline and ammunition.

The sudden appearance of increasing numbers of these small craft in the vicinity of Matruh and Sidi Barrani indicates he is hoping they can keep his advanced lines at El Alamein supplied while Axis cargo ships escorted by warships pour materials and men into Tobruk and Bengasi.

Saves Long Overland Haul

Whatever the enemy gets in by speedboat to Matruh and Sidi Barrani saves just that much from the long overland haul through sandstorms and blistering heat. That is why Rommel has clung to these two small, shallow-water ports despite smashing bombardments by the British fleet and heavy raids by American and British planes.

British naval guns made Matruh virtually useless for large ships, while only small craft were able to get into Sidi Barrani even under the best of conditions.

Nevertheless, air reconnaissance shows there has been a constant line of barges and E-boats operating about these ports.

Planes Attack Tobruk

Cairo, Aug. 7 (AP).—United States Army Air Force bombers "effectively attacked" shipping and the harbor at Tobruk yesterday evening, the R. A. F. Middle East news service reported today. Details were not given.

An earlier British communique said they set a large fire.

The American attack followed a heavy raid on Tobruk the previous night by R. A. F. bombers, which started fires in the dock area and were believed to have hit two ships.

There was little other land or air activity on the Egyptian battlefront, today's British communique said.

Officer Killed In Plane Crash

Wilmington, N. C., Aug. 7 (U.P.).—Lieut. Elmer A. Sommerfield, 24-year-old Army Air Corps officer from Benton Harbor, Mich., was killed today when his plane crashed and burned on a take-off at Camp Davis.

British Get Lighter, More Accurate Rifle

London, Aug. 7 (AP).—The British army is being equipped with a new rifle, lighter and more accurate than the old model.

This was disclosed today when King George VI inspected eastern command troops. The King examined one of the rifles and talked to the crack shot of a famous regiment who said the rifle "is so accurate that when I first handled it, it seemed as though I could not miss."

these planes will be built by Glenn Martin.

In another development yesterday in the thrilling story of a man who came to Washington with an idea and inexhaustible energy and in a little more than a week has convinced Government officials that he can build a new air fleet, officials in the WPB iron and steel branch said they were willing to recommend that Kaiser be allowed to expand his California steel plant which is scheduled to go into production early in 1943.

Has Asked for Steel

Kaiser has asked WPB to allocate to him a little more than 31,000 tons of steel, which would enable him so to enlarge his steel-making facilities as to expand production by 600,000 tons of ingot steel and 458,000 tons of finished steel. Pending study of detailed plans of the expansion project and determination of whether the expanded facilities represented a balanced production program and whether there would be adequate supplies of iron ore and coke to keep the larger plant running, iron and steel branch officials said they could not give a final answer on the project.

They added, however, that Kaiser's planning heretofore has been of a high order and they expected that they would recommend approval to WPB.

Kaiser last night was confident he would be able to find the necessary steel, steel alloys, aluminum and magnesium. Chrome for alloying steel will be in production soon, he said. Nickel, another necessary alloy, he also expects to find.

Kaiser declared that he would go outside WPB allocations for his material. He said he has had geologists hunting material sources for months and disclosed that the Interior Department has promised to put its mining and other experts to work for him.

"You will remember that I said we would put the United States to work," Kaiser declared. "We might just as well start out with the Government."

Kaiser said he would start putting his plane-making organization together at once. He said it would be an organization capable of doing the work.

"It is only through work, more work and still more work, that this country can win the war," he said.

Chennault Finds U. S. Planes Better Than New Zeros

Chungking, Aug. 7 (U.P.).—Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, Commander of the U. S. Army Air Force in China, said today the new Zeros, of which 15 have been shot down thus far over Hengyang, "are far better than the old ones, but inferior to our planes, and it will take at least two years before the Japs are able to construct anything equaling our newest."

Truman Probers Urge WPB to Curb 'Big Steel' Influence in Organization

Senator Asks Strict Metal Quota System

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

War Production Board action to clip the power of "big steel" representatives in its organization, and to set up a strict quota system for distributing steel, were urged by leaders of the Senate Defense Investigating Committee last night as immediate steps for speeding the war effort.

Calling steel the "backbone" of America's war program, Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the committee, declared that the WPB "should take effective steps to reduce the influence of the representatives of the largest steel producers in its iron and steel branch."

Points to Bewilderment

Truman, speaking over station WJSV, said that under the present distribution system the Government does not know "where and how" a considerable portion of the steel is used. And "we hope the WPB will set up a strict plan of quotas or allocations." He said it was "encouraging" that Reese Taylor, chief of the iron and steel branch, was urging this system to the WPB.

Senator Kilgore (Democrat), of West Virginia, a committee member, joined in calling for a system of direct allocations of steel orders and said that the Nation's entire steel industry should be integrated to "use what we have" in the way of small steel plants.

Hearings End Second Day

These proposals were advanced after a second day of Truman committee hearings in which Committee Counsel Hugh Fulton pressed for information to show that the big steel companies, through advisers and dollar-a-year men in WPB, representing big steel interests, had dominated the planning of America's steel expansion program to the benefit of the largest steel firms.

Key War Agencies Criticized

Truman, in his speech, and Fulton, in examination of witnesses, attributed present shortages of steel in part both to opposition of steel interests against expanding production, and to failure of key war agencies to estimate their war needs correctly.

Truman said:

"Instead of increasing facilities, the steel magnates, fearful that their profits after the war would be lessened by competition of new steel-making facilities, insisted that there could be no shortage and supported their position by referring to the smallness of the orders which the War and Navy Departments estimated they could make in the future.

"A considerable portion of the blame for this situation must rest on the War and Navy Departments for their absolute failure during peacetime to work out any worthwhile estimates of what they would need in wartime."

Small Firm Get Puny Contract

Kilgore's plan for integrating all steel-making facilities was advanced as John F. Budke, vice president of the Parkersburg Iron & Steel Co., testified that his firm, one of the oldest sheet mills in the country, and able to turn out 2500 tons of steel products a month for war purposes, had received Government orders for but 820 tons since the first of this year.

Budke said that while the larger continuous-operation mills could roll sheets $10 to $12 a ton cheaper than his firm, "we do not know" that this amount "diminishes the price at which these mills sell sheets to the Government." He said his firm would be willing to sell sheets at the same price as the continuous mills, and "will be content to take an infinitely smaller profit."

Rolland C. Allen, deputy chief of the iron and steel branch, under questioning by Fulton, said that last February and March, at his suggestion, a committee of steel industry representatives had been asked to work out a building schedule that would bring order into the steel expansion program.

Expansion Deferred

Two months later, Allen said, the order came through to "defer" all projects in the expansion program which could not be completed by July 1, 1943. He explained that the clearance committee of the iron and steel branch, with others of its employes, and representatives of the Army and Navy Munitions Board, was given the job of deciding what projects could not be completed.

Members of the first committee to plan the program, it was testified, were employes of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, Inland Steel, and Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. Of these five, Allen said, Bethlehem and Republic were later ordered to defer some of their expansion, the other three were allowed to continue while a number of smaller companies were required to defer all their projected expansion.

Allen said that he had appointed the important clearance committee which goes over all new projects, and on a question by Fulton, said "it never entered my mind" to appoint representatives of small steel companies to this group. He added that they were appointed for their value to the work of the committee, and that he regarded them "as individuals" who were employed by the Government to represent its best interests.

$75-Per-Room Limit Puts Crimp in Dorm Furnishing

Curtains and hassocks for dormitories about to be constructed for 15,000 Government girls were on the "definitely uncertain" list yesterday as officials strove to meet a $75-per-room furnishing limit.

More than 15,000 lamps have been ordered, based on the rule of one to a girl and several for lounges. But bids for other articles are still being formulated. The lamps had to be bargained for, at a price not disclosed, so that they could be assembled before a priorities freeze date of August 15.

The dormitories to be built under a special Lanham Act grant, will be in downtown Washington park areas, and in Arlington, Va., and Suitland, Md., where large groups of Government workers are concentrated.

The Public Buildings Administration is in charge of construction with Gladys Miller, decorating and home designing expert, in charge of furnishings. Miss Miller had hoped to use hassocks for chairs in some instances, to give the dormitories more "style," and her original plans called for bright curtains lined for blackouts.

Meanwhile, the FHA reported yesterday that very few Washingtonians are asking for special loans from the Federal Housing Authority to remodel and enlarge their homes to permit them to take in warworkers. In some parts of the country, the FHA reported, many homeowners are asking for such loans.

During the first six months of the year, however, 828 loans for amounts totalling $371,125 were granted District of Columbia residents for minor repairs and remodelling projects—and some of this may benefit warworkers. Loans for the same period last year amounted to $555,865, but the rules were less stringent then.

The FHA yesterday called attention to the fact that while some of their activities have been lessened by the new regulation governing installment paying, repairs and remodelling designed to conserve fuel are exempt from the provisions. Included in these would be requests for loans to convert oil burners to coal furnace burners, and for insulation to cut down the amount of heat needed.

Four More Are Appointed To Key Posts With WAVES

The Navy Department announced yesterday that Lieut. Comdr. Mildred H. McAfee, director of the WAVES, had appointed Elizabeth Bolard Crandall to be dean of women at the WAVE officer training school at Smith College.

Miss Crandall, 36-year-old graduate of Western Reserve University and assistant dean of Leland Stanford University, has been commissioned a lieutenant. She will report to the Bureau of Naval Personnel August 17 for work in connection with the Smith College program.

Three other WAVE appointments were announced yesterday. Lieut. (j. g.) Virginia Carlin, 32 of New York City, and Ensign Dorothy Foster of Atlanta will be sworn in today as assistants to ommander McAfee. The former is a graduate of Wellesley College and the latter of Randolph-Macon College. Both were employed by retail stores when appointed.

Mrs. Bernice Drake Lill, registrar of Sweet Briar College, Va., was commissioned lieutenant and named recruiting officer of the Richmond area.

Knox Orders Truman Charge Probe

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

A "very careful investigation" of the charges made by Senator Harry S. Truman against the Bureau of Ships for its treatment of Higgins Industries of New Orleans has been ordered by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, Truman (Democrat) of Missouri announced yesterday.

Knox informed the Senator by letter that he is "very seriously concerned" about the charges made against the bureau and said he is having a probe made of "the entire matter."

Knox said that when the investigation is completed, he wants to discuss it with Truman. The latter said he will be given an opportunity to do so.

Tydings to Ask Compulsory Job Transfers

Mandatory transfers of Government personnel from nonessential to war agencies, either through congressional action or a congressional demand for executive action, yesterday appeared to be due in the near future.

Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland, chairman of a special Senate subcommittee which investigated the Government's wartime efficiency, disclosed that he intends to call for such transfers soon, following up reommendaions made by his committee.

He said he is now drafting legislation which would authorize the switching of employes, with or without their consent. His committee's report had urged this utilization of nonessential personnel here, but the group was told by the Civil Service Commission that the commission had no power to force the transfers if workers did not want to leave.

His bill would transfer the workers at a salary increase, and would allow them to go back to their old jobs after the war.

In the meantime, he said that he was studying the Man-Power Act to make sure that the President did not already have sufficient authority to effect the transfers.

If the necessary power is already there, he asserted, he will ask on the floor that it be utilized; if it is not, he will introduce his bill to create it.

In its report, his committee cited long lists of bureaus and agencies which would be curtailed or completely eliminated, freeing funds and personnel for use in the vital war agencies. It was further pointed out that many workers could be sent from the peacetime bureaus without causing any drastic curtailment, if adequate civil service machinery were set up.

Investigation Of ADA Starts Next Week

A congressional investigation of the Alley Dwelling Authority, asked several months ago by the ADA itself, will get under way next week, Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland promised yesterday.

Tydings is chairman of a special Senate District Subcommittee appointed to conduct the probe.

He announced that he would call a meeting of the group as soon as possible next week to map out the investigation, with the intention of proceeding on it immediately.

Serving on the committee with him are Senators McCarran, Hughes, Burton and Capper.

John Ihlder, ADA chief, requested that his agency be examined by the committee after the Senate had eliminated from the ADA appropriation a 12-million-dollar revolving fund on which it had previously operated.

In the meantime, Renah F. Camalier, committee counsel, is gathering data on various ADA functions and projects in an effort to have all preliminary work taken care of when the investigation is finally launched.

OPA to Issue Universal Book to Cover All Future Rationing

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The Office of Price Administration yesterday disclosed plans to place a universal ration book in the hands of every American to enable OPA to start new rationing programs in a hurry if the need arises.

Paul M. O'Leary, deputy administrator in charge of rationing, said proofs of a sample universal book are being prepared now by the Government Printing Office.

"If it can be made workable, we would have in our hands an instrument that would enable us to start a rationing program almost overnight, instead of having to taxe six to ten weeks as in the past when we have had to let the emergencies wait while we got scores of millions of coupon books printed," O'Leary said.

O'Leary took pains to deny rumors that OPA is going to ration certain specific commodities, but pointed out that rationing machinery is being planned for many commodities which do not require rationing at present.

Later, in a speech at Richmond, Va., O'Leary said OPA is preparing to "ration a number of important commodities if and when we are asked to do so."

He singled out fuel oil on the Eastern Seaboard as a "very likely subject for rationing in the not distant future," pointed out that OPA plans being made because of the Eastern oil shortage were "now no secret." However, it was understood that fuel oil would probably not be rationed through the proposed "universal" book because the shortage is confined to the East, and because all Eastern families do not use oil for heating purposes.

"In this respect we are like the fire department," he said. "It gets its firefighting equipment ahead of time so when the alarm sounds, they don't have to go shopping for a fire engine in order to go to the fire."

Price Administrator Leon Henderson, in protesting congressional action reducing OPA's appropriation, has stated that the fund cut imperilled a number of rationing programs being considered by OPA.

Adequate rationing of scarce commodities is one of the President's seven points to keep down the cost of living.

The universal book would have the virtue of preventnig "runs" on commodities about to be rationed, it was said. In the case of sugar, reports that rationing was being considered had the effect of emptying dealer shelves before rationing could be started. Then, to preserve what stocks remained, it was necessary to "freeze" all sugar supplies for a week while books were distributed. Had universal books been in the hands of the public when sugar rationing was first considered, the "runs" and resultant freeze order might have been avoided, it is believed.

As planned, the book would permit a combination of the English point system of rationing with the coupon rationing in effect for sugar. (The point system gives a consumer a designated amount of coupon points, for such articles as clothing, which he may spend in any desired manner. Different kinds of clothes have set point values.)

It would contain a number of differently colored pages, each with a certain amount of numbered coupons. Any commodity could be put on a direct coupon ration basis by assigning it a page of specially colored coupons. Groups of other commodities might be lumped together under the point system on other pages.

President Still Silent on Fate Of 8 Saboteurs

arts of destruction, and their orders were to slip into the United States and blast and burn.

The Nazi high command listed vital targets—mills and factories and terminals, canal locks and railway curves. The people at work in these objectives would have been killed or mangled; but instead the spies were caught before they struck.

Because one of them confessed quickly and in great detail, he was clinging to hope last night that he would not be put to death. There was reason to surmise that it was George John Dasch, 39, leader of one of the two invading groups of four men each, who bought clemency by squealing on the others. There was speculation, too, that Ernest Peter Burger, 36, tried to make the same deal.

And Herbert Haupt, born in Germany, but brought up in America, educated in American schools, was just 22 years old. His youth might win him mercy.

But none of the eight knew.

And nobody else knew last night whether the President would spare any of them, or how the others would die—by rope or rifle fire or in the electric chair as American criminals do. The Army manual for courts martial prefers hanging to shooting, as more ignominious, for spies.

The eight—alone in their cells and apart from each other—chose to think of other matters.

They read greedily American books and magazines, in huge volume, crowding as much vicarious life as they could into what was left of their own. They were not allowed newspapers, so they do not know of the rumors about their fate.

They smoked, without stopping, lighting one cigarette from the one before it. Their Army guards were instructed to treat them with humanity and give them enough cigarettes to begin with. Enough for ordinary men, that is.

But this was not enough for the spies, and they asked for more. They got them.

Some of the spies have kept themselves clean and some have not, finding life too short to spend any minutes upon such matters.

All have been eating heartily—the same food as the regular jail prisoners.

If one or more of the spies is allowed to live, he will have a further price to pay. Waiting in other jails for disposition are ten confederates of the invaders. They are now accused as accessories, but Attorney General Biddle regards them as traitors. If they go to trial on this charge, the spy or spies to whom they gave aid and comfort will be expected to take the witness stand to give the testimony that will send them to the gallows.

Statue-Scrapping Talk Is Revived

ficial here, speaking for himself, reminded that nearly all of the more than 12,000 legion posts throughout America have various relics of the World War. These, in most instances, were given by the local legionnaires to their communities. With the impulse of the President's suggestion behind them now, the legionnaires may prevail on the communities to return the mementoes to the Government and the communities would act quickly, it was believed.

Still, that has to do with old machine guns, old mortors and the like. People who might have opinions on good and bad art shied from commenting on statues as though they would bite. Washington, it was anonymously agreed, has some good ones, such as that of Grant, on the Mall; that of McClellan, on Connecticut Avenue, and the statue of George Thomas was thought excellent.

But:

That one of William Jennings Bryan back of the brewery, in which the Great Commoner seems to be trucking, was thought better turned into the side of a tank. The one of Huey Long in the Capitol, it was thought, would be appropriate as the barrels for several Garand rifles. The one of Lincoln in Judiciary Square was considered as potential barnacle catcher for some future battleship if, indeed, the statue is of metal. It is difficult to know. That one of the strange bird, or some reptilian things, whatever, down on the avenue, was believed to contain something useable. On the other side of the appraisal, the statue of Farragut was generally liked, and, emotionally, it stacks up, too. The metal came from his ship, Hartford.

The statue of Andrew Jackson, on the short-cut horse in Lafayette Park was thought poorly of, but the surrounding cannon were captured at the Battle of New Orleans, a fact which carried influence against scrapping it.

The suggestion called up the Veterans' of Foreign Wars 16-ton tank now decorating the plaza at the Alexandria railroad station. The V. F. W. is on record for donating it if other organiaztions take a like action. The American Legion gave a 75-mm gun to the Alexandria Municipal Swimming Pool. Ownership is in doubt there.

The Andrew Jackson statue weathered considerable controversy before this war came along. Some wanted it down and a statue of Washington placed in its stead. Others objected to the horse being supported in its rearing posture by its prominent tail. It is the centerpiece of four other statues, those of Lafayette, Kosciusko, Von Steuben and Rochambeau. Meanwhile, like this particular park, the Capitol's Statuary Hall bulges with worthies, including the busts of 5 Presidents and 32 Vice Presidents—all possible material under the scrap need.

Gettysburg, America's principal battlefield in point of public interest, already has taken stock of itself. The custodians have notified the Government that disposition might be made of tons of cannon balls and other metal salvage now stored in a utility building there. Some 80 dismounted cannon are among the relics, some having fired, it was believed, in the Revolution; others, in the Civil War. Other tons of historic metal are posted at battle-crucial positions on the grounds, which may be retained to the last.

The first hint that the statues might be turned into weapons and old cannon be made to fire again came on June 26 when Production Chief Nelson ventured the prediction. The following day he asserted that the reports were exaggerated. The President pursued the idea yesterday.

Saboteurs Await Fate at District Jail

Text of OWI Statement on War's Status

The text of the OWI statement, issued yesterday, on the war situation follows:

The Office of War Information is directed, among other things, to facilitate the development of an informed and intelligent understanding of the status and progress of the war effort. Accordingly it may, from time to time, supplement the current news with a review of the general situation.

We are deep in what may be the decisive year of the war. But 1942 will be the decisive year only if our enemies do not succeed in inflicting crippling blows on our Allies before the year is out. Even if they fail in that, they will still take a lot of licking. But if they should paralyze the striking power of Russia, or wear down the endurance of China, or break the British power in the Middle East, the war will be decided in some later year not now foreseen, and victory will be far more costly.

It is not intended here to discuss the military situation except as it relates to what the American people are doing about it. We always knew that for us, 1942 would be largely a year of preparation, and that our Allies would have to do most of the fighting during most of the year. Before we can do much of the fighting we must move great numbers of men and vast masses of material over enormous distances.

This job, so far, has been done with entire success; but we are going to have to keep on doing it, in increasing volume, until the war is won. Meanwhile, compelled to spread out our naval forces far more widely, and far more thinly, than could have been foreseen, we have paid for the perfect protection given to our troop convoys to Europe and the South Seas with heavy shipping losses off our own coasts.

Sinkings Exceed Construction

During the first half of this year sinkings of merchant shipping far exceeded new construction. The months of June and July showed a decided improvement in shipbuilding, and in July the curve of submarine sinkings the world over turned downward. We hope that this trend will continue, but nobody can be sure; production of small vessels for the antisubmarine campaign is still lagging, and and in June was less than half of schedule. Even if shipbuilding continues to rise and sinkings to decrease, we shall probably be well into 1943 before we again have as much merchant shipping as we had on December 7, 1941.

Meanwhile, our Allies have carried most of the load, and we have not given them as much help as we had led them to expect. Partly this is not our fault, except in such degree as the enemy's victories may be our fault; the cutting of the Burma Road made it harder to supply China and German activity on the route to Murmansk makes it harder to supply Russia. But by and large, we have not been producing war material to the maximum of available capacity, and have not been getting that material to the fighting fronts in the time and in the volume that will be needed to win.

We have done pretty well, but not well enough. Our forces in the Pacific, after the initial disasters at Pearl Harbor and on the Philippine air fields, worked heroically at a heavy disadvantage, in numbers, as well as in distance. The wonder is not that we lost so much but that we held on to so much; but we did lose plenty. The battles in the Coral Sea, the greater battle at Midway, were brilliant victories against superior forces; but they were defensive victories. We held the enemy on the 20-yard line and punted out of danger, but his goal posts are still a long way off. We held the central Pacific and reinforced Australia; but he still holds the Philippines, and the Dutch Islands and the rubber that we need.

Production Not Yet Enough

At home, too, we have done pretty well but not well enough. Our production, measured by our standards of a couple of years ago, is amazing; measured against what we need to win, it is not yet enough. In June we fell slightly below schedule in total military planes, in total combat planes and in most of the individual types; we made more planes than any other country in the world, but we did not make as many as we said we were going to make. The same is true of tanks, of most types of artillery, and of naval vessels—particularly the small craft needed to fight submarines.

We have made in the past two years a tremendous plant expansion. Now we have more factories than, at the moment, we can use—not too many, perhaps, compared to the ultimate need, but too many for the amount of raw materials at present available. Faulty control of inventories and of flow of materials has necessitated some temporary shutdowns. The war production drive is taking a new turn, emphasizing materials until we get enough of them to keep all our factories busy. Mistakes made this time were perhaps unavoidable and will not be made again, but their consequences will be with us for some time to come. And the resolution not to repeat them must be backed up by an intensified effort of the entire Nation.

There is no doubt that the American people mean to win the war; but there is doubt that all of us realize how hard we are going to have to work to win it. The war is still a long way off, thanks to our good luck and the stubbornness of our Allies; but it may not stay a long way off unless we work at it harder than we are working now. Too many people seem to feel that we are fighting this war out of a surplus—a surplus of resources and productive capacity a surplus of time. That is not true.

We Lack Some Resources

We have plenty of some resources; in others we are a have-not nation. Some of these are being supplied from abroad, at the peril of men's lives; for others we must find, or make, substitutes here at home. We must realize that and put up with it. We should all like to believe for instance, that we are going to have all the rubber we need, for pleasure driving as well as for military and essential civilian uses. But there is no present prospect of that; if people eagerly believe everybody who tells them that there is going to be plenty of rubber, they are only fooling themselves, and helping the enemy.

We have great productive capacity; but conversion of that plant from peace-time to war-time uses was a job that had to be learned, and could not be learned without making mistakes. We cannot devote that plant primarily to war purposes without greater sacrifices in convenience and comfort than we are making now; and it must compete with the productive capacity of most of Europe, managed by men who have organized it only for war purposes. As for time, it will never be on our side till we use it better than the enemy does.

So far, our Allies have done most of the fighting; our casualties have been only about one in 3000 of the American people. But wars are not won by production alone; they are won only by fighting battles with what you produce, and winning some of those battles. It is probable that we shall also lose some of them, and certain that we are not going to win without heavy losses of men. We had better prepare ourselves for that, and learn to take it as our ancestors took it. In a global war we cannot expect always to win everywhere; we may have to learn to take local and temporary defeats as part of the price of ultimate victory. Our ancestors could do that; if we can't, we shall be unable to save the independence they won for us.

'We Could Lose This War'

Our forces are being disposed as and where the military commanders believe they get the maximum of results according to the best professional judgment. In the war, since December 7, no strategical plan or operation calling for or using American naval, land, or air forces has been adopted or carried out, except on the recommendation and with the approval of the top officers of the American Army and Navy. Popular pressure for action on this front or that of the many possible fronts can serve no useful purpose. When we cannot be strong and hit hard everywhere, we must be able to hit hard where it counts most, even at the price of leaving other areas inactive.

We could lose this war. We never have lost a war; but it has been remarked that this means only that our ancestors never lost a war; and our ancestors were never up against a war like this. It is a war against men with whom no honorable peace is possible; in both Europe and Asia they were fighting it by other means long before the shooting started, and their record proves that they would continue it by other means after the shooting stops if they still had the power. It is a total war, in which defeat by our enemies means destruction; the French learned that there could be no honorable submission to Hitler.

To win a total war we must fight it totally and we are not yet fighting it that hard. We are fighting fanatical men out for world domination, and we can beat them only if we want to beat them as badly as they want to beat us. Many individual Americans have made great sacrifices, but as a nation we are not yet more than ankle deep in the war. We can win it, if we realize that winning it is the one vitally important thing in the world today; but we are not winning it yet. We have done pretty well, but pretty well is not enough. Nothing will be good enough till we have won.

Witness Links Pastor to Nazi Suspect

By the Associated Press

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 7.—Otto H. Kaupp, vestryman at Old Zion's Church in Philadelphia, testified today that he knew that Pastor Kurt E. B. Molzahn was "friendly" with a suspected Nazi residing in that city as agent for the North German Lloyd Steamship Line.

Kaupp, appearing as a defense character witness at the Rev. Molzahn's trial on espionage conspiracy charges, identified the steamship agent under cross-examination as a man named Kessemeler.

Prosecutor Thomas J. Dodd, jr., asked whether he had ever discussed Kessemeier's connections with Molzahn, and the witness replied that he had not because "it was none of my business."

"No business of a vestryman that your pastor was running around with a Nazi?" Dodd demanded.

"To a certain extent, yes," Kaupp replied.

Q. "Why didn't you talk about it?"

A. "I didn't know Kessemeier enough to discuss such things with the pastor."

Kaupp had appeared on the stand yesterday, asserting that at one time Pastor Molzahn had told him he had asked another vestryman to resign because the latter was "very active" in the bund.

Chief among other character witnesses testifying yesterday was rotund Gerhard Kunze, 60-year-old organist-choirmaster father of Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, former head of the German-American Bund and one of four guilty-pleading defendants indicted with Mr. Molzahn.

Mr. Molzahn, Kunze and three others are charged with conspiring to hand over American military secrets to Germany and Japan.

The others were Dr. Otto Willumeit, of Chicago, Mid-West leader of the Bund; Dr. Wolfgang Ebell, of El Paso, Tex., and Anastase A. Vonsiatsky, Russian Fascist leader.

The Government charges that Mr. Molzahn used his parish house as a "postoffice" to further the ends of the other four.

Aroff Ends Testimony in Own Defense

By The Associated Press

San Francisco, Aug. 7.—Lieut. Comdr. Maurice N. Aroff concluded his court-martial defense today against charges of falsehood and scandalous conduct, including the allegation that he accepted as a gift a car from singer Tony Martin.

The former assistant in the office of Naval Officer Procurement of the 12th Naval District was the last defense witness.

Lieut. Irving Klein, judge advocate in the court-martial said the prosecution would call one rebuttal witness, Nat Goldstone, business agent for Martin. He will be heard Monday.

The six-judge court martial will devote tomorrow's session to a study of the record of testimony.

There was no hint of what the prosecution wanted to ask Goldstone. One of the charges against Aroff is that he accepted the car as "compensation and reward" for facilitating Martin's enlistment as chief specialist in the U. S. Naval Reserve.

Aroff testified he accepted the automobile only so he could sell it for Martin.

In an attempt to prove there was no basis for charges that Aroff presented false addresses for applicants for naval commissions, the defense read into the record a portion of a June, 1942, order of the Chief of the Bureau of Navy Personnel instructing the Director of Office Procurement "to accept applications from candidates regardless of home address."

The prosecution objected that the order was issued after commitment of the acts of which Aroff is accused. Lieut. C. Ray Robinson, defense attorney, declared that the directive was not a repeal of a previous order but "just a calarification and ratification of procedures followed by Capt. (Robert A.) White and his assistants."

Capain White was Aroff's superior in the office of Naval Procurement in San Francisco.

Gasoline Dealers Protest Coupon Rationing System

The executive committee of the Eastern States gasoline dealers conference yesterday condemned coupon rationing of gasoline in the East and urged a return to old system of dealer rationing "as it is now being successfully applied in Oregon and Washington," the Associated Press reported in a dispatch from New York.

The committee with members representing retailers from 11 eastern States held that the gasoline allotment to dealers need not be reduced more than 30 per cent.

In Washington, Harry Wainwright, research director of the District Gasoline Dealers Association, when informed of the committee's action, expressed the opinion that they had acted prematurely without giving coupon rationing a sufficient trial. Wainwright is a member of the conference, but did not attend the New York meeting.

Meanwhile in Dallas, Tex., it was reported that oil men and railroad executives hope soon to boost shipments of oil into the rationed areas of the East to 1,000,000 barrels daily by inaugurating through, fast schedules for a fleet of daily trains carrying nothing but oil.

Heretofore oil shipments have been handled in regular freight trains.

Since January 1, shipments of petroleum have increased ten-fold to an average of 800,000 barrels daily now over railroad lines from the southwestern fields to the Eastern seaboard.

C. F. Dowd of New Orleans, District chairman of the routine committee of ODT, said that fuel oil for homes and industry will make encroachments on the gasoline shipments to the East this winter and he sees no alleviation of the scarcity of gasoline on the East Coast by the present plan.

ty, and Campbell's near Fluvanna County line.

One of the first persons to reach the scene was Fire Chief Charles H. Page of Charlottesville who said he found wreckage strewn over a 3-acre plot. One motor, he said, was located in the edge of the woods while the plane's tail assembly was found more than an eighth of a mile distant.

In the woods imbedded in the earth, was one of the plane's wheels. The other wheel was found in the wreckage. Several parachutes, one of them partially burned, also were located in the crash area.

So loud was the explosion before the crash that farm folk residing as far as 3 miles distant said they thought a dynamite blast had been set off.

Wreckage Roped Off

Civil Air Patrol personnel from Milton airport reached the Dabney farm in midafternoon and roped off the wreckage to keep back hundreds of people who flocked to the scene. Several ambulances from Charlottesville were called, but permission to remove the torsos was refused pending the arrival of Army officers from Richmond.

fine. Maximum fine under the statute is $100.

Mason, who has consistently maintained at least an official tolerance of the spectacle at Riverside Stadium, issued a written statement to the press on the Nye bill, introduced in the Senate Thursday. He said:

"As an individual, I am neither for or against the bill. I would suggest, however, that those who seek its passage enlarge its scope by providing for the creation of a board to outlaw or control and regulate all moronic manifestations.

Will Report on Bill

"When Congress requests us to do so, the Commissioners will report on the bill."

Mason did not amplify his statement to give any indication of how his board would work. No particulars of how large the membership would be, or of what (besides walkathons) would be considered "moronic manifestations" were given.

His attitude toward the exhibition has been from the beginning that, since it is technically legal, the Commissioners are excused from taking any sort of action against it. Putting the walkathon in the same class as boxing and wrestling matches or burlesque shows, Mason said that it was "moronic but legal."

"Sure, it's a moronic exhibition," he said. "But you can't kep morons from enjoying themselves if they don't break any laws doing it."

Even an appeal from the Federation of Churches for legislative action to keep such "demoralizing" entertainment out of the Capital was completely disregarded by Mason, who, with the other two Commissioners, has been quite willing to leave this part of the District welfare up to Congress.

that from time to time there may be some employers who will seek to take advantage of their employes who are bound by the no-strike agreement."

He added that although strikes "have not reached any serious proportions, they nevertheless are shocking to the national morale and thoroughly in conflict with the nation's war efforts."

Stating that "they must stop," he declared that voluntary action by the workers themselves was the best way to prevent strikes.

"He should remember at all times, even when some justifiable grievance within his plant tries his soul and patience to the point of exasperation, that he must work on and not resort, along with his fellow workers, to a stoppage of war production. He must rely upon his Government to keep its pledge to him that impartial agencies and tribunals in which labor's representatives have a voice, along with industry, will continue to be available for the adjustment of his grievances in accordance with their merits."

Ohio Phone Strikers Return to Work

Cleveland, Aug. 7 (AP).—Ttelephone service was back to normal in northeastern Ohio tonight after 2100 striking maintenance employes of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. returned to work pending a War Labor Board hearing of their wage dispute.

Back to work also went hundreds of women telephone operators in Cleveland, Akron, Youngstown and Canton. Their refusal to cross picket lines yesterday impaired intrastate toll call service.

War Financing By Bond Sales Held Limited

By Charles O. Gridley
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Voluntary purchases of Government bonds will not be sufficient to finance the war effort beyond the end of this year, Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said yesterday in testimony before the Senate Finance Committee.

Speaking in support of modification of the capital gains tax, Schram was asked by Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan, whether he thought it safe to rely upon voluntary bond purchases of approximately 12 billion dollars annually by individuals and 30 billion dollars by banks as a means of meeting war costs.

"Perhaps it will be sufficient for this year, but I can't see it beyond that," Schram replied.

He agreed with Vandenberg that "forcing 30 billions annually into banks has a definite inflationary trend."

Hits Capital Gains Tax

The stock exchange head criticized the present capital gains tax, which allows no compensating credit for losses, as "unfair to the taxpayer, because the Treasury has its cake and eats it too." He argued that the best way to produce the most revenue from the capital gains tax is to make the rate low enough so that the tax will not deter the taxpayer from transferring his property, and thus speeding the general flow of capital.

Schram said he favored keeping the Capital gains tax at 15 per cent instead of the proposed 25 per cent as a means of encouraging people to shift their investments and pay more taxes. The result he believed, would be to check the "mischievous effect" of the capital gains tax as a stimulant toward inflation, demonstrated in the market boom of the late '20s.

Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, hit the jackpot in a demonstration of vending machines by spokesmen for their manufacturers, who opposed the $10 tax on such contrivances in the pending tax bill, but the members of the committee were not impressed.

Gets the Yellow Ball

Connally doubted an assertion that children putting pennies into vending machines for gum occasionally receive a yellow ball which entitled them to a 5 cent candy bar. When a machine was produced for demonstration, the Texas Senator got the yellow ball on the second try. He declined, however, to alter his contention that the machines should be taxed.

Representative Dewey (Republican) of Illinois, presented to the committee a tax refund plan intended to facilitate postwar rehabilitation of industry, which would turn back to corporation taxpayers from 3 to 5 per cent of the tax paid in any one year. Larger corporations would be refunded any amount over 80 per cent of their excess profits paid in taxes.

Foresees Inventory Crash

That time, he observed, would "probably coincide with the crash in inventory values." The bonds could also be accepted by the Treasury to meet up to 10 per cent of income tax payments, said Dewey, who is a former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Postwar credits in the form of nonnegotiable bonds were also proposed by John W. Hooper, representing the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce. Hooper assailed the 90 per cent excess profits tax as "absolutely ruinous."

A subcommittee of the Senate Finance Committee headed by Senator Brown (Democrat) of Michigan, will recommend revisions in the provisions of the House tax bill placing tax restrictions on pension trusts, to reduce the number of employes of a firm required to participate in such a trust from 70 to 56 per cent, Brown announced. The subcommittee proposed that a limit of 5 per cent of salaries exempted from taxation when paid into a pension fund would be retained, but that exceptions would be allowed where it could be proved that a larger payment was necessary to keep the pension plan actuarily sound.

Uruguayan Ship's Captain Is Taken Prisoner by Sub

By the Associated Press

Loss of a Uruguayan ship, a Norwegian freighter and a Panamanian merchant vessel, disclosed yesterday, increased the Associated Press tabulation of announced sinkings in the western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor to 418.

Thirteen crewmen of the Uruguayan craft revealed the torpedoing of their vessel when they were landed at Hamilton, Bermuda, by a United States warship which had picked up their lifeboat. Three other lifeboats which put out from the sinking vessel were not accounted for.

The men said their captain was taken prisoner by the submarine. This was the second such incident reported in the last eight days, the crew of a medium-sized American ship having disclosed July 30 that their skipper, 66-year-old Henry Stephenson of Larchmont, N. Y., was seized by a German submarine commander after the ship was sunk July 9.

Thirty-nine survivors from the Norwegian vessel, adrift in three lifeboats, were sighted and picked up by a British warcraft soon after the vessel went down.

They related that their ship, halted because of engine trouble, was attacked without warning June 27. Capt. Alf Amundsen ordered the vessel abandoned, but remained aboard with eight others, waiting for a chance to open fire on the raider as soon as it surfaced.

An hour later another torpedo struck and set the craft ablaze. Two seamen were lost in the explosion. Capt. Amundsen and the others leaped overboard and were picked up by the lifeboats, but the captain and second officer died soon after being landed.

Survivors said the submarine surfaced after the vessel went down and that an officer, Italian in appearance, queried them regarding the ship's name and destination.

The torpedoing and shelling of the Panamanian ship occurred early in June in the Gulf of Mexico. Survivors have been landed at an East Coast port.

One oiler was killed but 31 survivors were picked up by a rescue vessel within 15 minutes.

Johannes Hammerman, an Estonian seaman aboard the freighter, said two submarines lurked in the vicinity and he saw them exchange light signals. Two torpedoes ripped into the vessel.

Baltimore Yard Finishes Fleet of 50 Liberty Ships

Baltimore, Aug. 7 (AP).—The Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyard today completed its first Government contract for 50 Liberty ships with the launching of the S. S. William Tilghman.

The vessel, company officials said, was built in the record time of 48 days. The previous record for the Atlantic Coast was 51 days from keel-laying to launching.

The first ship under the contract, the S. S. Patrick Henry, required five months to be built.

Within the next few days, company officials said, all of the 50 ships called for under the Government's contract will have been delivered approximately eight months ahead of schedule.

Heavy Toll of Subs Continues, Briton Says

London, Aug. 7 (AP).—"We are continuing to take a very heavy toll of Axis submarines," A. V. Alexander first lord of the admiralty, told a London audience today, but explained that strategical considerations forbade publication of details.

"With the growing strength of escort ships of the United States fleet and the help we already had from our own air force and the gathering help we are getting from aircraft of the United Nations, this good work is going to go on."

Roosevelt Denies Mead Is Isolationist

President Roosevelt yesterday repudiated the contention made by political opponents of Senator James M. Mead, who is running for the Democratic nomination for Governor of New York, that Senator Mead is an isolationist.

At the President's press conference a reporter asked if he would comment on the statements of former Postmaster General James A. Farley and others that the New York Senator was an isolationist.

President Roosevelt replied that he was not talking politics and was not engaging in New York politics. But, he added, if Jim Mead is an isolationist, so is he.

Farley, as Democratic State chairman in New York, is backing Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., for the nomination, and is being opposed by Mead, with the express endorsement of the White House.

The nomination issue will be resolved later this month at the New York State Democratic convention at Brooklyn.

Mr. Roosevelt said he did not plan a special trip to his Hyde Park, N. Y., home to vote in next Tuesday's primary, because there was virtually no contest in his own Congressional district on the Democratic side.

He said, however, that if the law did not prevent it, he would like to vote in the Republican primaries in his home Congressional district at Hyde Park. This was a slam at Representative Hamilton Fish, who is a candidate for the Republican renomination.

Standard Oil 'Smear' Victim, Farish Charges

Declaring his company was being made the object of a "vicious smear campaign," William S. Farish, president of the Standard Oil Co (New Jersey) yesterday contradicted what he called "reckless assertions" made before the Senate Patents Committee by C. R. Starnes, Texas oil operator.

Starnes testified Wednesday that he had been blocked at every turn in his efforts to produce synthetic rubber, "blocked by Standard of New Jersey and men who are affiliated with and influenced by the Standard Oil."

Farish, in a telegram to Chairman Bone (Democrat), Washington, said he was at a los to understand why Bone permitted his committee to be used as a sounding board for "reckless, unsupported accusations."

"The charges involving Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey also cast doubt on the loyalty, the patriotism and the motives of many persons in key positions in the Government and in many private companies not connected with Standard," Farish said.

Denies Texas Co. Tieup

"An example of the glaring falsehoods and misrepresentations in yesterday's testimony which your counsel must have failed to explore or to verify, includes the charge 'that Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey now owns enough stock in the Texas Co. to control it.' There is no corporate relationship whatever between our company and the Texas Co.

"I also wish to contradict flatly Mr. C. R. Starnes' reckless assertions that my company is in any way denying him a license or withholding information on the manufacture of butyl rubber or flexon.

"Mr. Starnes formally applied to my company for information on the manufacture of butyl rubber on July 6," said Farish. "We sent him on July 8 all of the information which we could supply without violation of Government secrecy orders. At the same time we offered him an emergency form of license, as this was exactly what he asked for. Although we sent him a free license, in accordance with our public offer of March 10, 1942, Mr. Starnes has been objecting for the last three weeks to the form and scope of this license. Typical of his attitude was his complaint that the license offered was limited to the United States, its territories and its possessions.

Sees Controversy as Obstacle

"Like all Americans we want to get on with this war. We have hesitated to contribute in any way to prolong public controversy and name calling. But the abuses of Democratic privilege and procedures, which occurred at yesterday's hearing, must be promptly and openly branded for what they are or we shall be in danger of losing the very things this Nation is fighting for."

Farish said "the most slanderous statements" given the committee by Starnes "were torn from the press release, and these mutilated copies were actually distributed to the press in your committee room by your own committee counsel. Your counsel can hardly plead that he was unaware of the wild and scurrilous nature of the statements the witness was going to make . . .

"The circumstances of the witness' appearance are peculiar. Even though you personally stated that he had appeared on his own initiative it is a singular coincidence that the testimony of this man was presented on the identical mimeographed set-up as had been the testimony of previous witnesses, presented under the committee's sponsorship."

President Signs Bill To Develop Outposts

A measure authorizing expenditure of $974,634,000 to develop United States naval outposts and to provide funds for "a kind of secret weapon" was signed into law yesterday by President Roosevelt.

During the debate on the bill in the House, Chairman Vinson (Democart) of Georgia, declared that 30 million dollars was earmarked for "a kind of secret training and a kind of secret weapon." He said that for reasons of military secrecy he could not elaborate on that statement.

Strangers in Capital Have Opportunity To Hear Voices From Home Communities, Old Residents Chance to Make New Friends

To Washington churches from far and near will come many guest speakers tomorrow, giving old residents of the Capital opportunity to hear new voices, while new residents may hear a voice from home.

Churches playing host to guest pastors, most of them in the absence of their own ministers on vacation, are here classified for the benefit of the newcomers.

If you're from New Jersey: Takoma Baptist Church will be the place to go, the speaker there at 11 a. m. will be the Rev. Charles E. Deems, pastor of the Livingston Avenue Baptist Church in New Brunswick, N. J. Mr. Deems and the Rev. William Earl La Rue, the regular pastor at Piney Branch Road and Aspen Street Northwest, were fellow students at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School at Rochester, N. Y.

The last issue of the "Expositor," an interdenominational monthly, carried a picture of the Gothic entrance of the Takoma Park Baptist Church and a service written by Mr. La Rue for the dedication of new hymn books at the church in June. Mr. La Rue's vacation plans are indefinite, but he invited his old friend to come here tomorrow from Baltimore, where the latter is vacationing.

If you're from New Mexico: Dr. William S. Dando, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Carlsbad, N. Mex., will be guest preacher tomorrow and the two following Sundays at Georgetown Presbyterian Church, 3115 P Street Northwest, where Dr. John Bailey Kelly is the regular pastor.

If you're from Illinois: The Augustana Lutheran Church, New Hampshire and V Street Northwest, will hear Arthur Frieberg of the Augustana Theological Seminary at Rock Island, Ill., at 11 a. m. Sunday school will be at 9:45 a. m. as usual.

Cole of the historic Second Church of Boston, Mass., will preach at the union service in All Souls' Church (Unitarian), Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, at 11 a. m. Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and the Universalist National Memorial Church are cooperating.

Mr. Cole is well-known to university, forum and general audiences throughout the country as an interpreter of the underlying currents of contemporary life. His new book, "Realistic Courage," published in May, is analysis of the sources of faith and courage in the American heritage needed to beat the strategy of Hitlerism. Dr. Hastings Commences Pastorate Here

Special events this week, both religious and social, at National City Christian Church will mark the beginning of the ministry of Dr. J. Warren Hastings, who succeeds Dr. W. H. Pinkerton, interim minister since the resignation of Dr. R. H. Miller in November, 1941.

Dr. Hastings commences his pastorate at morning worship service tomorrow speaking on "The Heart of the Matter." Official installation services will be held Wednesday at 7:45 p. m. with many prominent persons from the Disciples of Christ Brotherhood taking part in the ceremony.

A reception for the new minister and his wife will be held tomorrow from 7:30 to 10 p. m. at the Vermont Avenue Church building, and there will be a reception and tea in honor of Mrs. Hastings at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Buford Tuesday afternoon from 4 to 7 p. m.

Dr. Hastings comes to Washington from Seattle, Wash., where he was for eight years the pastor of the University Christian Church, one of the largest churches of the Disciples of Christ denomination in the country.

A native of Baltimore, Dr. Hastings served in the Navy in the first World War. He received his A. B. degree from Lynchburg College in 1924 and the Bachelor of Divinity degree from Yale University in 1927. From September, 1927, until June, 1929, he studied at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, where he received his Ph. D. degree. Since that time he has held important pastorates in Hopewell, Va., Savannah, Ga., and Seattle.

Special music for the Sunday morning service will be "Light of the World, We Hail Thee," sung by the full choir with three trumpeters, and an alto solo, "Come to Me," sung by Mrs. Emily Lou Tooley.

Rev. R. P. Black Will Preach At Cathedral

At the 11 o'clock service of morning prayer the canon chancellor, the Rev. Theodore O. Wedel, will preach. He will also speak at the outdoor service on the north porch of the cathedral at 7:30 p. m.

Mr. Black is one of a group of diocesan clergymen who have been invited to fill the cathedral pulpit on Sunday afternoons during the summer months. Rector of Christ Church for the past two years, he came to Rockville from the Chapel of the Intercession of Trinity Church in New York. He studied at Lehigh University and at the General Theological Seminary in New York.

Tomorrow evening's service is one of a series which is being held in order to provide an additional opportunity for worship for the Federal workers of the city and will feature congregational singing, prayers and the address by Canon Wedel. A brass group will accompany the familiar hymns to be sung by the congregation. The congregation is invited to remain after the service and continue hymn singing on the cathedral lawn. The north porch, on which the service is held, is the newly completed entrance to the cathedral at Woodley Road and Thirty-sixth Street.

Evening tours through the cathedral will continue throughout the month of August, with the church open on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 9 p. m. An organ recital will also be played on each of those evenings.

Mrs. Wurts Tells Experience At Winnipesaukee Ashram

From the American Christian Ashram at Geneva Point Camp, Lake Winnipesaukee, N. H., comes a letter from Mrs. Eleanora Wurts, 28, who lives at 430 North Buchanan Street, Arlington, Va.

MRS. WURTS

Mrs. Wurts, a member of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, is a leader in the young adult group at that church and a member of its Rustin Class.

Ashrams were introduced in this country through contacts with India by the Department of Evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The origin of the Ashram as described by Dr. E. Stanley Jones of India, is a forest school where a spiritual preceptor with his disciples would go aside in discipline spiritual search for God. The two-week period which Mrs. Wurts is attending ends August 15. Her letter follows:

Dear Church Editor:

As the multitudes gathered by the lake to hear Christ, so 150 individuals have gathered by Lake Winnipesaukee under the leadership of Brother Stanley (Dr. Jones) to find Christ as the answer to all their needs.

We form an organism, not an organization—which is a cameo of the Kingdom of God. Each individual is expected to become a cell of the kingdom. We believe that the Ashram can be a leaven which will permeate the life of churches.

We are undertaking to get down certain barriers which exist between God and us and between one another; the barrier between races; the barrier of class, and the barrier between the leaders and those who are led.

Sunday evening many of us expressed to the group our needs for the Ashram. I expressed a need to discipline my mind (God forgive me for so many idle thoughts and words), and to place my prayer life on an international basis. Although I have had a very satisfying personal prayer life, I recognize the need of the world for intercessory prayer of Christians everywhere.

Christ is the answer to all our needs, but we must learn to hear Him speak to us, and so it is necessary for many of us to form new habits so that we will be listening to God instead of telling him what he already knows.

For victorious living,

Fan Mail Indicates Rising Religious Feeling

A possible indication of renewed interest in religion since December 7 is in the steady increase in fan mail addressed to Joe Emerson, whose "Hymns of All Churches" program is heard on N. B. C. network Mondays through Thursdays at 2:45 p. m.

Emerson, an aviator in the first World War and a millionaire until the 1929 crash sent him back to singing for a living, says he notes a deepening of religious faith in these letters since America's entry into World War II, N. B. C. reports.

Many Attending Baha'i Open Forum

An encouragingly large turnout has been reported for the open forum and free public-speaking class which the Washington Baha'i Assembly is sponsoring each Friday night at 8 o'clock at Baha'i Hall, 504 Albee Building.

On Sunday mornings at 11 o'clock there is a class to study the teachings of Baha'u'llah, the founder of the Baha'i faith. During August Mrs. Maude Sawyer Taylor, the wife of Dr. Alfred H. Taylor, is in charge of the Sunday morning classes.

Evangelist to Preach At Cherrydale Baptist

A week's evangelistic services will be opened tomorrow by Pastor-Evangelist L. E. Holtzbach of Ivor, Va., at Cherrydale Baptist Church in Arlington, Va. He will speak at both the 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. services tomorrow and nightly during the week at 8 p. m.

Servicemen's Special Program At Fifth Baptist

Honoring men now in the armed service from Fifth Baptist Church, a special evening program tomorrow has been arranged at the church, 609 E Street Southwest. Families of the men will sit in a reserved section, and a service flag with a star for each man will be presented. The roll will be called.

Chaplain A. H. Manes and Chaplain B. F. Beckham will make brief addresses. Appropriate music will be under the direction of the Rev. J. Herrick Hall.

At 11 a. m. Dr. John E. Briggs will speak on "The Whole Armour of God." The Bible school will convene at 9:30 a. m. E. C. McReady will teach the Darlington-Berea class; Mr. Hall, the Mooney Baraca class, and Mrs. Elizabeth Mooney, the Philathea class.

Youth Choir Featured

Two services, both featuring music by the youth choir, will be held at John Wesley A. M. E. Zion Church, Fourteenth and Corcoran Streets Northwest, tomorrow. Dr. Stephen Gill Spottswood, minister, has chosen "The Sins of Mankind" for his topic at 11 a. m., and "The Day of Salvation" for his 8 o'clock sermon.

Cornerstone Laid for New Trinity Church at Alexandria

The cornerstone of a new building for Alexandria's oldest Methodist Church, Trinity, was laid last night by the Alexandria-Washington Masonic Lodge, using George Washington's trowel, which in 1793 was used on the United States Capitol building.

The cornerstone ritual of the Methodist Church was used, starting with the hymn, "The Church's One Foundation." Invocation was by the Rev. A. P. William, superintendent of the Alexandria district of the Methodist Church.

Announcement of the deposits made with the stone was made by the pastor, the Rev. John H. Blakemore, jr., preceding the actual laying of the stone by Erdman T. Stulz, worshipful master of Alexandria-Washington Lodge No. 22.

The new building now in progress will be Trinity's third house of worship and is being built from the materials including hand-pressed brick, from the old church on Washington Street, where the church was located for 138 years.

Trinity's history goes back to 1763 and the first Methodist preacher in America, Robert Strawbridge, whose daughter was married to William Watters, America's first native-born regular Methodist preacher and pastor of Trinity for three years.

In 1774 a Methodist society of 12 members was organized under the leadership of John Littlejohn, an 18-year-old boy. Alexandria went through a phenomenal growth between 1790 and 1800, being then a part of the District, and Trinity expanded with it. In 1803 a new church on Washington Street was built under the pastorate of Mr. Watters.

Since the Civil War, however, Trinity has suffered, being identified as the "Northern Methodist Church" in a town of rich Southern heritage. By 1940 it was so weak that either closing or merging was considered necessary. However, the church was relocated by authority of the District committee on building and locations in one of the most attractive communities in Alexandria where only 13 per cent of the territory is now aligned with any local church.

While the new building is under construction, services are held in a temporary building at the rear of the property.

The Young People will meet for discussion at 9:45 p. m. following the evening service. On Wednesday, the hour of the open heart service will be held with Mr. Schnabel in charge.

'Adam and Christ,' Dr. Halloman's Topic

Dr. J. L. S. Halloman will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Second Baptist Church, Third Street between H and I Streets Northwest, on "Adam and Christ." "Spirit" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. All are cordially invited to attend the Church services including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 p. m.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "The hearing ear and the seeing eye, the Lord hath made even both of them." (Proverbs 20:12.)

The lesson-sermon includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Sight, hearing, all the spiritual senses of man, are eternal. They cannot be lost. Their reality and immortality are in the Spirit and understanding, not in matter—hence their permanence." (Page 486.)

Rev. Isaac to Speak

The Rev. F. R. Isaac, superintendent of the Strawbridge Home for Boys, will be guest speaker at 11 a. m. tomorrow at Emory Methodist Church, 6100 Georgia Avenue Northwest. Ban On Walkathons

Senator McNary, acting for Senator Nye, has introduced a bill designed to put a stop to physical endurance contests that take the form of so-called marathons, walkathons and skatathons. If the bill were enacted, there would be no way of getting around police regulations and staging such disgusting exhibitions on a 24-hour basis for weeks at a time. Under the bill endurance contests of the kind listed would be limited to four hours within any 24-hour period. And persons participating in, attending, promoting, advertising, operating or maintaining such shows would be punished by fine or imprisonment or both, if they violated the provisions of the proposed law.

Legislation of this type is needed not only to suppress walkathons but to put a stop to numerous other types of so-called entertainment which panders to a morbid human desire to witness the sufferings of other human beings or watch daredevils risk life and limb in the performance of hair-raising stunts. Entertainment depending for its mass appeal upon the knowledge that the performers are liable to be killed or seriously injured may not become a focal point for other undesirable activities or a means of corrupting youth to the same extent as professional endurance contests like walkathons. Nevertheless, death-defying feats undertaken for pay are barbaric extrusions upon our veneer of civilization and ought not to be tolerated.

In practice, it is comparatively easy to draw a line between the kind of entertainment that satisfies a natural love for spectacular and unusual exhibitions of physical skill and daring, and the kind of show that appeals to baser instincts. In communities where the local authorities either will not or cannot intervene to suppress the latter type of exhibitions, legislative prohibitions of a sweeping nature are required to protect both the people who provide entertainment and those who pay for it. We hope, therefore, that the Senate bill will not only pass, but that its prohibitions will be extended to cover a good deal more than the particular evils at which it is aimed.

The Rubber Committee

The American public—apart from pressure groups pursuing their own selfish ends—will undoubtedly breathe a collective sigh of relief on hearing that a survey of the rubber situation is to be entrusted to competent hands. Heading the investigating committee appointed by the President is Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board during the first World War. The other two members are distinguished scientists—Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, and Dr. Karl F. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. This is an ideal combination for the purpose in hand. For the problem with which the committee has to deal calls for experienced men with differing qualifications. Mr. Baruch possesses the administrative experience in Government work and the first-hand knowledge of production problems that are required. His two colleagues have the scientific training needed to throw light on the controversy raging about our synthetic rubber program.

Clearly no member of the newly constituted committee has any political or personal stake in the outcome of the investigation entrusted to them. Their sole interest lies in arriving at decisions that, in their considered judgment, will best further our war efforts. To a public bewildered by contradictory testimony concerning the seriousness of our rubber shortages, authoritative, disinterested advice such as the committee members are capable of giving is essential to restore public confidence in the wisdom of the policies that are being followed or that will hereafter be decided upon.

In his persuasive message vetoing the bill to create an independent rubber supply agency, the President pointed out that such a separate agency would entail disruption of a unified and expeditious production program. Even if the bill had not been grossly defective in other respects, it would stand condemned as an attempt to divide authority. In setting up an expert board of inquiry the President is not doing violence to his own arguments against division of responsibility. For in this case the delegation of power is only temporary and for the specific purpose of resolving internal and external conflicts that have prevented the WPB from dealing effectively with the rubber situation. By appointing the committee the President has also made concessions to justified demands for positive action and improved the chances that his veto will be sustained.

Insincere Appeal

The working committee of the All-India Congress Party has voted to address an appeal to President Roosevelt, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassador to London, to support its demands that India be given immediate independence by Great Britain.

These individuals, be it noted, are not being asked to give their advice as to how the differences between the British government and the Congress Party regarding the independence question can best be overcome. They are not being asked to arbitrate or mediate. The Congress Party, apparently, does not trust the sincerity, objectivity and good faith of these individuals to that extent. They are merely being urged to play the role of a collective bludgeon with which to dragoon the British into pursuing a course of action which the British government has no intention of pursuing at this critical juncture and which, in the interests of all concerned, it could not possibly afford to pursue.

Submission to the blackmail tactics of Mohandas Gandhi and his deluded followers could only be destructive of the interests of the United Nations engaged as they are in a life and death struggle with Japan and her partners; of Great Britain; not least of India. The only answer that could properly be given to this egregious appeal is to remind the Congress Party that India's future is inextricably bound up with the fate of the Allies, that the only hope of independence which India has lies in an Allied victory.

In the meantime, Gandhi himself has come forward with a statement insisting that he has never been anything but pro-British, pro-Ally, firm in his conviction of the ultimate triumph of the United Nations. His present actions, as his past expressions, belie these words. Why is it that the independence issue, after having been allowed to slumber during the months when India was remote from the scene of danger, was suddenly raised and in peremptory and threatening fashion, the moment Japan began knocking at India's gates? The answer can only be that the Congress Party leaders saw the plight of the United Nations as their opportunity. That our plight was also India's plight never seems to have occurred to them. To get immediate independence they are prepared to risk the certainty of plunging India, as Sir Stafford Cripps has pointed out, into "chaos and confusion." To be sure, they are now insisting that if India were given her immediate freedom she would at once jump into the fray against the Axis with both feet. But India would be more certain of freedom if this suggested sequence were reversed. Full and active support for the war effort would hasten and make certain the achievement of freedom for India.

Even in the relatively recent past Britain's treatment of India has not been all it should be. Things were done which should not have been done; other things were left undone which should have been done sooner. But we need only compare British rule in India with the rule of the Japanese in Korea and that of Hitler in Europe to make the former stand out in contrast as the acme of decency and enlightenment. A correspondent whose letter appears on this page chides The Post for not facing "the honest fact that she (India) has no freedom to sacrifice." But this statement is neither honest nor a fact. Indeed the best commentary on it is to be found in the fact cited by our correspondent that in the "open election" of 1937 the Congress Party captured 8 out of the 11 independent provinces in British India.

How many "open elections" have been held in Korea since the Japanese annexed that country or in Poland after Hitler came in? And where in those countries or other Axis-dominated areas could Gandhi, Nehru and their followers meet publicly to expound their demands and voice their threats?

There are degrees of freedom and India today is obviously not as free as she might be, but she is not enslaved as she certainly will be if the Congress Party, which prates so much of freedom, throws in its weight on the side of the forces that would enslave all mankind. Unless and until the party alters its policies Americans who regard nothing more important than victory for the United Nations will continue to view Gandhi and his followers as the witting or unwitting tools of the Axis.

Family Savings

A sample survey by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of family income and expenditures in our cities has led to some rather surprising discoveries. During the first three months of the current year, family incomes rose on the average 7 per cent above the first quarter of 1941. But contrary to what might have been expected in a period of rapidly rising employment and expanding payrolls, accompanied by rising living costs, savings soared about 70 per cent above the level of the preceding year. The general increase in savings was so large, Secretary Perkins reports, that it represented about two-thirds of the increase in total consumer income.

There was not only an absence of the lavish spending that characterized the boom period of World War I. There was on the whole an actual reduction in the quantity of goods and services bought for current consumption in the first quarter of 1942. Although outlays for food increased, expenditures lagged behind the rise in food prices. This indicated that actual food consumption was less or that cheaper foods were being bought in 1942 than in 1941. The averages, to be sure, cover up some "bad" spots in the family income groups below $1500. Families in this class were forced by the rise in living costs to spend more, even though their incomes had not changed. Some in this low-income group, who had suffered loss of income, indeed, piled up debts in order to cover living costs.

It is much too soon to say whether the sudden rise in savings reflects a trend that will be maintained, or whether it results from a temporary hesitancy to spend more money, due to a feeling of insecurity engendered by long years of depression. Moreover part of the saved income may be funds temporarily laid by for lack of customary expenditure outlets, such as automobiles and durable household goods. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, families with incomes above $1500 did considerable anticipatory buying last year of automobiles, house furnishings and clothing. So the present emphasis on savings may be followed by a spending splurge when recently acquired possessions begin to deteriorate.

However, one of the strongest reasons for assuming that a later craze for spending will not dissipate hard-won earnings is found in the growing scarcity of the kind of goods that people usually want first of all when their incomes rise. With most articles in daily use subject to price controls, with an expansion of rationing in prospect and bans on production of numerous nonessential articles, it requires considerable imagination to find satisfying ways of spending "new" money. Add to that a patriotic wish to buy war bonds, and the basis is laid for continuing substantial increases in savings.

Although the motives that induce people to save can only be surmised, the facts concerning the amounts actually being spent and saved by typical city families provide a fund of valuable information for the guidance of Governmental policy makers. For certain purposes it is more important for them to know the amount of income available for a family group than the amount an individual is earning. The Treasury, for example, needs to know a great deal about family income and spending habits in order to determine how much wage-earners can be expected to contribute to the war-bond campaign after paying taxes. The facts about family income and expenditures assembled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics also throw light on problems of price and credit control, wage regulation, the yield and incidence of consumption taxes, and a host of related issues.

With the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture working to bring up to date similar information about incomes and expenditures of farm families, it should be possible to gain much-needed insight into what people are doing with their money while a war is in progress. The more we know the easier it will be to direct spending along lines that aid the war effort and leave a maximum amount of saved income available for bond purchases.

Scrap Depots

The salvaging of scrap needed in our war effort cannot be a matter of occasional campaigns followed by long periods of neglect and inactivity. The effort must be continuous. But hitherto one of the obstacles that has stood in the way of such a continuous effort has been the lack of salvage depots to which the patriotic householder could bring his rubber, metal and other scrap. Fortunately, this obstacle, so far as Washington is concerned, is by way of being corrected. The local salvage committee has announced that a thousand or more depots will be established throughout the city to which scraps can be brought. It is now up to Washingtonians to see that a steady flow of scrap rubber, tin, iron, and other scrap materials is maintained. The responsibility is ours.

CRABAPPLE JELLY

Apportion this sugar and rose and amber
Frugally. One Northern year
Spent in sight of the hills last summer
Is sealed in a crystal jar.
Hold it up to the light and listen—
Hear the wind in the naked trees
Brittle with ice. The spring mists glisten
On lichen and new green leaves. The bees
Yellow with pollen, vibrant, humming,
Shake each flower-clustered bough.
Set it down in the sun. Faint thrumming
Of August music disturbs it now.
This is a glass of heat and rain,
And earth the spreading old tree dapples
With shadow, and birds that must fly South again

Letters To The Editor

Sales Tax Stamps

1. The Government wants money.

2. The Government wants (a) to cut down civilian spending, and (b) to foster civilian saving.

3. The Government wants to keep down the cost of living.

The logical but not the complete answer is that we should have a retail sales tax which would accomplish 1 and 2 (a). I have a proposal which I have not seen made elsewhere (though it easily may have been) which comes close to satisfying all these Government desires.

Place a sales tax on all retail purchases—and require the seller to pay the buyer the amount of this tax in savings stamps. The slogan "take your change in war stamps" would then be "get back your tax in war stamps."

The collection of this levy would be simplicity itself and require the minimum of bookkeeping both private and public.

Politically, this form of forced saving might take the curse off of the sales tax. It would not increase the cost of living, for the increase would go not on the price of food and clothes, but into a savings fund which could be recovered with interest. HAROLD T. PULSIFER.

Let Heroes Act

I am not a military expert but I do think that we had better soon get down to the business of winning this war. Let's stop bringing our heroes half way around the world to decorate them. Give them the decoration after we have conquered our enemies.

Tokyo was bombed in April and since then General Doolittle has been on a sightseeing tour and vacation. The same for O'Hara and Bulkley. Let's cut out vacations until such heroes as Wainwright, Devereux, etc., are freed.

Hitler doesn't recall Rommel to decorate him and we can't deny he is doing a job greater than any we have done so far. Timoshenko is still on the job. Let's get hard boiled and get this thing over with fast. M. LEISH.

Waste At Muscle Shoals

In re an article published in your paper of the 3d, written by Walter Leckrone and titled "Our Rubber Bottleneck," may we at Muscle Shoals suggest the utilization of Nitrate Plant No. 1, owned by the Government and built during the last World War. This is an ideal plant for such production, has been well preserved and most of the buildings are of permanent construction. This would solve immediately the plant erection, labor and material scarcity.

This plant is situated on Tennessee River, adjacent to Sheffield, Ala., and comprises some 1700 acres of land, on which is located the huge nitrate plant, a steam-electric plant of 6000 H. P. and a village of approximately 125 stucco and tile roof modern homes. Most of the buildings are of the industrial type, built of masonry and reinforced concrete and steel. There are also several large steel buildings.

Congress recently appropriated two million dollars for an addition to this steam plant.

This is an ideal layout for a rubber industrial plant, and the Government should either take it over and operate it, or turn it over to private industry, that can and will make and manufacture synthetic or natural rubber, so essential to winning the war.

Here is a plant already up—all it needs is the installation of the necessary machinery and equipment. The nitrate plant, having been declared obsolete, all of the machinery and equipment for making nitrates has been removed, nothing but empty buildings, with the exception of the steam electrical plant, which is equipped and has been in operation.

If this plant cannot be utilized, then why not wreck the existing buildings and use the steel, badly needed in our war efforts? This huge waste should be stopped at Muscle Shoals. Donald Nelson says "Waste is treason."

Why can't the Government advertise this piece of industrial property, get in some buyers or leasees, same as any private enterprise would do. HARRY J. FRAHN.

Split Our Foes' Forces

You and your staff are to be congratulated for your wonderful work in asking for a second front. It is the duty of every American to join with The Washington Post in demanding a second front and to condemn the conservative, Fascist-siding attitude of "as long as we're not invaded why attack?"

The American people have raised their voices in angry protests over the betrayal of Ethiopia, Czechoslovakia, China and of heroic Spain, who begged the democracies for aid to make Spain the tomb of fascism. Today another great democracy is fighting bravely for its life against the same barbaric murderer. This democracy is the Soviet Union, which since its founding, has fought the enemies of freedom.

If Russia loses the war it means that the entire weight of our enemies will be thrown against us. It is therefore imperative that we establish a second front now in order to split the forces of our hated foes.

Disgraceful Walkathon

Most heartily and sincerely do I commend you for your splendid editorial on the Walkathon. I think it most disgraceful and I hope that another one will never be permitted in our Nation's Capital. Surely there can be some legislation enacted to prevent it.

India Has No Freedom

Your recent editorials on India, and in particular your editorial of August 6 demonstrates a point of view which has led Nehru and other Indians to a complete distrust of official American policy as well as the attitude of the American press. Some Americans disagree with you.

Your editorial of August 6, by quoting out of context documents illegally seized by the British government, charged that Gandhi was "prepared to sacrifice India, India's independence, the United Nations, the Congress Party itself, in order to test out his doctrine of nonviolence." Perhaps you have a special insight into Gandhi's mind, but your statement simply does not jibe with the recorded facts.

It was clear from the rest of the material that was released by the British that Gandhi did not propose surrender to Japan. He stated that noncooperation in places where the British and Japanese were fighting would be "fruitless and unnecessary." He further commented that "not to put any obstacle in the way of British forces will often be the only way of demonstrating our noncooperation with the Japanese."

Perhaps you may not agree with Gandhi that noncooperation is the best way to get rid of an old aggressor, England, or resist a new aggressor, Japan, but why not at least be honest in dealing with the facts of the case?

I note that you take on yourself the responsibility of speaking for the United Nations. I do not believe, however, that you or Herbert Agar or the other "spokesmen" can speak for China, an important part of the United Nations alliance in Asia. Various Chinese government publications have advocated immediate independence for India. They, surely, have more at stake than we have. Why not speak for yourself, and not even take on yourself the responsibility of speaking for the United States Government?

In the light of history, the British Empire has been fortunate in having to deal with such leaders of a subject people as Gandhi and Nehru. Year after year since 1927—count the occasions—Gandhi and others have warned the British that India would be no party to any future war unless she was first consulted and unless she had her independence. But on the outbreak of this war, Gandhi suspended his 20-year-old struggle for freedom and adopted a policy of nonembarrassment. At the eleventh hour, after Singapore had fallen, Cripps hurried to India once again to make promises. You will have to admit that by now British promises are tarnished and without honor to the Indian people. Now, logically, the Congress Party says a fight for freedom can only be waged by a free people.

You write as if independence for India would equal civil war, riots, and other awful nightmares. As a matter of record, you might mention to your readers that the Indian National Congress Party, captured 8 out of the 11 independent provinces in British India in an open election in 1937, under a British-made constitution. While there may be controversy between some Moslems and some Hindus, it is a little far-fetched to say that there will be a holy war between the two if the British power were to be removed. Again, it is a matter of record that the Congress Party is in control of the Northwest Frontier Province which is 95 per cent Moslem. Actually, the Moslem League can claim the political allegiance of less than one-fourth of the Moslem community. In the 1937 election referred to above, out of the 482 seats provided for the representatives of the Moslem community, only 110 Moslems were elected on the league's ticket. These are facts which have not been considered by those who condemn Indian independence now.

You say that "in joining forces with the United Nations, India would not be sacrificing her freedom but would be only making its achievement possible." Why not face the honest fact that she has no freedom to sacrifice? A free India need not wait on the military defeat of the Axis; it needs only a word from England.

The shame of many Americans is that men of influence would align our Government on the side of ancient aggression in order to combat current aggression. Imperialism is the same whether the fault is ours, our Allies', or America's enemies'. If you really want a United Nations, then speak now for an India which is free, thereby strengthened to unite against German fascism or Japanese militarism. ALBERT W. HAMILTON.

The Post Impressionist

Believe It Or Not

The favorite superstition of us Government workers is that the gods—who do the inundating jobs—sit behind their streamlined desks, feet propped high for good circulation, eyes glued to an earthclock marked "Washington" and await our home-going time before they give the let-loose signal. It was one of those chosen rainy days that was a red letter day for me.

On that day I carried my head a bit higher, my back five degrees straighter, and smiled more often. No matter I interpolated these new postures with fits of sneezing. And it wasn't rose fever, hay fever, or asthma. It was the common variety of cold with undercurrents of fever. But I carried such embellishments to my tract respiratory like a mere handbag that had tied itself onto my wrist. There was no checking my exuberance.

For on that day I became an occupant of the stenographers' Shangri-La—the "front office." I was fresh from the "pool" where the entire room is punctuated by long, flat, steel surfaces with pedestals jutting out for typewriters, sometimes eight of them beating it out. Adjustable chairs, a poster warning "The Enemy Is Listening," and a pristine calendar complete the functional scheme. A room for working, not for impressing. And now, just two in an office with carpeted space for turning handsprings, or breathing.

The day was a succession of "Bring your book," transcription, calls for messengers—"It's a rush," aspirin; dictation, transcription, aspirin; answering telephones, swallow another aspirin. At 5:30 I didn't know whether the carpet was contributing to the floating feeling, or whether it was exhilaration over new duties. I had lapped them up like the proverbial kitten and cream. This was when I discovered the rainstorm. And I sat at my desk watching the fury when the chief walked out for the day. Said I, "I'm going to wait until the storm lets up." And he smiled a "Good night."

The rain had a steadiness of the siege on Sevastopol. At 6:30 Dupont 6200 took a long time answering . . . "Sorry," very efficiently, "There are no cabs." I could venture forth, but it would be a flirtation with a sore throat. And who am I to be on sick leave the second day at Shangri-La? A visit to the pantry shelf in the basement, and I fortified myself with hot coffee and sandwiches.

At 7:30 I tried the cab company again. But the response was disheartening. What I needed was a friend who would step out into the storm, travel to my home, find my coat, galoshes and umbrella, and perhaps use his last portion of gasoline to take me home. Yeah, I needed such a friend. And I thought longingly of a certain Class 1-A young man to whom I had said adios at Union Station three evenings ago.

Then I put myself to work on a long copy job. But my sniffles reminded me I had some doctoring to do if I were to appear next day. I telephoned the inadequate cab company again at 8:30. Even the prospect of a fare out Chevy Chase way did not make a cab appear. What I needed was a pumpkin, six white mice and a fairy godmother. I mean a soft, warm bed, a hot toddy at home, and a cab to take me there.

So I did the next best thing—I consulted with the charwoman. That I spend the night in this huge office building she thought was a good idea. It never occurred to her I should be frightened. Being frightened at night was not part of her job. On her rounds, she had seen a blanket in an office down the hall. I found it, folded neatly next to a Red Cross kit, and I prepared for the night.

If a body 5 feet 6¾ inches long lies across the top of a desk only 6 feet long, there is bound to be either a head or two feet dangling over. Maybe this can't be proven by a geometric equation, but it's so. And if you try it you'll find that this dangling over can be remedied by lying diagonally across two desks. I also found that my right innominate bone is covered with at least 1 inch more avoirdupois than the left. I therefore let my right side take the burden. At 10:30 the washing machine going full blast down the corridor, or the inner craving for a warm bed, awakened me. The rain was beating a steady tattoo. I didn't even try the cab company again. I was too bleary to move in my blanket cocoon . . . Out of the past came an incident I had heard many times in my growing-up days . . . When my big brother returned from World War I to our old rambling house in the country, it was late at night, and he hesitated disturbing the silence. The door was unlocked—as doors are in the country—and Charlie spent the night in the living room. Using his Marine Corps bonnet as a pillow, he relaxed his 6 feet of length on the huge oblong piano, and the story always included the remark that he had spent a very comfortable night. Well, thought I, Charlie could appreciate my position now. But what's a hard slab when I could avoid a sore throat? With that comforting thought, I switched to my fatter side and dreamed dreams of all the people I ever knew. They all visited me in that office. Maybe Freud would say I was lonely. Maybe Freud would say I was uncomfortable. But I was getting the requisite eight hours and warding off a sore throat.

At 6:30 I was wide awake, but lazily remained in bed to 7. My cold was much improved, and after the usual dose of orange juice and java at the department cafeteria, I was comfortably ensconced at my desk at 8:30, reading the morning journal and feeling quite tiptop.

When the chief walked in I chirped "Good morning." And he paused for a moment. He had left me there the night before. And I at least 30 minutes early this morning!

"Have you been here all night?" he queried, not even waiting for an answer.

I didn't know the question was rhetorical and I answered, "Yes." I had caught the chief before he closed the door.

"You don't expect me to believe that," he laughed, and the door shut. Then I was stumped. No, I guess I couldn't expect him to believe that!

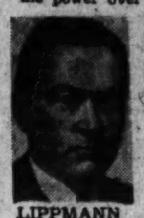
DOROTHEA JOSEPH.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Nelson Could Fail Badly

IN HIS excellently clear and firm message about rubber, the President had occasion to describe the power over materials which he delegated to Mr. Nelson seven months ago. The question is whether Mr. Nelson has as yet organized the War Production Board to do its work successfully. The question is no longer merely theoretical. The returns are now coming in, and with them the testimony of practical men in the war industries, in the armed services, and in Mr. Nelson's own organization. The answer is that the system of priorities, through which with only a few exceptions Mr. Nelson operates, is bankrupt, and will have to be radically reorganized.



LIPPMANN

The clear proof that the system is bankrupt is that even very high priority ratings do not insure the delivery of materials. These priorities are in effect a kind of money which, when it is issued to the contractor, is supposed to give the contractor the power to purchase critical materials. In fact, the priorities have been issued in such profusion that they are becoming as worthless as any other inflated money. They have lost their purchasing power, and in this exact sense of the words, Mr. Nelson's system of priorities is bankrupt.

THE BASIC TROUBLE with the system is that Mr. Nelson has used the powers delegated to him as if he were a superior purchasing agent in Sears Roebuck, deciding how much the hardware buyer, the men's clothing buyer, the women's clothing buyer, should each buy for the next few months. What is actually needed in addition to a superior purchasing agent is a production manager, and that is precisely what Mr. Nelson is not, and this is precisely the kind of deputy that he will have to find.

The function of the production manager was described last September by the president of General Motors, Mr. C. E. Wilson: "Years ago in the automobile business we learned how to schedule the flow of material and the production of parts, and that is really the essential of the mass-production idea. It isn't conveyors that are so important. It is really a planning of the business on a progressive flow of material."

Either Mr. Nelson has not appreciated the need to organize the scheduled flow of materials, or he has been deterred by the difficulties. The fact is that at the end of seven months, except on a few items, he has not put the flow of materials on schedule and under control. Instead he is issuing priorities, which have become worthless because they do not and cannot be cashed in the form of the guaranteed delivery of materials.

MR. NELSON will not be solvent again until he does for all critical materials what he has done tentatively for a very few—until he allocates them directly on a schedule which brings all the materials to the plants where they are needed, not some of them but all of them, not some of them too soon and some of them too late. Under the present system shipyards may get steel plates but not structural shapes: since plates are no use without shapes, that steel is in effect wasted as long as it cannot be used.

This is no isolated example. In fact, it is a common condition: as long as it continues, as long as copper is frozen in copper tubing for ships that will not need the tubing for 18 months, as long as other rare metals are being delivered in some places faster and in greater quantities than they are actually needed, there are bound to be shortages in other places. If the waiter serves two portions of ham to one customer and two portions of fried eggs to another, both customers will be very short indeed of ham and eggs.

YET THIS sort of thing is quite unavoidable under the present system of priorities. For what Mr. Nelson does is to determine in rather large round figures for rather long periods of time how much of each material is to be allocated to the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission and so forth. Then the contractors are given priorities which are the right to buy these allotted materials. But because the requirements are not based on a true time table schedule of production, deliveries made too soon in one place mean that there is no delivery somewhere else.

The situation cannot be cured except by installing as rapidly as possible schedules of where and when materials are to be delivered. On the basis of these schedules Mr. Nelson should then issue not priorities—which are no more than a theoretical right to purchase—but direct orders to specified mills to deliver specified materials to specified plants at a specified date. That will take Mr. Nelson out of his paper inflation and put him on a hard money basis again. Then, orders to deliver will mean steel, copper, nickel delivered.

THE SYSTEM by which he is able to do this—namely the effective scheduling of the flow of materials—will make it possible not only to produce more now, but to make plans for the future. This is indispensable if we are to wrest the initiative from our enemies: we must prepare now the weapons they will not be able to match next year and the year after. But that cannot be done if Mr. Nelson does not get such a firm control of the materials that he can, like the commander of great groups of armies, move his reserves flexibly to the sectors where they are needed.

If the present system is allowed to continue, we shall not only fail to get all the weapons we have ordered, but we shall find ourselves frozen in the types, and the military requirements which were decided upon long ago. That must not happen. We must have the flexibility which only a real control of production can produce. For we must be able, having laid the foundations in advance, to turn our energies into the weapons we shall be needing in the longer future for the rapidly changing character of the war.

Man Power Shortage

By Janet R. Keith

Threat To War Effort

SHORTAGE of man power and woman power is rapidly emerging as the greatest threat to the war effort of this continent. Officials of the War Man Power Commission estimate that 13,900,000 Americans must be placed in war activities during the present calendar year. While it's easy enough to move people around on paper, it's far from simple to place millions of men and women in new jobs. Already the lack of skilled labor is a serious problem, with national shortages in 138 essential occupations.

Canada, with her small population of 11,500,000, is rapidly approaching a man power crisis. A popular cartoon depicts the Canadian citizen as man power; the head of the army and the head of the munitions department are creeping up on him with man-sized butterfly nets, crying "He's mine!" and "I saw him first." It is no secret that there is a tussle going on in the cabinet to determine whether armed forces or industry will get the big share of depleted man power stocks.

Army Jeopardizes Production

Munitions Minister Howe feels that the accelerated army program is jeopardizing production. A few weeks ago he said: "Having regard to the capacity for war production created and to be created in Canada, would we contribute more to ultimate victory by reducing that production in order to make all men available for overseas service?"

But Defense Minister Ralston continues to step up his army requirements, probably because he is anxious to fill the Seventh and Eighth Divisions. Voluntary recruiting continues at the rate of about 10,000 a month. On top of this the army has increased its quota of draftees, which has averaged about 5000 a month, to 15,600 in July and 25,000 in August. Many observers feel that if the army continues to draft men at the rate of 25,000 a month, the man power crisis will be brought to a sudden head. As it is now, the army has to call up 10 men for every draftee it gets; the other nine are medically unfit, already enlisted voluntarily, or occupationally exempt.

It is estimated that a quarter of a million men and women must be placed in war activity before the end of this year. War industry will take 60,000; voluntary enlistment 50,000; women in the armed services 15,000; and the draft army 125,000. This doesn't take into consideration the needs of agriculture, which must somehow get 175,000 men and women by the middle of August to handle the harvesting.

The man responsible for finding these 250,000 people is Elliott Little, Canada's Director of National Selective Service. His biggest difficulty so far has been his lack of control over the drafting of men into the armed services. But he is not beaten yet.

"We are beginning to get better cooperation from the military authorities," he said recently. "The interests are identical. We cannot keep up a big army if war production is seriously hampered in its creation.

"One front cannot lag behind the other. To get this job done we have to forego a lot of our traditional inhibitions. There is no room for discrimination against labor, racial minorities, or any other groups in this struggle."

Drastic Steps to Place People

To get the required quarter million people into war activity during the next five months, drastic steps will have to be taken. In order to fill the July quota for the draft Army, the call-up age was lowered to single men of 20 and raised to single men of 40. It is quite probable that before the end of this year 18-year-olds and 19-year-olds will be called, as well as men up to 45. The younger boys, it is pointed out, make excellent material for training in armored units, even if they are not sent into actual battle conditions for some time. The older men can be used in less strenuous types of work where age is no deterrent.

When the supply of single men and widowers without children has been exhausted, married men will be next on the list. Men married since August, 1940, are already subject to call, but so far men married before that date have been exempt. The Minister of War Services said recently in the House of Commons: "We are approaching the time when no more single men or widowers without children will be available for service with the armed forces, whether for home defense or overseas, unless we take them from war industry or agriculture or some other essential national activities. We may have to give consideration to the calling of married men."

Women will have to be taken into industry and into the forces on a hitherto unprecedented scale. It is rumored that a registration of all Canadian women will be held very soon. As a part of a government plan to get women into factories, an extensive program for day nurseries has just been adopted. Equal pay for women doing the same work as men may have to be held out as additional bait; already certain labor councils are adopting the principle. The Canadian Women's Army Corps has just begun an intensive recruiting campaign, advertising that it has facilities to train 1000 women a month. A recent announcement that the Women's Division of the R. C. A. F. (which is already 5000 strong) is planning to smarten up its uniform may herald a drive to get more women int air force blue.

To get enough men and women for war industries the government may have to take the decisive step of closing down nonessential factories and compelling workers to move to war jobs. Already workers are partially "frozen;" no person may take a new position or change from one job to another without permission from Selective Service officials. In British Columbia, where base metal production has been hampered by a shortage of labor, selective service officials were instructed recently not to issue any new permits for the employment of workers in gold mines. What was done to the miners in this case could be done in any area where nonessential industry is taking workers needed in essential industry.

It has been suggested that all meat and grocery stores shut down for one day a week to permit the employes to work on farms. So far the government has passed no definite ruling.

The man power situation is now so serious that the government may decide to place one cabinet minister in complete charge. As it is now, there is one man in charge of National Selective Service, the three defense ministers look after recruiting for the army, navy, and air force, the labor minister looks after industrial needs, and the War Services minister is responsible for the draft army. The Minister of Labor is regarded as a logical candidate for the job of man power czar. Were he chosen, he might be given additional power to control all hiring and firing of employes in industry.

Giving an inkling of sterner measures to come, the Minister of Labor himself said recently: "As the labor supply situation tightens, I shall be prepared to recommend and I know the people of Canada would wish me to recommend whatever measures of increased direction, compulsion or control prove necessary to meet future requirements."

Weight Of A Buffer

Argentina Loses An Advantage

THOUGH the Waldo Frank incident underlines once more how widely the war stand of the Argentine government differs from that of the New World republics that have broken with the Axis, it brings out nothing new. The most important development in the Argentine impasse has not been precipitated by the Castillo group, but by events in Argentina's neighbor country, Uruguay.

This development is the growing realization among the Argentines themselves of exactly how heavily the Castillo government's tight-rope walking act is counting against their country's long-term interests. Fears that Argentina might find herself isolated were freely expressed in Buenos Aires when the government began to define its "neutrality" by clamping censorship on a vigorous anti-Axis press campaign soon after Pearl Harbor. Hints that the Chilean people would eventually demand an Axis break have kept this fear alive. But informed observers agree that it is two events of the past three weeks that have brought it most sharply home. They are Uruguay's receipt of arms under lease-lend and the new trade pact that she signed with us on July 21.

Uruguay a Barometer

Uruguay is a small nation in comparison with her two neighbors, Brazil and Argentina, but she has an importance far out of proportion to her size. Not only is she one of the richest and most progressive nations of the continent, she is also political key because of her position between the two South American giants. At times in her history she has belonged to each of them. From 1828 when they nominally guaranteed her independence, till around 1865, their armies marched and counter-marched across her soil with distressing regularity. Today favored by both as a valuable buffer state, Uruguay is still a sort of barometer which tells which nation's star is in the ascendant.

Argentina has always had an advantage with Uruguay. The two countries are more alike than any others in South America. They have the same racial composition, almost entirely European, with Spanish blood predominating. They speak Spanish with a comparable accent. Their broad rolling central plains look alike.

Each country has a great capital that dominates the national scene. Spacious Buenos Aires and stately Montevideo less than 150 miles apart on opposite sides of the Rio de la Plata, are closer together than any other two capitals in the New World. Many exporting and importing firms that operate in Montevideo have their head offices in Buenos Aires. It is a wholesale center for the smaller city and individuals even come there from Uruguay to shop. The social exchange between "BA" and "Monte" is continual. So close is the relationship in fact that Argentines have developed the habit of thinking of Uruguay's capital as a sort of suburb of Buenos Aires.

Argentina has been accustomed to leadership among the Spanish-speaking nations that surround her. With trade treaties and a cultural relations program, she has tried to crystallize an Argentina-dominated bloc in southern South America. The Regional Economic Conference of the River Plate, held at Montevideo in early 1941, was part of this effort. When Argentines talk about fearing isolation, what they mean is fear of losing this leadership. No clearer proof that she has in fact lost it can be offered than the way even little Uruguay has turned her back on her "neutral" policy and got very busy doing everything she can to build up the system of inter-American security that Argentina's continued tolerance of the Axis tears down.

Lease-lend arms for Uruguay mean that her government sees clearly that the present world situation cannot be met by diplomatic finagling. American arms on the other side of the Rio de la Plata show that Uruguay's government is taking steps to protect the interests of her people in the face of a shooting war that may spread anywhere at any moment. Brazil also is building her defenses at top speed. Argentina's are static.

Treaty Foresays Lasting Ties

The significance of the Uruguayan trade treaty goes much beyond the immediate war crisis. It can make little practical difference now, since we are buying all the Uruguayan products and selling them all the supplies that there are ships to haul. What the treaty does is to make formal the intention of Uruguay and the United States to multiply economic ties after the war. It means that Uruguay has fully entered the larger inter-American system of political, military and economic cooperation not only for today but for tomorrow.

Argentines know that Chile is playing a lone hand. Her government has bent over backwards in attempts to assure the United States of "moral solidarity" and she will come into the inter-American fold at the moment most convenient to herself. What they now face is the fact that if there is a future regional leadership in South America, it will be Brazil's within the larger frame of inter-American cooperation, not that of a chronically dissenting Argentina. The failure of Argentina to dominate at the Regional Conference of the River Plate pointed clearly to this. The rapid growth of the inter-American system since Rio reveals how hollow the Castillo-Ruiz Guinazu "victory" there was.

Argentine Obstructionism

In considering Argentina's role of chief dissenter among the Latin American nations, it should be underlined that her attitude had a value for these nations during the period when our foreign policy toward Latin America was still in the short-sighted power-politics stage. During that time she had the admiration of the smaller nations for whose point of view she was spokesman. But the Good Neighbor Policy and the system of consultation and arbitration that has been built upon it has admitted every right that any Latin American nation ever claimed recognition for and Argentina's dissenting has turned into obstructionism.

Since the Axis threat has materialized, this system has become more and more a thing of practical specific arrangements that the American Republics have agreed on at consultations and then put into effect at home. It has evolved into a complex interlocking system of political, economic and military cooperation. The principle it is built on is that of strengthening each nation individually for the common defense of the whole. When Argentina leaves a low gap through which the Axis can attack this system, she does not serve the immediate practical interests of any individual Latin American nation, but rather works against them.

The Latin American nations have learned what their interests are in a hard school and they think very clearly and practically on this subject. That is why Argentina is losing her influence among them and will continue to so long as her leaders try to buck the trend.

The Ladies Navy

Pipe all girls on deck! Shiver me boom timbers if that bosun on the larboard watch ain't powderin' her nose!

* * * *

Now it's a Women's Naval Reserve! The WAAC's got off to a head start but the lady sailors are working fast and we'll have a Female Navy before we know it.

* * * *

A training station has already been arranged at Smith College. Miss Mildred McAfee, president of Wellesley has been sworn in as a lieutenant commander and your wife, sister or mother-in-law may be doing the hornpipe any moment, bless em!

* * * *

Smith College is so far inland that anchors are carried only in museums. This would seem to bear out assurances that the girl middies will be trained for shore duty only.

* * * *

Three big dormitories at Smith have been taken over for the lady's navy. Imagine it! Smith, where one feeble cry of "Sailor!" would have caused a panic for the last hundred years.

* * * *

One thousand officers and ten thousand seamen are to constitute the Women's Navy for a starter. The time is approaching when a woman not in some kind of uniform will be conspicuous. "What did she have on?" is not going to be open to anywhere near as many answers from now on.

* * * *

"I saw Jennie Muggins downtown today," you will hear one woman remark.

"How did she look?" another will ask.

"She's one of the best-dressed sailors we have," will be the answer.

* * * *

And then there will be that breath-taker, "What's Mrs. Spiffington doing now?" and the answer, "Haven't you heard? She's in the Navy!"

* * * *

According to present plans the ladies will not do any out-on-the-rolling-main stuff, but will replace men on shore duty. They may still be expected to splice a rope, however, and if you hear a couple of cute numbers discussing the lovely marlinspike they saw in somebody's window or talking about spinnakers, binnacles, grommets ahd strakes don't be surprised.

* * * *

There is only one feature of the announcements that disturbs us. This is that the officers in the ladies Navy will rate a salute from gobs in the regular Navy.

* * * *

Fun is fun, but there are limits.

* * * *

Lieut. Comdr. Mildred McAfee, president of Wellesley, who will be "Admiral" of the women's Navy, has issued a few rules. She says there will be no smoking on the streets and no dates except on time off. The gal-gobs may powder within limits.

* * * *

"Stow that lipstick, sailor! You're getting it on too thick!"

* * * *

Mrs. Robert Goelet, jr., suing her husband for a separation, says he "fancies himself a drummer, has adopted a musician's life, wears their clothes, keeps their hours and has all their vices and none of their virtues." This strikes us as quite a crack at musicians' lives. What clothes do they wear? And what are their special vices? Is Mr. Petrillo in the house?

* * * *

Mrs. Goelet, it seems, presented her husband with a snaredrum as a wedding present. Well, that's taking chances. Deep down in most men there lingers a yen to be a snare drummer. And it should never be encouraged.

The Mexican Church

By John W. White

State Confiscatory Powers Curbed

Mexico City.

MEXICO'S Supreme Court this week declared unconstitutional all confiscation of Catholic property except actual church buildings, in a ruling which both governmental and church circles describe as one of the most epochal events since the overthrow of Porfirio Diaz. The court's ruling is expected to put an end to the long and bitter conflict between the government and the church, since it establishes an entirely new jurisprudence for church property and deprives the government of the confiscatory power which has been its most effective weapon against the church.

Since the court's decision destroys the laws and decrees under which Catholic-owned real estate was confiscated, official circles express the opinion that the government will have to return all the property that has been confiscated from priests, religious orders and Catholic laymen, with the exception of churches. Government authorities estimate that past administrations confiscated 300 million dollars worth of Catholic property.

The ruling of the supreme court has been welcomed by the present administration, since the termination of the conflict between the government and the church has been one of the primary objectives in President Avila Camacho's effort to attain national unity and calm the passions aroused by Mexico's 30 years of social revolution. The court's decision provides the administration with the means of attaining this objective, in the opinion of official sources close to the President.

Conflict Has Been Bitter

The bitter conflict between the state and the church has been a critically disturbing factor in Mexican politics ever since 1810, when the country began its fight for independence from Spain. Separation of church and state was one of the goals of the wars of independence because the church, having been one of the Spanish colonial institutions, was considered a part of the Spanish regime which the Mexicans were trying to overthrow. The conflict was suppressed during the 35 years of Porfirio Diaz's dictatorship, but broke out again as soon as Diaz was overthrown.

The constitution of 1917, sponsored by President Carranza and still in force, outlawed the Catholic Church and nationalized all church property. The conflict reached its most bitter extremes under Presidents Calles and Cardenas, with the widespread confiscation of all private property on which priests had been permitted to celebrate mass or teach private classes. This meant that after all the Catholic churches and schools had been closed, Catholics could not have mass performed privately in their homes nor permit priests to teach their children.

One of the most bitter Mexican complaints against the United States, before the establishment of the Good Neighbor Policy, was that the Washington Government supported those administrations which were fighting the Catholic Church in Mexico and prevented their overthrow by popular uprisings such as the famous Cristeros movement during the administration of President Calles. This bitterness was increased by Calles' action in making presents of confiscated church property to American Protestant missionary organizations which supported him in his fight against the Catholic Church.

This long-standing conflict with the church was one of the most serious of the many difficult problems which President Avila Camacho inherited from his predecessors. During the campaign he had announced that he was a Catholic, a stand which required considerable courage in a country where for a quarter of a century all candidates for public office had been required to sign formal declarations that they were not Catholics.

Decision in Line With Camacho's

As soon as he was elected, the President quietly began taking steps to suppress the conflict with the church. His close friends say that this was one of the most touchy points in the President's "middle course" policy by which he has been steering the administration, so far successfully, between the two extremes created by the Leftists who are jealous of their political and social conquests in the revolution, and the Rightists against whom the revolution was directed.

Without any publicity, the administration has returned to the former owners many of the homes and other private properties which had been confiscated since the advent of the Calles regime in 1924. Churches cannot be returned until the constitution is amended, since it specifically provides for their nationalization. School buildings and property that had been confiscated from religious orders and from priests could not be returned because they had been seized under laws and decrees set up under the clause of the constitution providing for the nationalization of church property. It is these laws and decrees which the supreme court has now declared to be unconstitutional.

The test case was carried to the supreme court by the Columbia Holding Corporation, one of several corporations set up to take over Catholic-owned property other than churches, in an attempt to prevent confiscation. The plaintiff appealed against the decision of a lower court which had upheld the Cardenas government in its confiscation of a school building in the City of Morelia and a piece of unimproved real estate in the Federal District. The corporation had bought the school building from a religious order and the other property from a priest, thus presenting two types of ownership to the supreme court for a ruling.

The decision, delivered by the president of the court, declares that a school or college teaching the arts, science or professions cannot be construed to be a building devoted to the teaching of religious worship within the meaning of the constitution, even though the teachers may be priests or brothers of a recognized religious order. The court also ruled that there is no law prohibiting priests from owning property and, consequently, the sale or transfer of their property to third parties does not make the third party an intermediary of the church or clergy, as had been held by the lower trial court.

Religious Teaching Ban

President Avila Camacho early this year nullified the constitutional ban against religious teaching in the schools by ruling that such teaching would not be interfered with in private schools. The supreme court's ruling now will permit religious orders to recover ownership of their school buildings and reopen the schools. Consequently, in the future religious teaching will be banned only in the state schools.

With schools and other property returned to their owners, only the churches will still be in the hands of the government. The Avila Camacho administration already has eased this situation by guaranteeing the freedom of worship and overlooking the existing restrictions on the number of clergy who may exercise their religious duties. Whether the present administration will attempt eventually to amend the constitution to remove the few remaining restrictions against the Catholic Church is a question to which no one in the administration appears willing to vouchsafe an answer at this time. It is pointed out, however, that the President has made great progress toward achieving his goal of national unity in only a year and a half and that he still has four years and a half to serve.

Money Grants For College Students Proposed to Get More Officers

By Francis M. LeMay

Associated Press Staff Writer

Education sources disclosed yesterday a special committee of the War Man Power Commission was considering a proposal for wartime "democratization" of American colleges through direct money grants to students, as a means of assuring an adequate supply of Army and Navy officer material and other trained personnel for the general war program.

An educator, who preferred not to be quoted directly, predicted that unless the Government subsidized higher education the number of students in colleges and universities might drop as much as 30 per cent during the next school term.

Student subsidy is but one of several proposals being weighed by the special man power committee, he said, and it was understood there was considerable difference of opinion among educators as to the proper solution of the college problem.

A subsidy program would require congressional approval, with appropriation of several millions of dollars. Hence there appeared some doubt in education quarters that, with the program still in the formative stage and Congress in informal recess, any action could be had before opening of the fall term in September.

Supporters of the "democratization" idea contend it should create the same opportunities for all youths of equal ability to equip themselves for Army and Navy officers status, or for technical or professional service.

A subsidy program might embrace women students as well as men, in the scientific and professional fields.

During World War No. 1 the Government created the Students Army Training Corps and the Students Navy Training Corps, which in three months of 1918 prior to the Armistice enrolled around 185,000 college men. The youths, joining up voluntarily, were put into service uniforms and given service pay. They drilled on the campuses and were required to study history and war aims.

Many educators were understood to oppose patterning the World War No. 2 program after the 1918 SATC and SNTC.

Dr. Edward C. Elliott, president of Purdue University, is chairman of the man power committee formulating the coordinated plan. Other members are James V. Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy; Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service System; G. H. Door, special assistant to the Secretary of War; Arthur S. Flemming, member of the United States Civil Service Commission, and Wendell Lund, director of the Labor Production Division of the War Production Board.

Middle West and Western Motorists Feel Gas Rationing Unnecessary to Save Tires

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 7.—If the Government should decide that gasoline rationing is necessary throughout the entire country in order to conserve tires, it faces the job of convincing car-owners in non-rationed areas that such a move is necessary.

Most of the car-owners in the non-rationed areas now neither expect rationing nor think it is necessary to conserve tires, a recent Nation-wide survey by the Institute discloses.

Field reporters first ascertained whether or not car-owners throughout the country expected rationing on a Nation-wide scale by asking the following question:

"Do you think we will have gasoline rationing throughout the entire country within the next six months?"

The results showed a sharp difference of opinion between car-owners residing in rationed areas and those living in non-rationed areas. In the gas-rationed East, where shortages have become increasingly critical, a majority felt that rationing would go into effect all over the country. In the other areas, less than half of those questioned felt it was imminent.

	All U.S.	Rationed Areas	Non-Rationed Areas
Yes	49%	63%	41%
No	44	29	52
Undecided	7	8	7

Sentiment of gas-rationed car-owners on the latter question is perhaps particularly significant in that they have been able to observe the effectiveness with which gas rationing acts as a tire conservator. Apparently they think it is effective.

Car-owners in non-rationed areas, on the other hand, would appear to have gasoline shortages and tire conservation confused, for a breakdown of the figures shows that car-owners living in oil-producing States such as Oklahoma, California, and Texas etc., are more opposed to gasoline rationing than those living in nonproducing areas. They are apparently thinking only in terms of the amount of gasoline available, rather than the necessity for rationing to save rubber. The closer people are to the sources of gas, the more opposed they are to any kind of gasoline rationing.

	All U. S.	Rationed Areas	Non-Rationed Areas
Think Nation-wide gas rationing will come	47%	52%	45%
Think it will not	41	34	44
Undecided	12	14	11

On the more important issue of the need for rationing, field reporters asked this question:

"Do you think it necessary to ration gasoline throughout the country in order to conserve tires?"

Again, while car-owners in the East thought that gasoline rationing was a necessary part of the rubber conservation program, those in the non-rationed areas stood emphatically opposed to the idea.

Canadian-Pacific Fears Air Attacks From Japs

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 7.—With Japan strengthening its foothold in the Aleutians, more than 6 out of every 10 Pacific Coast Canadians fear an enemy air raid before the end of the summer, a Canadian Gallup Poll reveals.

Of all the provinces, British Columbia, which has already had a taste of shelling at Vancouver Island, feels itself most vulnerable to air attack, and is the only province in which the majority of the population feel an air attack is likely.

Meanwhile, more than a third of Canada's urban residents are dissatisfied with the way air raid precautions are being handled in their communities.

Complaints Issued By FTC Against 2 Big Tobacco Firms

By the Associated Press

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday that it had issued complaints charging Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., Inc. of New York, and Richmond, Va., and R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. of Jersey City, N. J., and Winston Salem, N. C., with misrepresentation and false advertising of cigarettes and smoking tobacco.

The complaints charge, the FTC said, that Philip Morris falsely advertised that Philip Morris cigarettes cause no throat or nose irritation, that their superiority was recognized by eminent medical authorities and had been scientifically proved. The complaint also alleged that misrepresentations were made with regard to Dunhill cigarette majors and Revelation smoking tobacco.

The complaint against the Reynolds Co. alleged false representation in advertising that Camel cigarettes aided digestion, gave a "lift" in energy, and in general that the smoker of Camels was thereby "quickened" from a state of fatigue to one of brisk animation. The FTC charged also that false testimonials were published on behalf of Camels.

The complaint alleged false representation in claims that Prince Albert smoking tobacco was the coolest of all smoking tobaccos.

They Heard the Call Of the Test-Tube

A new field for women in the war effort is the industrial chemistry laboratory. Before the war there were only rare exceptions, such as Mme. Curie, but these days more and more the big plants are taking on women chemists, until the Hercules Powder plant now has one woman to every six men on its technical staff. Officials say that the women display two great research essentials, patience and dexterity. They must tabulate thousands of observations and must be careful of delicate and valuable laboratory equipment. At left Esther Henvis, a Western Maryland graduate, takes a picture of the structural details of a lacquer with a photomicrographic camera at the Hercules Experiment Station; and below Alice Abbott, who was for seven years Philadelphia's woman tennis champion, checks a mixture at the experimental station.

Hey! Who Stole the Water Jug?

—From The Inchcape Rock.

Who stole the water jug? Some of these days the world's meanest guy is going to find himself in front of Mrs. Evelyn Walsh Mc Lean's home and be mighty thirsty, and there isn't going to be any water to drink, 'cause he stole the water jug.

Early this year Mrs. McLean moved from her Friendship Heights home to the new Friendship at Wisconsin Avenue and R Street. One day, looking out of window at the bus stop right in front of her door, she saw a little old woman, almost in a state of collapse from heat and exhaustion. Mrs. McLean immediately set out two benches by the bus stop for the weary.

Later, as the days got longer and hotter, she realized that there was no store nearby where a waiter-for the-bus could get a cold drink, so she had a water cooler set near the benches. And grateful letters came pouring in, not only from passengers but from the traction company, who said it was a godsend to their thirsty bus drivers.

But here is the hitch. Since Mrs. McLean is already having some difficulty with the law about the situation (they say that the benches are obstructing public property and that the cooler shouldn't be there either), she couldn't get a permit to have one of these fancy electric water coolers put out there. It had to be one of the old-fashioned kind with large glass water jug.

Twice in the last few days someone has stolen the jugs, and it is practically impossible to replace them. She has tried unsuccessfully for the past several days to buy one, but they seem to be vanishing. And so, if no more jugs can be found, or if they continue to vanish, some of these days a modern "Ralph the Rover," who thought he would plague "The Abbott of Aberbrothok" (nee McLean) is going to find he has rung his own knell.

HANDFUL—

Five Children and Political Campaign Don't Mix, Says Representative Byron

By Patricia Grady

"Five children and a political campaign are just too much for me to handle," explained Representative Katherine Byron as she sent in her notice of withdrawal from the congressional race from the Sixth District in Maryland.

Though she has been thinking about it for a long time, Mrs. Byron did not definitely make up her mind to withdraw from the arena until yesterday. When the attractive lady-congressman first signified her intention of running again for the post she has held since she was elected to the House after her husband's death last year, she had expected that she would have no opposition in the primaries. But Col. E. Brooke Lee decided to enter into the race and that changed the picture for Mrs. Byron.

"Even with my 100 per cent record in voting for legislation that would speed the war effort, it would be a long drawn-out campaign. I wouldn't even have time to be a part-time mother to five growing sons," Mrs. Byron avers.

Just what her plans are for the far-distant future, Mrs. Byron is not yet sure. In the immediate future she will go to her home in Williamsport, Md., where she will be joined by her sons, William, jr., 17; James Edgar, 15; Goodloe Edgar, 13; David Wilson, 10, and Louis McComas, 4. Keeping a motherly hand on such a quintet would seem to be enough for any one woman to undertake.

She'll be back in Washington in the fall, of course, to fill out her term until January when her successor will take over. Even after that she is expecting to spend her winters in Washington. When she has time to think about it in a few months, Mrs. Byron is going to look around for something to do where she can make a contribution to the war effort.

But that is in the future. She still has those five sons to keep her busy.

Elizabeth Rumsey To Wed Minister

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Canfield Rumsey of Batavia, N. Y. and Washington announce the engagement and coming marriage of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Van de Carr Rumsey to the Rev. Frederick George Weber.

Miss Rumsey was graduated from William and Mary College at Williamsburg. The prospective bridegroom also attended William and Mary, the University of Heidelberg and was graduated from West Virginia Wesleyan and the Virginia Theological Seminary. At present he is in charge of the Episcopal churches in Sistersville, St. Marys and New Martinsville, W. Va.

Luana Davis Is Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Allen C. Davis of Brookmont, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Luana Mae Davis, to Raymond H. Anderson, QMC Detachment, Army War College, of this city.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Anderson of Newark, N. J., and having served two years in foreign service, is expected to remain on duty in Washington for a while. The wedding will take place some time in December.

'DEAR DAD:—

It's Fun to Be an Army Nurse,' Says Lieut. Anne R. Foster

Editor's Note: Second Lieut. Anne R. Foster, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin D. Foster of Loreley, Md., is with United States forces in the Southwest Pacific. One of approximately 60 nurses on board an Army Transport, she describes in this letter, which she showed AP Staff Correspondent Murlin Spencer before mailing, her reaction to life aboard a transport.

Wide World Features

With the United States Army in the Southwest Pacific—Dear Dad: We have been aboard the transport for over a week and although it can't be classed as a luxury cruise, I'm not complaining.

You have always said that you spoiled me, but just wait until I get back. You can't imagine the attention 66 women receive from the hundreds of men on board.

I have given up the luxury of having a room to myself and share a stateroom with eight other nurses. So far I have proved to be a fairly good sailor.

It may strike you funny that I am doing my own laundry, but you should see the doctors pressing shirts and washing clothes. We have to wash in salt water and if you think that is easy just try to get some soap to lather in brine.

I have had plenty of practice giving immunization shots and it was my fate to give two "hypos" to the chaplain. This same chaplain was in charge of the celebration on crossing the equator. I was summoned before the court on the charge of throwing hypodermic needles like darts in order to increase my score on the dart board.

So far I have told you about the unusual events. Now for the routine day. Somewhere around 7 a. m. one of the nine will raise a bleary-eyed face to ask "What time is it?" That is the signal for all nine to make a mad scramble for the two-by-four bathroom and usually ends with at least three trying to brush their teeth at the same time.

Even the toothpaste won't lather in salt water. All through the stateroom you hear cries of "Who has my shoes? Has anyone seen my uniform? Where is my make-up kit?" However, we finally compromise and end up with a little of everyone's wardrobe.

The officers wait on us to such a degree that I feel utterly helpless, but then they don't know our capabilities for waiting on ourselves or indulging in pillow battles or pouring cold water over each other.

Sometime during the day I usually have several proposals for decking in the evening. Yes, I said decking and this consists of struggling through masses of humanity, stepping on and bumping into scores of human beings until we find room to stand or sit on the pitch dark deck. There we sing familiar tunes.

We can see the Southern Cross very clearly, surrounded by more stars than I thought existed. It seems hard to believe that we are going to war. There is never a hint or suggestion made in this direction and yet these things that I have been telling you about the stars, the music, the gaiety all remind us of home and what we are fighting for.

Well, Dad, that about covers my travels up to now. Please write soon. Love,

ANNE

2nd Lieut. Anne R. Foster

Virginia Smith Married Quietly To Lieut. Deitrick

At a quiet ceremony, Virginia Mayo Smith was married yesterday afternoon to Lieut. William Alexander Deitrick, U. S. N. R.

The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Donald Jones, on S Street. The bride is the daughter of Capt. Claude B. Mayo. After a brief honeymoon, the couple will make their home here.

MacLeish Strong, but Very Silent

Though one of the head men of the Office of War Information, Archibald MacLeish is giving out very little.

Fresh from a flying trip to London, the Librarian of Congress and the assistant director of the OWI—he holds both posts—pleads ignorance when asked about second-front reports. Though, admittedly, he saw Anthony Eden, Brendan Bracken and other officials in England, Mr. MacLeish did not discuss the possible course of the war with them. He had a definite job on his mind.

Purpose of his two-week visit was to organize a branch of the OWI in London. One of the duties of this newly set up branch office will be to spread Allied propaganda among countries under Nazi domination. This will mean a close association with the British government and the governments in exile, now making their headquarters in London.

This branch office will also supply information about America to the British and handle relations between our Army and Navy and their British hosts.

Brazilians Give Dinner

Someone tagged him "the Rockefeller of Brazil" and since then genial Laure Guimaraes has been laughingly called "John D" by his many friends here. Last night with Mme. Guimaraes, they celebrated their wedding anniversary with a dinner party on the Shoreham Terrace.

In Brazil it is the ivory anniversary and in this country it is the cotton anniversary, but here or there it means 10 years of happily married life—for Mr. and Mme. Guimaraes, at any rate. They came up here some time ago on a mission to do with transporting oil.

Guests at the dinner last night included the Minister-Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Lobo and the Secretary of the Embassy and Mme. Gouthier.

Her fiance was graduated from the Riverdale Country School and from Hamilton College. He is a member of the University Club here.

No date has been set for the wedding.

B'nai B'rith Victory Auxiliary Maps Plans to Aid War Effort

By Genevieve Reynolds.
The Post Club Editor.

UPON ARRIVING in Washington, many newcomers look about for some way to contribute to the war effort other than by their daily bread job. Evidence of this is the newly organized group of young professional women known as the Victory Auxiliary of B'nai B'rith.

Additional members are welcomed and the group promotes many new friendships. While emphasis of the club is on war services, social services and religious activities are stressed. The Victory Auxiliary will hold its regular meeting Wednesday night at 8 o'clock at the home of Miss Edith Oshinsky, 2100 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Miss Reynolds

At a recent meeting, each member pledged a dollar to be turned over to the National B'nai B'rith War Service Fund.

Nevertheless, members and friends of the organization will have their opportunity for a summer get-together. Plans already are in the making for another affair, which will be held at a place conveniently reached by bus and streetcar lines.

Within the last few months, the Women's American ORT has opened trade schools in Bolivia, Canada and New York City.

These schools are organized for rehabilitation through training. Present day emphasis is on training in metal trades, engineering and mechanics.

EVERYWHERE Helen May Bloedorn turns people are amazed that such a youthful person holds two law degrees—LL. B., LL. M. In fact, Helen May was awarded the latter degree recently from National University. Already she has passed the bar examination and is hanging out her "shingle."

When Helen May has a little time left over from studies you'll find her attending meetings of the KAPPA BETA PHI sorority, Colonial Dames Society of Maryland or the Army and Navy chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She holds active membership in all three.

Twenty-three years old, Helen lists her hobbies as horseback riding, tennis and golf. She is the daughter of Dean Walter A. Bloedorn, George Washington Medical School and Hospital, who is (retired) Commander United States Navy Medical Corps.

Sanders Family All Out for War Effort

Practically everyone in the Sanders family is doing his bit in the war effort.

Joe Sanders, grandfather of the clan and well known retired banker, has long led the way with his activities in all civic matters. His particular interest at present is with the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office in which he holds several important posts. His son Lieut. Comdr. Robert Sanders U. S. N. R., is stationed with the Bureau of Aeronautics in Washington and young Mrs. Sanders gives her several days of her week to pounding out letters for the C. D. V. O.

Mother of two children, aged two and four, Mrs. Sanders finds plenty to occupy her in her own home, but being a Sanders she feels she must do her part. A native of Boston, she studied at Katherine Gibbs' Secretarial School there and after her marriage lived for six years in Peru where her husband was a maintenance engineer for Pan-American-Grace Airlines. Over at the Office of Civilian Defense she helps that organization keep track of its 35,000 volunteers and answers letters to the thousands of persons clamoring for jobs with the city's civilian defense front.

Feminine Morale "Important, Too," Says Londoner

Canteens, service lounges, USO activities, special entertainments, et al., are just a few of the civilian contributions to the raising of morale of the service men. But nobody has been very much concerned about raising the morale of the women in wartime activities.

From London, however, comes a boost to the ego of women in the war. Sir Ernest Gowers, senior regional commissioner of the English capital, states that the "Women's volunteer services are indispensable in government plans for civilian resistance to any invasion thrust aimed at London."

In the new defense plans for London, women will be expected to carry an important share of the responsibility. The civilian population of London will be organized to clear debris, fill shell or bomb craters, dig trenches, distribute emergency supplies of food, fuel and water and carry out emergency cooking and sanitary arrangements.

'SHE'S LOST'—

Mother Roper, Who Used to Locate Missing Gobs, Now Hunts Their Sweethearts

By Corrinne Hardesty
United Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 7.—A self-conscious sailor sat in front of the desk of Mrs. Daniel Roper, adopted mother of 6000 "lost" seamen, today and explained haltingly that he was afraid the girl he left in Oklahoma had not remained there waiting for him. He wanted Mrs. Roper's help in finding her.

Hunting missing sweethearts for seamen is the reverse of Mrs. Roper's regular job. She's been hunting sailors for worried sweethearts, wives and parents since she was a girl of 17 in Boston.

In her shabby, old-fashioned oak-paneled but shipshape office in the missing seamen's bureau of the Seamen's Church Institute, Mrs. Roper, 70 and gray-haired, listened as the sailor told that his last three letters to the girl had been returned.

"I'll find her for you, she's probably taken a defense job in some nearby town," Mrs. Roper said confidently as she took down the sailor's glowing description of the girl and such facts as last address, name of parents, etc. "You come back in a week, or run in just before you sail if you are ordered out suddenly."

"He's just one of many," Mrs. Roper said as he left and she turned to files of 6452 sailors she's located. "There's just one thing worse than a lost sailor—that is a sailor who has lost his family or sweetheart."

The musty, rambling old brick building on New York's water front which has been home to thousands of sailors for more than half a century, was filled with tars seeking help like Mrs. Roper's caller or making use of the institutes' countless services for a sailor ashore.

Mrs. Roper explained between callers and telephone interruptions that since Pearl Harbor she has had an increasing number of requests to locate families of sailors.

"It is due to defense work," she said. "Families move about in a hurry and the members just can't keep up with each other. A sailor writes home, gets no answer or the letter is returned, and he is worse than a frantic mother who can't find her sailor boy."

Only yesterday Mrs. Roper said she stopped in the middle of a search for a Portland, Oreg., sailor described by his wife as "a striking personality," to help a sailor find a girl from Omaha.

By a freak of chance, which helps Mrs. Roper amazingly often, the girl turned up at the Seaman's Institute, looking for the sailor. Mrs. Roper saw them off in search of a marriage license.

One of Mrs. Roper's recent requests was from three American sailors in a concentration camp in Germany asking her to locate their families and if possible get a letter to them from home.

"A British sailor came in the other day and asked for a turnip," Mrs. Roper said. "I'm never surprised any more. I got him a turnip. He did a beautiful job of carving with it. He's a fine sculptor and just wanted something to work with."

What sailors come in and ask for is nothing to what they bring Mrs. Roper. She learned years ago to caution them not to send her monkeys but she can't think of everything.

"Yesterday it was this cerise satin nightgown," she said, holding up a lurid garment. "The sailor had just returned from a hazardous trip. He is the most conservative dresser I know. He said he got a green one for his mother and this one for me. He used to work on a millionaire's yacht. Maybe that explains it."

Amateur Fools With Stains to His Detriment

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Household Editor

AS LONG as there are blueberries and raspberries, ink and nail polish, coffee and tea, there will be clothing with stains. And as long as persons try to remove the spots without the right knowledge, there will be conspicuous and glaring rings resulting from home cleaning.

Martha Ellyn

Nothing makes life more difficult for the dry cleaner than to receive a garment that has had a home remedy applied. By instict most persons immediately begin rubbing a garment when they have spilled something on it. This disturbs the threads of the fabrics.

A knowing cleaner can handle anything from paint to perfume, providing it is merely paint or perfume, uncomplicated by trial and error of home remedies. The cleaner has a better chance of restoring the garment to its original beauty if you take the garment to him at once. Fresh stains react better than stale ones. Always tell the cleaner what caused the spot. The "spotters," who are among the highest paid craftsmen in the dry cleaning business, will handle the clothing with the proper technique. They know all about stains and all about textiles.

Milk and Ink Spots

Take the case of the home-treated ink spot which is one of the dry cleaner's pet problems. Most persons rush for a bottle of milk after they have spilled ink on their best dress or their prize Oriental rug. This is the wrong procedure. This idea started when someone remembered that lactic acid affects ink. But the amount of lactic acid in milk is so slight that the effect on even a small ink stain is negligible. Your spot will become complicated by protein stain and then the cleaner will have to "digest" enzymes before he can tackle removing the ink.

Variety of Spots

Unless you hold a chemistry degree it's practically impossible to know all the points concerning the care of food stains. And then there is medicine, glue, chewing gum, grass and, this year, leg lotion. Even if you did understand the stains and spots, there is still the textile to consider, the dye, the fibers, the weave and the finish. The method to remove coffee from rayon may not remove it from wool. A method safe for seersucker may be fatal to satin.

Attempting to banish a spot by warm water and soap is almost certain to be fatal. The fabric will not only be rubbed fuzzy but the spot will probably become "set." The professional dry cleaners also look with horror on removing grease or wax spots with a hot iron over a blotter. Heat should never be applied to any spot or stain because it usually has an undesired effect. Instead of removing the spot, it may "set" it for life.

'—Out, Damned Spot! Out, I Say!—'

IF MARIAN HARVEY, music librarian at Radio Station WJSV, were as well versed in chemistry as she is in the classics (including Shakespeare, whose famous phrase seems apropos), she would not be scrubbing away with a soapy washcloth at the fresh-paint stains on her dress. You're all wrong, Marian. Soap and water "sets" stain. The situation calls for first aid from a skilled craftsman

Taking Girl's Cinderella Story at Face Value, Mother Tells How Worldly-Wise New Yorkers In Theater District Kept Her Daughter From Harm

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your column of August 4 certainly shows what a good sport you are. To me it was extremely amusing to read "G. W. M.'s" follow-up account of how she made up her mind (before hearing from you) to go off with her fiance on a trip to New York and Atlantic City; and of how it turned into a wedding journey. It was interesting because I have personal knowledge of another young girl's adventurousness which turned out equally well.

I read your column every day and when "G. W. M." wrote in asking if she should take a four days' trip with her recently met middle aged beau, my reaction coincided exactly with your reply, which was: "Any way you figure it, the answer is the same: Don't take the trip." I thought to myself: "These crazy young things who come here to Washington to work! Wouldn't you think any girl could see through this man's game in two minutes!" It was not until I read the sequel today that it dawned on me I had a bystander's acquaintance with a comparable adventure.

Three years ago, my daughter, who had then just graduated from high school, decided to go to New York City to study dramatics. With the sole exception of myself, everyone in the family disapproved her the project. But because I believe in people doing the thing in life they feel best qualified for, and most want to do, I took her side. Finally, the matter was arranged. A sum of money was deposited to her account and she, who had been watched over and protected all her life, went off to live in a theatrical boarding house and manage her own affairs,—even to selecting the school she would attend.

Of course, the whole family joined in the chant: "What will happen to Jane, among people like that? What a terrible influence upon a young girl! New York is such a wicked place! Suppose some unscrupulous man——," etc., etc. This went on until I would awaken in the night with a cold chill, wondering where she was and what she was doing. I stood it a couple of weeks and then up to New York I went. And now for the laugh!

Everybody in the boarding house, from the management down to the elevator man, and including her fellow boarders, had taken my child under their wing. She was more closely supervised than if I had sent a paid attendant with her. The most popular and respected man in the place had appointed himself her especial guardian. Never in her life did she have to answer more searching questions as to where she had been and why. And if she wasn't back at the boarding house at the hour stipulated,—well, it was just so bad for her. I did not meet the people at the school; but apparently the same attitude toward her prevailed there.

She stayed on in New York for quite a while, and even worked a few nights as a taxi dancer, but no harm ever came to her. The man who had constituted himself her guardian fell in love with her, and would have married her long ago, if she were willing. Many of the people she met in New York have since visited our home and without exception have been very nice. Even the rascal who ran the taxi dance place was lovely to me when I met him. He took me out to have a drink of orange juice! All of which may prove nothing, of course—unless, perhaps, that no matter how much we think we know about life, we can be wrong sometimes.

MOTHER.

Her Trips With Admirer Led to Blissful Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have read with delight the follow-up letter from "G. W. M." published August 4. She had asked in a previous letter if it would be all right for her to take a four days' trip to New York and Atlantic City with a fascinating, middle-aged, wealthy man whom she had known for four months and expected to marry. You told her "No." But without waiting to hear from you, she went anyway, and now they are married.

I am glad she went. The turn of events proves it was the right thing to do. I was confronted with an identical question two years ago. I pondered the question and went;—but, unlike "G. W. M.," I went without a chaperone. (She took her roommate along). On arrival in New York City, we registered at the same hotel,—I registering in my name and he in his name. We took rooms on separate floors (I insisted upon this); and I never ventured on his floor, nor he on mine. We always met and parted in the lobby. Everything was on the up-and-up; and we had a wonderful time. He always had a lot of respect for me, because of the way I protected my reputation on that occasion; and on many similar excursions that followed.

I was 23 at the time and I knew it I made a misstep I could blame no one but myself. My family took a negative attitude toward the trip, but didn't forbid it. They agreed with me that I was old enough to protect myself and my reputation. We had many jaunts of this nature (in which I always paid my own way), from September, 1940, until September, 1941, when we were married. I can honestly say that our marriage has been perfect bliss. I love my husband more dearly than anyone in the world, and he feels the same about me. I kept my job until three months ago, when he insisted that I resign and be his wife in every sense of the word. I love keeping house for him, because he loves me.

My husband is the same outstanding type of man that "G. W. M." claims her husband to be. He is a professional man, brilliant, successful and handsome;—an all-around wonderful guy. He is 33 years old. I had to beat off the women before we were married; and still do. They are always calling him up and making a general nuisance of themselves. She may have to contend with much the same thing. But my advice is: Don't let him know you mind in the least. Laugh it off or tease him about it. He isn't interested in them, or he would have married one of them.

I believe—and always will—that it isn't appearances but actualities that count. If I had refused to go on these junkets, I feel sure that our friendship never would have developed into love and marriage. He wanted a girl who would be a companion and comrade, and he looked to me for diversion. I supplied him with laughter and kept his spirits light, and an immoral thought never touched our relationship. I wish for "G. W. Copper Base Make-up Ideal for Red Head

Hollywood, Calif.—Copper is the most connotative term that can be applied to a "redhead." So if you are a "redhead" select a harmonious group of makeup products with a copper foundation, suggests Pere Westmore, Hollywood make-up artist.

Ann Sheridan, for instance, who will be seen shortly in a new picture, uses a copper foundation cream as the basis of her make-up, as it has that flattering copper glow to it.

Here are Mr. Westmore's suggestions for applying the cream: After the cream is applied in a thin, even coat, a pastel paste rouge—smoothed on according to the contour and planes of the face—is put on. A brown eyebrow pencil is the shade to be used by "redheads" for lining the eyes and for the brows, but black mascara is the most complementary. Copper powder, naturally, is the correct shade, while a flame-natural shade of lipstick is ideal, as it is a cross between a flame red and a natural red.

"There is no difference between a daytime and evening make-up as far as shades are concerned," he said, "however, it is not only excusable, but advisable, that a person apply a heavier make-up in the evening. No artificial light is stronger than sunlight, and usually it isn't as strong, so if more make-up isn't used in the evening, it has a tendency to fade out. It is estimated that shapes of eyes and lips are not clearly discernible in artificial light over a distance of 8 or 9 feet. Therefore, a little more make-up in the evening, please."

Girdles Ruin Figures, Says Gypsy Rose Lee

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU ask a woman with such a beautiful figure that she has become known for it the world over, what most women need to learn, the answer will be "How to walk." The main thing, she is convinced, is to "draw a bead on where you are going and walk straight toward your objective." How can a woman expect to walk well unless she acts as though she knows where she is headed?"

That is Gypsy Rose Lee's idea, and a good one. As no doubt you know, she is the author of a popular murder mystery and also the star of a new Broadway show. Her perfect figure is no longer news. For some years now she has enjoyed a successful career on the strength of her curves.

Walk Correctly

Naturally, Gypsy has given considerable thought to what makes for symmetry. How to walk, she has concluded, is highly important. In fact, it is essential to showmanship. Give a woman lovely proportions and let her slump, and what happens? You can't even tell whether she has a waist.

Right along that subject, Gypsy says she is glad that there isn't enough rubber for girdles. "The rubber girdle," she declares, "is the ruination of the average figure. When a woman has a lot of rubber and stays to hold her up and flatten her out, she doesn't even bother to hold herself up. No matter how good a girdle she buys, it can't do all the work. Of course, she looks sloppy. These new rubberless girdles are a very good thing."

I'd like to tell you about Gypsy's figure. It is just as good as anybody ever said it was. And one of the reasons is, she watches her measurements. Instead of scampering to the scales several times a week, she measures every day. "Women weigh too often," is her comment, "and they don't measure often enough. The measurements are what count." Hers are lovely: Bust, 36 inches; waist, 24 inches; hips, 36 inches. Whenever she approaches what she calls overweight—3 pounds at the most—she goes on a balanced diet and says, "I lose like that."

Beauty Exercises

Her other tip on keeping weight perfect is to become more active whenever you feel yourself gaining too much. Since she loves to dance, walk and work around her farm, she finds plenty of exercise without taking calisthenics.

Herein a diet that will make it easy for you to control your weight in the warm weather:

In the World of Fashion

TO KEEP YOU POSTED on the changing fashion picture, this column will give you each week a brief resume of "things to come." If you have any questions about new fall fashions, write Jane Driscoll, The Post Fashion Editor. She will be glad to include them.

FOOT-SAVERS—It is still a mystery to us where all the "Peds" have gone to. A New York saleslgirl has given us a hint of a reason for their recent local scarcity. Since many women had been wearing them over their regular hose for walking, it may, she says, have something to do with Government prohibition of superfluous use of fabrics.

Jane Driscoll

Even if this explanation were true, we wonder in what class the bare-legged and painted-stocking girls would fall. They wear "Peds" only because their shoes feel uncomfortable against the skin. But still stranger is the fact that a local store vouches for the continued existence of these foot-savers.

When repeated inquiries have been sent to the manufacturer as to their whereabouts, the reply is, "It takes from 10 to 12 weeks for delivery from date of order." So another supply of "Peds" is expected in the city any day now.

More encouraging is the news about hose to come for fall. Stockings with reinforced heels and toes answer the need for more protection. Rayon hose with nylon toes and heels, as well as cotton with rayon, will give greater strength for walking purposes.

Later on we will have soft-as-cashmere spun rayon hose. They have the look, feel and texture of wool, without the bulk. Spun nylon and heavier lisle styles will also be foot-savers for walking women.

LITTLE BLACK DRESS—That basic black dress is unpredictable these days. It makes an appearance every season in any guise—spring, summer, fall or winter. New New York shop windows are displaying nothing but the little black dress for early fall. Local stores, too, are showing them in styles as stark as the unadorned Parisian models of a few years back.

As a mater-of-fact, black is an excellent idea for your first fall dress. Undoubtedly you will want to come out ablaze with color later. While you are deciding just which colors you like best, black serves as an "in-betweener." If you get into black early in the season, it is a dead certainty you will want a little gayety in your wardrobe later on.

Blace does not have to be drab, however. Wear it with accents of cyclamen, royal blue, Chinese green or purple. It looks particularly new when combined with purple.

GREATCOAT—Extra coats of all varieties are the coming thing, but the greatcost especially is receiving the lion's share of attention. It comes in square-shoulder box styles or the half-belted officer's type. These mannish coats are practical oversuits and supply the need for warmth and durability that women are demanding.

Casual toppers are also becoming more important. WPB rules that three-piece outfits can no longer be sold together. This does not mean that you cannot find a coat to match your suit, but it must be sold separately.

Because of this ruling there is a tendency, however, to buy your coat with general wear in mind. Instead of thinking of it as your suit coat only, you weight it in terms of many costumes, which, after all, is the logical approach to thrifty buying.

Backyard Barbecue Parties Are Fun

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin

IT TOOK a war emergency to prove to roving Americans that there's no place like home. Now that transportation curtailments have forced us to explore the resources of our own back yards for our summer fun, we're getting a perspective on our pleasures—learning that we don't have to tear madly across the country or State for our good times.

But don't forget that home fun can make a lot of extra work . . . part of the lure of going somewhere was to save a lot of cooking over the weekend. Plans for home entertaining in this war summer, when maids are all but extinct in the average American family and butlers are as rare as rubber, shouldn't let the work fall too heavily on any one member of the family.

Away With Formality

The more the merrier is a good rule—both for the work and the company. Certainly a summer at home would be a frost if the family didn't feel free about having friends and relations in and out without formality. The way to manage a system like that is to organize a kind of entertaining your family can do easily. For most of this some sort of outdoor cooking plan will be the answer. Get the proper equipment, so there won't be last-minute searchings for this and that—or making out with makeshifts.

Delegate various jobs; have one member of the family responsible for the weekend marketing. Have another take on the drinks—that will include making coffee in a big-size pot and getting the cups out and in. If the beverage is soft drinks, that means getting the bottles and the bucket of ice for keeping them cool, and the glasses if you need them . . . and turning the bottles in for deposits! Dishes, silver, paper napkins, long-handled forks, salt, and whatever accessories needed for the service should be taken on by another member of the family. Another should have responsibility for food—steaks, hamburgers or frankfurters or whatever . . . bringing them on a big tray and cooking them. The cooking apparatus is still another department to be delegated to the chef or to another member of the gang. The clearing-up jobs should be divided up and agreed on, so there won't be lost time and motion arguing or being polite about it. If you're a small bunch, several of these jobs can be done by one person, for none will be too overburdening. If there's a big family, there can be a separate person for each job.

Cooking Equipment

As for equipment, you can have an ambitious outdoor barbecue table with a revolving spit and all the trimmings. There are carts with charcoal spits and pits that make a fine fire for the purpose. Down the scale are small practical portable stoves. Various editions of grates and ovens made to be built into brick or stone fireplaces are nice . . . these seem somehow more authentic to us, and an outdoor chef can flourish a mean fork over such an affair.

Long-handled broilers, forks and such like, are all but necessary accessories, especially if each guest is going to be allowed to chaperon his own morsel! . . . and that's half the fun! Take out the kitchen salt and pepper shakers; have paper napkins; use paper or pottery plates and cups, as suits you best; get plenty of big trays for carrying things back and forth.

Use Trestle Type Table

A trestle-type picnic table is very useful, especially if it is flanked by long benches. The occasion will be more fun if there are seats of some sort for everyone . . . outdoor chairs, beach chairs, cushions or beach-type backrests. But if some must sit on the ground, well, nobody claimed this was an Astorbilt banquet with all the family silver on display.

Above all, keep plans simple and limit the menu to the fundamentals—unless you have a private chef and a couple of extra maids. For the point of outdoor meals is to save work—not to make extra work. Then don't worry about a few ants or ashes. After all, the Roosevelts gave hot dogs to the King and Queen.

FOLKS WERE SORRY for Mr. B.

Because of his priority
On endless chores around the shop—
The kind of work that didn't stop
At closing time; because, you see,
He owned the place—poor brother B.

A business man with furrowed brow,
A kind of "What-do-I-do now?"
Tycoon, replete with sudden wrath
For all who had to cross his path.
The REASON for his woeful yelping?
He needed folks to do some HELPING . . .

Our helpless, harrassed Mr. B.
Resorted to psychiatry:

Removed our hero's chronic grouch.

Questionnaires Sent to Md. Candidates

Questionnaires are being sent this week by the Montgomery County (Md.) League of Women Voters to national, State and local candidates for policy-making offices who have filed for the September 8 primaries, Mrs. Frank R. Garfield, chairman of government and its operation, announced yesterday.

Candidates are being asked to make appointments for interviews with two or three members of the league to talk over issues raised by the questionnaires. Summaries of the answers to these questionnaires and short biographical sketches of the candidates will then be presented to the league members and also to the public through the newspapers.

Because the league feels that events move too swiftly to make it advisable to ask candidates to commit themselves definitely on particular issues, the questions are of a general nature.

Therefore, congressional candidates are asked their general attitudes toward the influence of particular interests within their districts in making decisions on legislation affecting the entire country. They are also being questioned for their ideas on the role of Congress in wartime, and their views of the role the country should play in the postwar world.

Candidates for delegates to the State Legislature and county board of commissioners are asked what they think about maintaining essential services in wartime, what types of taxes they favor and how they feel about the merit system of choosing government employes.

Mrs. Garfield pointed out that the League of Women Voters, as a national, nonpartisan organization interested in good government does not indorse any candidates but rather brings their views on important issues to the attention of voters. Since voters are asked to choose candidates to fill 27 separate offices, in addition to State central committeemen for the parties, Mrs. Garfield stated "the problem of becoming acquainted with the merits of all the various candidates is not small."

Museum Offers Exhibit Tracing Weapons of War

The Museum of Natural History has prepared an exhibit of the evolution of weapons, starting with a whistling arrow Gengis Khan used to work on his enemies' nerves while also killing them and ending with the fast-shooting guns America is using now on the Axis.

Arranged by F. M. Setzler, head curator of the Department of Anthropology, the exhibit, on the museum's ground floor, contains several hundred weapons.

Crowds yesterday lingered longest around two Moorish flintlocks which were presented to Thomas Jefferson by the Emperor of Morocco. These long weapons were brilliantly inlaid with some form of coral or stone which the museum has not been able to identify.

In the earlier groups are poisoned arrows, with some of the lethal mixtures still persisting on the points. Rifles date from 1800 to the new Garand. There are boomerangs and strange "pepper box" pistols; a sporting rifle made for and used by Sam Houston and a machine gun taken from a plane shot down by Eddie Rickenbacker, U. S. World War flying ace.

The exhibit will remain open until September 15.

Tennessee Picks Gov. Cooper For Third Term

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 7 (AP).—For the second time since the Civil War, Tennessee Democrats yesterday nominated a Governor for a third two-year term, bestowing the honor upon Prentice Cooper.

Nominated along with Cooper were incumbents Tom Stewart for the United States Senate and Leon Jourolmon for State public utilities commissioner. The Democratic nomination in State-wide races is tantamount to election.

The unofficial account from 1994 of approximately 2300 precincts gave: For Governor, Cooper, 159,035; former Congressman J. Ridley Mitchell, 115,738. For Senator, Stewart, 126,116; Edward Ward Carmack, 108,486.

In the congressional races, seven Democrats—including five incumbents—and two incumbent Republicans were renominated without opposition. Representative J. Percy Priest, Fifth District incumbent, won the Democratic nomination in the newly created Sixth (Davidson County) District, while Tom Murray, Jackson attorney, received the party nod for the Eighth District seat vacated by Representative Herron Pearson. Mayor Jim McCord of Lewisburg was unopposed for the Democratic nomination in the new Fifth District.

Justice Roberts' Home Entered

The home of Justice Owen J. Roberts of the United States Supreme Court at 1401 Thirty-first Street Northwest, was broken into by burglars "sometime before August 4," it was reported to police yesterday.

Marshal Thomas E. Waggaman of the Supreme Court reported the robbery but said he was unable to say what was stolen. The thieves apparently entered by breaking two panes of glass in a rear window.

Justice Roberts is at his farm near Kimberton, Pa., and is not expected to return to Washington until fall.

Helsinki Denies Peace Mission

5-Point Program of Day Care For Children Taking Shape

A five-way program on child care is being developed by the Committee on Child Care and Protection of the District Defense Council, for local application of plans announced last week by Charles Schottland, director of day care for the national office of defense health and welfare services.

Mrs. Henry P. Chandler, chairman of the District organization, announced yesterday that her unit is in the elementary stages of setting up day care centers both on a District-wide basis and in neighborhoods; of organizing after-school care for young children; of recruiting and training child care aides; of using supervised boarding homes for mothers and children; and of forming a counseling service for mothers who are considering going to work.

Conducted Surveys

"The Committee on Child Care has been working since January on the problem of day care for the children of working mothers," Mrs. Chandler said. "In cooperation with the Council of Social Agencies, we conducted a series of surveys to establish need.

"The surveys showed a widespread demand for all types of care—nursery schools on a 12-hour basis, after-school supervision of young children, private boarding homes for mothers and children, and trained child care aides to go into homes where children are ill, or too young to be in group cae.

"It was also revealed that nearly all of the mothers were willing and able to meet at least part of the cost of such care, but that approximately one-third of the mothers were either the sole wage earners, or the wives of men in military service, and unable to meet the full cost of care."

Two training courses for child care volunteers have been held and others will be opened in September, she added.

The committee has asked the Community War Fund for an immediate grant to provide an administrative staff to develop such community projects.

"Requests for help are pouring in, and we are quite concerned with our inability to give all the skilled guidance needed. The Community War Fund grant, if secured, will permit us to move ahead at once," Mrs. Chandler said.

60% of Frozen Charge Accounts Reported 'Thawed'

The Government's aim to reduce overdue charge accounts is approximately 60 per cent closer to its goal than it was when the new "freezing" regulations went into effect July 10, John K. Althaus, secretary of the Associated Retail Credit Men of Washington, said yesterday.

Basing his estimate on reports from department store credit managers, Althaus said that between 60 and 65 per cent of these frozen accounts had been "thawed" to permit fresh purchases.

Another deadline will come up Monday, when articles bought on credit in June must be paid for. The same will be true during every succeeding month.

The regulations are that frozen accounts may be opened by paying up the amount due or by transferring the balance to an installment account to be paid within six months.

Winchester Sailor Sees That Navy Delivers the Best

An East Coast Port (Delayed), (Wide World).—Far down in the Caribbean Sea a few days ago Robert L. Boyd of Winchester, Va., a torpedoman on a United States warship, applied Navy-gray paint to a number of depth charges.

"Does paint make them explode better?" he was asked by a reporter aboard.

"Oh, no," he grinned. "But we wouldn't want to sink a submarine with a rusty depth charge. The United States Navy delivers nothing but the best."

A few hours later the painted depth charges were thumped over the side by squatty "K" guns. The shock of their explosion changed the color of the sea, made the air misty for a moment.

"If a submarine gets us," said Boyd, "we expect it to use a nice shiny torpedo."

Amos Pinchot's Condition Serious

Norwalk, Conn., Aug. 7 (INS).—Amos R. E. Pinchot, 68, New York lawyer and brother of Gifford Pinchot, former Governor of Pennsylvania, was in serious condition at Norwalk Hospital tonight as the result of what State Police at Westport described as "an attempted suicide."

A hospital spokesman said Pinchot, both wrists cut, had been given five blood transfusions and that he was "in poor if not critical condition."

C. & D. Canal Open for Traffic

Philadelphia, Aug. 7 (AP).—Huge cranes continued today to remove from the Chesapeake & Delaware Canal, already partially open for traffic, the debris of the Chesapeake City Drawbridge, knocked down by a tanker July 28.

Army engineers, who said a 65-foot channel 12 feet deep was already cleared, announced normal traffic was expected to be renewed next week.

Fifty feet of the canal, which is 221 feet wide at the bridge, has a 20-foot depth.

The tanker crashed into the bridge July 28, bringing it down athwart the canal, when tugs handling it lost control in the swift current at that spot. One man was slightly hurt.

Ex-Pitcher's Slayer Offered Aid by Former Husband

Chicago, Aug. 7 (AP).—The former husband of Mrs. Eleanor Williams, 25, platinum blonde night club dice girl, came to her aid today as a coroner's jury recommended she be held to the grand jury on a charge of murdering her lover, Gordon McNaughton, 32.

The former husband, Clarence Williams, 36, a telegrapher, embraced and kissed Eleanor at the inquest, talked to her privately and then told reporters: "I still love her. I'll do all I can to help her."

Williams divorced her in 1939. She told police she left him and their daughter, Jacqueline, 6, for McNaughton, a postal substation clerk, who once pitched for the Boston Red Sox.

Another blonde in McNaughton's life, Mrs. Dorothy Moos, 27, in whose hotel room he was shot to death yesterday, testified that Mrs. Williams burst into the room, argued and fought and, after Mrs. Moos had once snatched a pistol from her, shot McNaughton.

Mrs. Moos told investigators she had left her husband several weeks ago for McNaughton.

Army Law Unit To Be Moved To Michigan U.

The Army's Judge Advocate General's School, located at the National University Law School here since last February, will be moved to the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. early next month, it was announced yesterday.

Maj. Gen. Myron C. Cramer, the Judge Advocate General of the Army, said that the difficulty of finding living quarters for the student officers ordered to the school was the chief factor influencing the transfer.

Col. Edward H. Young, commandant of the school, praised National Law School for "unselfishly and patriotically" providing its facilities for the Army.

Recinos Sees Bright Future For Mestizos

Dr. Adrian Recinos, Minister of Guatemala, last night forecast that those nations of Central and South America which possess natural resources and capable and diligent workers will be called upon after the war to play "an important role in the reconstruction and preservation of civilization, as we know it on this continent."

The economic potentialities of these countries, he declared, can be doubled as sources of raw materials, food products and essential industries if the Indians, "the millions of men and women who were born and raised on the land of their forefathers, receive, at some future time, education and thorough preparation for work and modern life"

He does not view the Indians' emancipation as a sentimental undertaking but one, rather, of "social justice and national economic planning."

Dr. Recinos sketched his views at American University as one of this week's speakers on the "Latin-America and the War" section of the Institute on World Problems which the World Federation of Education Associations is concluding in cooperation with the university. The institute, which began July 12, will run through August 15.

Dr. Recinos went back to the days of the Spanish Conquest, recalled the cruelties which put an end to centuries of peace, the enslavement of the natives and, finally, the emergence of the mestizos, the result of Indian-Spaniard intermarriages, who proclaimed and achieved independence in the early years of the nineteenth century.

The natives, he said, absorbed what was best in the Castilian culture of the invaders, reestablished themselves and increased in numbers, "taking a new lease on life in those lands that had previously been lost to the invader."

He called the picture today "certainly promising." The Indians' horizon has been broadened through education and legislation, and though some groups, proud of their ancient heritage, still cling to the traditions of their ancestors, they nevertheless live in complete tranquility with other citizens, he said.

Tenants Protest Plan to Hike Rent At Apartment

More than 30 tenants of the Chalfonte Garden Apartments, 1601 Argonne Place Northwest, appeared at Rent Administration headquarters yesterday to protest a proposed rent increase for each apartment, ranging from $2.50 to $10 a month.

Mrs. Elizabeth L. Saxton, resident manager, who represented the management, agreed during the hearing to abandon the claim that more than $40,000 in "capital improvements" should be considered in the case. Alan Posner, a tenant, contended that these improvements, including a cooling system, landscaping and redecoration, were done before January 1941.

J. Warren Wilson, examiner for the administration, said the hearing will be conducted on the basis of increases in the cost of telephone service, salary boosts and individual services for tenants. He said all of the 205 units in the building are affected.

Fleming Urged For Occoquan Superintendent

William French Fleming, deputy superintendent of Occoquan Workhouse, was recommended yesterday to succeed Arthur L. Petitt, superintendent of the institution, who retired August 1. The Board of Public Welfare will consider the recommendation for the $4600-a-year appointment at its meeting August 24.

Fleming, 47, has been on the staff of the Workhouse since 1924, when he was an assistant farm steward. Made superintendent of animal husbandry in 1929, in three years he increased the hog production from 50 to 200,000 pounds a year. He is a member of the Fairfax County Selective Service Board and also is president of the Bank of Occoquan. It is understood that his nomination is backed by Ray Huff, general superintendent of penal institutions.

Petitt, 61, has been with the District penal service since 1910, and served as superintendent of the Occoquan plant since July, 1929. His retirement, caused by poor health, he requested under the provision of law allowing voluntary retirement after 30 years' continuous service.

Willkie Lunches At White House Prior to Trip

In preparation for a semiofficial mission to capitals of several of America's Allies, Wendell L. Willkie was a guest yesterday at a farewell White House luncheon for Wilhelmina, Queen of the Netherlands.

Following the luncheon, Willkie discussed the projected trip at some length with Mr. Roosevelt in the privacy of the executive office. He said his presence at the luncheon for the queen could best be described as to further his knowledge of international affairs rather than as to represent the Republican Party, of which he is still titular head. He came to the White House at the express invitation of the President.

Willkie refused to reveal what countries, capitals and battle lines he expected to visit, but it was learned that while he is planning to make the trip of his own initiative, he still will have a semiofficial status similar to that he exercised during his visit to Britain last year.

Waldo Frank Able To Leave Hospital Bed

Buenos Aires, Aug. 7 (AP).—Waldo Frank, United States writer and lecturer, who was severely beaten by six men in his apartment last Sunday, left his hospital bed today for an hour and probably will be able to leave Argentina early next week.

Friends said he was planning to issue a new message to the Argentine people. Threats by mail and telephone have come to Frank since the beating, it was learned.

Neat Trick

Pilot Lands Crippled Army Plane

While Bolling Field officers and men looked on and an ambulance and firefighting equipment stood by in readiness for an emergency, an Army Air Forces pilot brought a training plane with faulty tractable landing gear safely to earth in a spectacular belly landing yesterday.

In the plane with the officer, First Lieut. R. R. Seymour of Cary, N. C., was Staff Sergt. M. L. Webb of Alameda, Calif. Rather than abandon the ship, after discovering on one try at landing that the gear was not working, Lieutenant Seymour came in at 90 miles an hour on the airport turf. The plane was only slightly damaged. The men, who were given permission to use their parachutes if judgment warranted, escaped injury entirely and received compliments from the field commandant.

"It was a delicate piece of piloting and Lieutenant Seymour's judgment was sound. He is to be complimented," Col. Lewis R. Parker, the commandant, said.

Colonel Parker conversed with Seymour as the pilot circled the field several times in the distressed plane. Seymour was told to use his judgment and to parachute if he wasn't confident he could make a safe landing.

"I was pretty sure I could make it. It was not the first time I've made forced landings—but it was the first time without wheels," said Lieut. Seymour, who served as an Eastern Airlines pilot between Atlanta and San Antonio before joining the air forces.

Describing his initial attempt to land, the lieutenant said, "I felt the left wheel sink and gunned the engine before the wing could hit the ground in a hope that we could get the gear in working order in the air."

Sergeant Webb said he had every confidence in the pilot and neither of them thought very much about using the parachutes.

Their comrades at the field cheered them as they climbed, uninjured, from the plane.

Helen Kane's Husband Ill After Operation

New York, Aug. 7 (AP).—Dan Healy, the "Mayor of Broadway" and husband of Helen Kane, the former Boop-Boop-a-Doop-Girl, was in critical condition tonight after an emergency abdominal operation.

The 53-year-old singer-dancer, a veteran of the World War, has been appearing in "This is the Army."

Treasury, Navy Stocking Coal Reserves

The Treasury and Navy Departments are building up a 125,000-ton coal storage pile as an emergency reserve against fuel supply interruptions next winter, Harold Ickes in his capacity as solid fuels coordinator for war said yesterday.

The stockpiles are in addition to normal reserves which have been carried in the past. This coal is being stored on temporary sites since regular storage places have been filled to capacity, Ickes said.

Ickes advised homeowners, business and industrial users of coal to follow the Government's example, pointing out that "if sufficient storage of coal is built up this summer, there will be much less likelihood of coal shortages next winter to interfere with the war effort and cause possible suffering."

The coal going into reserve piles in Washington includes some 100,000 tons of bituminous coal which the procurement division of the Treasury is stocking in cooperation with the Public Buildings Administration, and approximately 20,000 tons of bituminous and 5000 tons of anthracite which the Navy is stocking for the Washington Navy Yard.

The Treasury's procurement division buys supplies for the Capitol power plant, which furnishes heat to the Capitol and the Senate and House Office buildings, and for the Central Heating Plant, which heats most of the Government buildings in Washington.

While both departments ordinarily carry a substantial amount of coal in storage, they have relied in the past on current deliveries for a considerable share of their winter requirements.

Ickes reported that a number of States and municipalities are building up extra coal reserves.

Two Firms Given Army Contracts

The War Department announced yesterday that a contract has been awarded to the A. Lloyd Goode Co. of Washington for the construction of temporary frame buildings for the Army in Alexandria.

No details were given other than the contract was in "Class D"—ranging in amount from $100,000 to $500,000. The department also announced the award of an architect-engineer services contract to the J. E. Greiner Co. of Baltimore for temporary frame buildings in Prince Georges County.

Richmond 'Noah' and Family Prosper on Alaska Homestead

By the Associated Press

Juneau, Alaska, Aug. 7.—Remember Paul Satko?

Two years after the unemployed Richmond, Va., machinist broke loose from all ties in the United States, built a crude "ark" and, defying authorities, took his wife and eight children north to Alaska, this is the way he sums it up:

"I owe nobody. I have paid my way and have money in my pockets. I'm better off than I could possibly have been back there."

The war has helped Paul somewhat. He has a good market for his produce. But his own vigorous efforts in hewing a home out of the wilderness laid the foundation for his new-found prosperity. That, with the help of his good wife, Molly, and his sons and daughters.

Satko's homestead is 26 miles up the Eagle River. He has grubbed and cleared enough land to put 13 acres under cultivation. He sells his produce on visits here.

On a visit today, Satko said:

"Food will win this war and I've got a good crop planted. I'm raising potatoes and expect a good crop. I bring beets, carrots, lettuce and rutabagas into town and sell direct to merchants."

His root cellar will be well filled and recently he shot a large brown bear in his fields and cured some of the meat. He has also salted down several barrels of herring for the winter. His farm equipment, including a tractor made from "odds and ends," all are serviceable.

In the spring of 1940 Satko completed his 40-foot, 10-ton "ark" at Tacoma, Wash., after towing the hull across country from Virginia on a truck. Seafaring men scoffed and a Seattle juvenile court judge issued a court order to stop the trip north. But Satko slipped out of Seattle waters, loaded his family aboard near the Canadian line and sailed north, weathering stormy waters.

Satko reiterated his satisfaction with life with the comment:

"I've no regrets over the trip. My family is in the best of health and the future is bright."

Grandma's Lamp May Be Useful

Baltimore, Aug. 7 (AP).—Grandma's kerosene lamp may prove to be more than a well-furbished heirloom. The State Roads Commission said yesterday that the new ferry terminal approaches at Sandy Point may be lighted by kerosene lamps because the Public Roads Administration had banned steel for road and bridge construction and electric wiring for lighting new roads and bridges.

Boston, Aug. 7 (INS).—Massachusetts motorists, who must buy insurance for their autos under State laws, may pay premiums in relation to their gasoline ration cards next year. Insurance Commissioner Charles Harrington said tonight he was studying the matter. Heretofore premiums have been determined by traffic conditions in the city in which the insured car has been garaged.

The Federal Diary

Editor's note: Attorney General Francis Biddle writes today's edition of the Federal Diary. He has been busy prosecuting the eight German saboteurs or else his column would have appeared here last week during the vacation of Jerry Kluttz.

By Francis Biddle
Attorney General

I am going to use this opportunity generously afforded me by Jerry Kluttz to say a word about the loyalty and efficiency of one of the hardest-working groups of Government employes in Washington—those men and women in the Department of Justice.

BIDDLE

For more than a year now, under the impetus of the war program, both the volume of work and the personnel of the department have expanded tremendously. Inevitably, of course, the expansion has been something less than proportional: we haven't yet got the personnel up to parity with the volume of work. Therein lies the justification for this tribute to their work.

At the last count the Department of Justice had a total of about 9000 persons on its rolls in the Washington office alone. A year ago this number was only 5600. The increase, therefore, is about 61 per cent. Yet during the past year, an estimated 1,500,000 hours of overtime were worked by our employes. This is exclusive of the additional time because of the lengthened work day.

For the last 12 months, a large section of the FBI has been on a three-shift basis. For a time last winter, several sections of the Immigration and Naturalization Service also went on a three-shift day. And not a night or holiday passes but that many of our offices remain busily at work, piling up still more of that never-to-be-paid-for overtime.

On War Footing

In an important sense, the Department of Justice has "converted" to a war footing. Some of our people had no special knowledge of the new duties they were called upon to assume. Their new tasks had to be learned from the ground up. And in a great many instances they had to dovetail existing routines and duties into the immediate demands of these new tasks. These adjustments have been splendidly executed.

Recently, some of the department's war functions have been coordinated under the newly created War Division with Charles Fahy, the Solicitor General, temporarily in charge. Perhaps a brief description of the constituent units of this division would help to make clear some of the more important aspects of our war work.

The Alien Enemy Control Unit, headed by Edward J. Ennis, is responsible for devising and enforcing the special rules of conduct for the approximately one million unnaturalized Germans, Italians and Japanese now living in the country. The problem was to set up controls which would effectively protect the Nation from spies and saboteurs, but to do it in a manner consistent with the democratic principles for which we are fighting. We did not want to harm or persecute that great majority of alien enemies who are completely loyal.

We did this by placing certain restrictions on the travel and conduct of all alien enemies and by requiring each to obtain and carry with him at all times a special certificate of identification. Beyond these set limits, the alien enemy can carry on his life as unhampered as any other alien. But those who are considered dangerous are picked up by the FBI and, after a hearing before an Alien Hearing Board, may be interned for the duration of the war.

Enemy Propaganda

The Special War Policies Unit, under Lawrence M. C. Smith, keeps an eye on enemy propaganda and other seditious material. It reads and analyzes a great volume of foreign language and other newspapers and periodicals. It also administers the Foreign Agents Registration Act which requires a complete disclosure of the activities of every one who represents a foreign government or foreign political interests.

The Criminal Division, directed by Wendell Berge, also figures prominently in our war program. It handles all prosecutions of wartime offenders and directs grand jury investigations into charges of espionage, sedition and other disloyal activities. In addition, it performs a great amount of administrative detail in the enforcement of the Selective Service Act and in the program for the denaturalization of disloyal citizens.

The FBI, under J. Edgar Hoover, with its large corps of trained agents is the Nation's most effective police and investigative body. Its exploits in running down spies and saboteurs are well known to every one. The very fact that no important act of foreign-inspired sabotage has yet occurred after seven months of war is a tribute to the efficiency of this bureau of the Department of Justice.

This, of course, is not an exhaustive list of the war functions of the department. The work of our Lands Division, for example, under Norman Littell has been very important to the war effort. I have touched the high lights only. But it does indicate, I think, that we have a pretty well rounded program for the protection of our internal security. And that program works because of the loyalty, ability and determinntion of those 9000 people, from clerks to top executives.

No One Seriously Hurt

District Building Elevator Fall Reveals Lack of Safeguards

A 40-foot fall by one of the creaking District Building elevators yesterday brought to light the fact that, although passed by the building inspector, these elevators lack certain safety appliances required of every other building in town.

The outmoded and inconvenient elevators have long been a laughing stock among visitors to the District Building. It was not until the one near the east entrance fell from between the first and second floors down into the sub-basement that it was revealed that they lack proper safety equipment. Although none was seriously injured in the slow drop, occasioned by a counterweight getting stuck in the guiderail, the hazard of using these elevators remains.

Commissioner Guy Mason said that it would cost $38,000 to put these elevators in working condition, and even if the money were available, it is doubtful that priorities for the necessary critical materials could be obtained.

All Are Cerified

"Elevators like these wouldn't be allowed in private buildings," Mason declared. "In the first place, the tenants wouldn't put up with them, and then they couldn't even get a permit to operate from the building inspector."

Since all of these elevators have been certified by Robert H. Davis, District building inspector, dated no further back than July 30, Davis was asked if it were true that lower standards were used in passing on the District Building elevators than were demanded elsewhere.

Davis replied that although the elevators were "in good mechanical order," nevertheless there were certain "safety appliances required of any other elevator in town, lacking on the District ones."

Mason blamed Congress for the defective elevators. For years the excuse given for the ramshackle cars has been that the District Building is going to be torn down when the Municipal Center is completed, so there is no reason throwing away money on capital repairs for the old building at Fourteenth and E Streets.

Claims Congress Refuses Funds

"Every time Congress is asked for money to fix those elevators, it says that they will do until we move into the new buildings," Mason said. He admitted, however, that no request for new elevators has been made since he took office as Commissioner a year ago.

Occupants of the car that fell yesterday were Wilmot Jackson, operator; Walter Nelson, of the Municipal Architect's office, and Clarence Mitchell of the Highway Department. Jackson suffered a bruised knee and Nelson received a slight cut on the head from a light bulb that fell from the dome light when the car hit the shock absorber.

Man Guilty of Tossing Cat Into Furnace Faces Year Term

For throwing a live cat into a furnace to "get rid of it for good," James Glenn, Negro, of 1115 Ninth Street Northwest, was found guilty of cruelty to animals by a Municipal Court jury yesterday after a two-and-a-half-hour trial believed to be unique in District court annals.

Judge Walter J. Casey will impose sentence Friday. Probation officers are investigating Glenn's record. The maximum penalty allowed by law is one year in jail or a fine of $250. The case was prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney Dennis McCarthy and Humane Society Investigator Robert Poplar.

The defendant wept during the trial yesterday as the house janitor, Gene Thompson, testified that he saw Glenn walking toward the furnace with something in his hands and a moment later saw the cat leap out of the open door and run across the floor, its fur smoldering.

Poplar said the cat recovered after treatment by a veterinarian and recently bore a litter of kittens. At the time it was singed, last March 12, it was the mother of six others.

Traffic Death Here Is Held Accidental

D. C. traffic deaths this year.... 63
Deaths this date last year..... 50
District total last year..... 95

A District traffic death was declared accidental by a coroner's jury yesterday and two persons were injured when the automobile they were riding in struck a pole on Grant Street Northeast.

In the meantime, 9-year-old Michael McDermott, son of Michael J. McDermott, chief of the State Department's Division of Current Information, was reported in "satisfactory" condition at Sibley Hospital last night.

The boy was struck by an automobile while riding his bicycle at Crestwood Drive and Upshur Street Northwest. It was at first believed his skull was fractured but X-ray pictures failed to disclose such an injury. He suffered a bad concussion, Dr. Richard H. Spire said.

The coroner's inquest into the death of Ernie Maxwell, 49, of the Gospel Mission, fatally injured by a street car last Monday, resulted in the exoneration of the motorman, Claude J. Brookes, 27, of 715 Eighth Street Southeast.

It was testified Maxwell was intoxicated and stepped into the path of the trolley. He died at Casualty Hospital Thursday morning.

Ruth Shumate, Negro, 37, of 4920 Fitch Place Northeast, and William Warner, Negro, 21, of the Tuskegee Army Flying School, Tuskege, Ala., suffered minor cuts and bruises in the Grant Street incident.

They were riding in a car operated by Wendall Fagin, Negro, 25, of 4934 Blaine Street Northeast, and police said he apparently failed to negotiate a turn at Jay Street and crashed into a telephone pole.

Ham Blamed In 70 Food Poison Cases

Some mystery still surrounds the causes of food poisoning of 70 War Department workers on August 1, even though the Health Department last night filed its official report on its investigation of the food.

"Investigations by the Health Department show that ham sandwiches were chiefly responsible for the illness," Acting Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger said.

Yet Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the Preventable Disease Service, said that some of the workers who became ill had eaten beef or tongue sandwiches instead of ham.

Cumming reported that the ham from one of the cafeterias used by the employes in Temporary Buildings A, B and C showed the presence of staphlococci, bacteria commonly found in food poisoning outbreaks.

"Whether the incriminated ham was originally infected or contaminated in its processing or in the preparation of the sandwiches, we cannot say. Perhaps further epidemiological search will shed light on this point," Cumming said.

"In this connection it is noted that some of those made ill ate sandwiches made from either beef or tongue. This finding would indicate that there had been contamination with food poisoning organisms in the process of preparing these sandwiches.

"It is important to note that the day of the outbreak was hot, with a high humidity; thus, optimum conditions prevailed for the abundant growth of contaminating bacteria."

Seckinger, when asked about the apparent incongruity of the statements about the ham and the beef and tongue, would not say that this was anything more than a possible indication that the contamination was picked up in the kitchen where the sandwiches were prepared. He said that perhaps one of the cooks had handled the ham first and carried the bacteria.

Nor would Seckinger comment on what sanitary standards prevailed in the temporary barracks kitchen. He said that the premises had been inspected by the Health Department, then added that the manager of the cafeteria was "doing the best he could with the equipment he had." Seckinger said that the War Department had been requested to install certain equipment that would raise the sanitary standards of the kitchens.

A. J. Kennedy Found Guilty Of Assault

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Aug. 7.—Ambrose J. Kennedy, former Congressman and present candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fourth District, was found guilty today in criminal court on two charges of assaulting and interfering with a police officer in the course of his duty.

Kennedy was presented by the grand jury on July 31 and was indicted four days later.

Judge J. Abner Sayler, who presided at today's trial, postponed passing of sentence at the request of Kennedy's attorney, who announced that a motion for a new trial would be made.

Kennedy had pleaded innocent to both charges.

Police Lieut. Alexander L. Emerson, head of the headquarters division vice squad, who was first to take the witness stand, testified that Kennedy had struck him five or six times during a raid on James Heap's Tavern July 12 and attempted to take a prisoner from his custody.

Emerson said he had gone to the tavern at 3 a. m. July 12 to investigate a complaint that liquor was being sold there after the 2 a. m. closing hour.

Hit on Back, Officer Says

He arrested Heaps, he said, after an entrance had been effected.

Kennedy followed the officers and their prisoner to a police car, Emerson testified, demanding the release of Heaps.

"About half way to the car Kennedy grabbed me from behind, still demanding that I let Heaps go," said Emerson.

"I told him to get away from there and stop interfering. He then started beating on my back with his fists and struck me five or six times," the lieutenant added.

Emerson said he placed Heaps in the police car when Kennedy "rushed up again. He grabbed me by the arm and then caught Heaps' arm and tried to pull him out of the car."

"Officer Heck tried to pull Mr. Kennedy away and he struck the officer across the face with the back of his hand. It was then I ordered him arrested," Emerson said.

Other members of the vice squad, subsequently called, supported Emerson's testimony.

Went to Church, Kennedy Says

Kennedy, however, denied having been in Heaps' Tavern that night. He said he had gone to a motion picture show, a downtown hotel and then to a 2:30 a. m. mass at St. Vincent's Church where he said he remained a half hour.

Returning to his home, following the mass, Kennedy said he was attracted by a crowd that had gathered in front of Heaps' Tavern.

Kennedy testified he had advised Heaps to go along with the officers quietly.

"They have done you a dirty trick and have no right in smashing in your door but go along quietly and don't make any trouble," he asserted he said.

Victory Sidelights

Ration Boards Cautioned After Theft of Gas Books

Whitney Leary, OPA administrator for the District, yesterday announced that local ration boards had been instructed to take every precaution against theft of ration books. His warning followed the theft of an undetermined number of gas ration books from Board 3-B in the Petworth Branch Library, Georgia Avenue and Upshur Street Northwest, Wednesday night.

Leary said that most of the boards already had metal cases in which to keep their records and that the rest would be furnished with such burglar-proof containers as soon as possible.

He admitted the books of Board 3-B had been kept in a glass case, which the thief smashed after gaining entrance to the board's office by breaking through a screen and window in an areaway.

Leary said there was no complete record of the numbers of the books stolen from Board 3-B, but said it would be possible to check up on most of the missing books.

Four Commended For Defense Work

Official commendations were extended yesterday by the District Civilian Defense organization to four of its officials for meritorious service.

Those named were Clement Murphy, Fire Department battalion chief, former chief air raid warden; Brig. Gen. Frank T. Watson and Col. Guy S. Norvill, all of whom served as inspectors of the warden service, and Miss Mary Mason, who served as deputy air raid warden in charge of the women's division.

A certificate of merit was awarded to Murphy, and the other three were given citations in an announcement yesterday signed by Commissioner Young in his capacity as metropolitan civilian defense coordinator. The recommendations were made by a committee on citations and awards, including Maj. Gen. Peter C. Harris, chairman; Robert L. Jafnagin, secretary, and Frederick E. Altemus, Joshua Evans, jr., William W. Everett, Col. Julius I. Peyser and Mrs. Grace Hays Riley.

Films Showing Spray Method Recalled

Civilian Defense Director James M. Landis last night called for the return of all OCD films portraying the old "spray" method of extinguishing fire bombs and announced that a new motion picture showing the recently approved "jet" method is in preparation and will be released about September 1.

Copies of the new film, he said, will be available to private individuals for about $6. Requests should be addressed to the Visual Training Section, Office of Civilian Defense.

Patriotic Film Made Available

A new 10-minute motion picture, called "The Free American Way," and based on Lidice, the Czecho-Slovakian town which Nazis razed, is available for distribution through the District War Savings Committee, it was announced.

The film was produced for the Treasury Department by the Coca-Cola Co. and preaches the necessity of purchasing war bonds if Americans would escape the fate of Lidice. The Coca-Cola Co. furnishes the necessary operator and projector for all presentations, and arrangements for showings may be made through the War Sapings Committee office in the Washington Building.

Watchman Fined In Test Violation

Failure to extinguish lights during the surprise blackout July 20 resulted in a sentence of $20 or 20 days in Municipal Court yesterday for Thomas S. Gota, night watchman of the O Street Market, Seventh and O Streets Northwest.

Patrolman T. C. Harris of the Second Precinct testified that shortly after the alert sounded he saw Gota sweeping the store with all lights on. He signaled to the watchman through the closed door to extinguish the lights, he said, and Gota started putting them out by pulling the chains with a long pole. About half-way through the operation, the stick became entangled, the policeman said, and he left an air raid warden to "take charge."

When the blackout was almost over, Harris told Judge George D. Nielson, he saw the lights still burning half a block away and had a warrant sworn out.

District's Blackout Budget Set

Commissioners Find Items on Which to Spend $1,000,000 Appropriation

The million dollars provided for Washington's civilian defense in the blackout bill which was signed yesterday by President Roosevelt will be utilized by the District Commissioners to employ almost 200 men to guard the municipal water supply, to construct six emergency reservoirs for the fire department and in numerous other projects related to defense.

The Commissioners last night made public an itemized budget drawn up for the million-dollar fund shortly after Acting United States Coordinator of Defense Charles W. Kutz revealed that unannounced air raid tests, both daytime drills and blackouts, may be expected this month in the metropolitan area.

Budget allocations announced by the Commissioners follow:

Washington Aqueduct—$317,180, of which $308,400 would be used to pay the salaries of a guard force composed of one captain, three lieutenants, ten sergeants and 182 privates, the latter to be paid $1500 annually.

$100,000 for Hospitalization

Hospitalization—$100,000, to care for defense workers and others injured in air raids.

Communications — $166,690, of which $93,980 would be used to pay 63 workers who will man the seven subcenters and main control center.

Police Department—$119,085, to be used in paying defense guards and purchasing auxiliary police equipment.

Fire Department—$78,960, of which $64,950 would go to the construction of six emergency reservoirs, or cisterns, for use during air raids or other disasters.

District Water and Sewer Facilities—$89,677, broken down as follows: chlorine, $15,000; reserve pipe, $20,000; fittings, $7500; lumber, $5000; sand and concrete, $3000; installation of sirens and warning devices at water systems, $2500.

Other less sizable allocations include:

Air raid warden service, $33,060; motor transport service, $1184; volunteer office, $5460; civilian protection school, $3070; emergency medical service, $5890; civilian mobilization, $18,875.

Other Budget Items

Purchasing office, $350; municipal garage, $795; electrical department, $6300; District building superintendent, $10,560; secretary, Board of Commissioners, $1440; OCD executive director, $46,420; auditor's office, $6120; reserve for reimbursement for land seizure, $25,006.

At a meeting last Tuesday of deputy air-raid wardens, it was recalled that under the Blackout Act wardens are permitted during an actual raid to forcibly enter homes or buildings in which lights are left burning. This right of entry is specifically denied the wardens during a test blackout.

Kutz' complete statement of the intention to stage these tests is:

"It is anticipated that there will be unannounced air-raid tests in the metropolitan area during the month of August, occurring both during the daylight and the hours of darkness.

"When such tests are announced, all chiefs of services and suburban coordinators should conduct them in keeping with regulations and instructions governing the latest tests. Chiefs of service are responsible for performance of all units of their respective services, and for proper action to correct deficiencies noted during previous tests.

"Eight months have been devoted to the instruction of householders, pedestrians, drivers and others in conduct during air-raids leading up to performance during unannounced practice.

"The responsibility for the avoidance of accidents and proper performance by the services and all others in the metropolitan area now devolves upon the individual. These tests afford the community an opportunity to put into practice its own protective measures for which it has been previously trained.

"All civilian defense officials, the services and individuals should be constantly alert to act efficiently upon receipt of the warning signal. The coordinator desires to emphasize the necessity for the utmost calmness, a strict adherence to all protective plans previously developed, and the most scrupulous and painstaking care to avoid accidents."

'The Talk of the Town' Is About Law and Love

Romantic Melo Makes Legal Lore Enlivening; To Be an Actress, Become a Singer; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

SO THE THREE OF US who were chained to the drayma desks on the occasion of its earlier preview for the trade, yesterday, by special dispensation, took a gander at Columbia's "The Talk of the Town" and found it made to order for avid audience consumption.

RONALD COLMAN

This engaging item, which is both serious and comic in agreeable proportions, was produced and directed by George Stevens with something akin to what once was known as the "Capra touch." In its defense of both the letter and the spirit of the law—one of its pivotal characters is an appointee to the United States Supreme Court—it indulges in a few philosophical discussions which Mr. Stevens has managed to make both interesting and highly diverting. Lest there be any doubt about it in any mind, he has made sure of a full measure of suspense by interjecting scenes of taut action and mob violence at the points where they will do the most good.

The casting hardly could have been better. The triangle on which the whole thing pivots has Ronald Colman, Jean Arthur and Cary Grant as its equilateral sides. The excellence of the assignments goes far beyond that—which is a matter for later consideration, upon the opening of the film before an audience at the Earle on August 21.

A more important point, at the moment, is that "The Talk of the Town," without any suggestion that there is a war going on, inferentially deals powerfully with it by stressing the fundamentals of human rights in a totally different field.

Having paid scant heed to the title credits, preliminary to the unspooling of the story proper, we found ourself cudgeling a stubborn memery for the identity of the admirable Negro actor playing the role of Mr. Colman's valet and houseman. It was Rex Ingram, not seen on a local screen in a part of importance for months on end now. In case your recollection is as faulty as my own, it was Rex Ingram, who played the role of De Lawd in the film version of "The Green Pastures." No wonder he haunted us!

On the Perversity of Fate

Irene Manning, who makes her first appearance in a role of note—to Washington audiences, at least—opposite Humphrey Bogart in next week's "The Big Shot," is another of Hollywood's strange anomalies. "I always wanted to be a great dramatic actress," is what Miss Manning always says. So she became a singer. Born in Cincinnati, she attended Los Angeles High School and studied at the Eastman School of Music, in Rochester, N. Y., which is by way of getting around a bit in quest of learning. Completing her music, she went into light opera as fast as she could get there. Returning to Hollywood after her career on the stage, she was tested for "The Desert Song," starring Dennis Morgan, and then popped into "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the musical biography of George M. Cohan, instead. She's only just now getting around to her acting!

And speaking of singers, Bea Wain, on her way to the Earle stage, is one of the veteran vocalists of radio, having made her debut on the zephyrs at the age of six on a children's program. She has been singing into microphones ever since, with a little stage and screen work thrown in, now and again, for good measure. In private life, Miss Wain is Mrs. Andre Baruch, wife of one of the better known of the radio announcers, now serving as a first lieutenant attached to the office of the Quartermaster General, in this city. So now you know.

Having acquired complete command of the English language, with scarcely a trace of accent, in no time at all, the cinema's French Michele Morgan has a rival in the stage's Viennese Maria Palmer, coming to the National next week in an important role in "The Moon Is Down." Miss Palmer's voice coach, Albert Lessac, said it was impossible for her to acquire a proper English diction in less than a year. So, like Mlle. Morgan, she buckled down and finished the job in six months. As to the role in "The Moon Is Down," she didn't tell Chester Erskine, the director, she was of foreign birth until after she had been signed for the part. When he hired her, he thought she was an American.

You-Can't-Get-'Em-Up Note

Those two dramatic editors of local papers we were speaking about are getting nearer and nearer to the old reveille every minute now. Guess who!

'Varsity Varieties' a Hit at C.U.

By Ernest L. Schier.

Not satisfied with its previous triumphs in the field of drama and musical comedy, the speech and drama department of Catholic University is now matching its talents with the numerous revivals of popular vaudeville, at present enjoying considerable popularity.

An aggregation of energetic youngsters, whose ability for song, dance and comedy shows great promise, has been gathered together into a revue consisting of 14 acts which blend into a pleasant evening's diversion. No phase of popular entertainment has been overlooked. There are singers to make you sad or make you gay; dancers that tap like a riveting gun going into a beam of steel, or waltz with the effortless grace of a summer breeze; there are skits to amuse, and monologists who perform with all the suaveness and poise usually seen only in the more famous of the New York night spots. And there is even a ventriloquist whose alter ego is of somewhat darker hue than Charlie McCarthy.

The absence of Leo Brady, due to a heavy cold, did not diminish the effect of the "Fuller Construction Orchestra" (borrowed from Joe Cook) whose method of making music would rival the most intricate Rube Goldberg cartoon. Mimi and Janice Norton combined to make one of the most tuneful sister-acts heard around these parts for some time and its certainly no burden to look at them, either. Lionel Booth and Cecilia Brown's visual demonstration of the problems of household laundering will find quite some sympathy with housekeepers who face the same dilemma. Orsinger and Martino do right well by a song-and-dance act, in which the former delivers with comic seriousness the sad tale of Ann Bolynne, who walked the Tower of London "with 'er 'ead tucked underneath 'er arm," while the latter performs a neat soft-shoe dance.

Bibi Bowls 'Em Over

Bibi Osterwald, whose talent goes unnoticed by Broadway producers, much to the amazement of local drama critics, takes time off from her appearance on the Willard Roof to wrap the audience around her little finger with her version of "Casey Jones." Lovely Eileen Ritter steps down off the stage to lead the patrons in some old-time favorites and many were the voices which rang loud and clear. Brooks Ford and Gervais Wallace, two instructor from the Arthur Murray school, do a graceful demonstration of their art while Eileen sings accompaniment. Bill Coleman and Alan Carney alternate as master of ceremonies. And let's not forget a nod in the direction of Mary Lou and Jeanne Hartke, the winsome pages who paraded the placards, bearing the names of the performers, across the stage.

Father Hartke is responsible for the staging and his experienced hand shows in the smoothness with which the show was run off. Ralph Brown has painted an amusing curtain which is let down during intermission. The show will run through tomorrow night in the University Theater on the campus.

Metropolitan

"They All Kissed the Bride," Columbia's lively exposition of what a young feminine business executive should not do to stay out of love, has moved around from its successful engagement at the Earle to the Metropolitan Theater for the current week.

With Joan Crawford and Melvyn Douglas, as its costars, and a cast of deft farceurs in support, this companion piece to M-G-M's "Take a Letter, Darling," is a gay and frivolous thing that reaches high points of zippy humor seldom attained. Some of them, as a general thing, are not even dared!

Miss Crawford has her best role in recent months in this subject, and Mr. Douglas matches hers with one of his own most suave and ingratiating performances. Assembled in their support are such admirable funmakers as Roland Young, Allen Jenkins, Billie Burke, Andrew Tombes, Helen Parrish, Mary Treen, Nydia Westman, Roger Clark and Edward Gargan.

Would Have No Truck With Love!

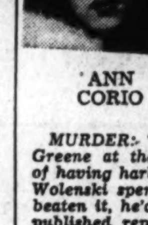
JOAN CRAWFORD as the feminine tycoon of the de luxe trucking business, who learned how the other half lives—and liked it—in "They All Kissed the Bride," now being presented as chief attraction for the week at the Metropolitan Theater. Melvyn Douglas is costarred under a title that has practically nothing to do with the principal gal in the case, pictured above

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Signboard

New York, Aug. 7.

FASHION: At the Harry Hopkins-Louise Macy wedding at the White House last week, a dress-designer's nightmare came true—for two of the guests at this, the most publicized social event of the year, wore exactly the same dresses and hat. The two were Mrs. Macy's aunt and Eleanor Roosevelt.



ANN CORIO

SALE: Mabel Boll, the Dimond Queen, sold her Florida home last year. The purchaser made payments in instalments. He paid the last instalment with five $1000 bills on April 1 . . . "What is this, an April fool joke?" asked the surprised Mrs. Boll, when she saw the large bills . . . "I always transact my business in cash," explained the buyer. Mrs. Boll didn't know, until she saw his picture in the paper on Monday, that he, Robert Greene, was the gambler and betting commissioner.

MURDER: "Dimples" Wolenski, who was murdered with Robert Greene at the White House Association, was one of those accused of having harbored "Lepke" Buchalter while the latter was a fugitive. Wolenski spent large sums of money to beat that rap. If he hadn't beaten it, he'd be alive today—in jail, but alive . . . Contrary to the published reports, Max Fox—who killed both men—did not wear a mask during the shooting. The "mask" was the creation of the eyewitnesses, who were reluctant to become involved in the case . . . Fischer, one of the bridge players in the fatal game that night, had lost to Greene and Dimples for more than a year. Monday night he was winning for the first time when the killer's gun began blazing and broke up the game.

AMITY: Cab Calloway, now appearing at the Casa Manana in Hollywood, includes Leopold Stokowski among his list of best friends. Calloway was asked: "What difference would you say there is between your music and that of the symphonic conductor?" . . . "I'd put it this way," replied the boogie-woogie bandleader, "when Stokowski plays Tchaikowsky, it's without lyrics."

CHATTER: Winston Churchill's congratulatory wire to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hopkins was singed "Prime" . . . George Britt is going to Syria for the Office of War Information . . . Ann Corio's new picture, "Jungle Siren," will have its premiere in Providence—the one city where the strip-teaser never was permitted to work because of the censor's objections . . . Paul Draper is writing a book about The Dance . . . Edward Duryea Dowling, the producer-director, has been tapped by the Draft Board . . . Major de Seversky, exponent of aviation, has been asked to be the principal speaker at the United Auto Workers' convention this month.

ART: William Gropper, the leftist artist, sent a painting for exhibition at the gallery of the American Contemporary Artists. Gropper placed a price minimum of $1000 on that painting . . . A prospective customer came to the gallery, expressed admiration for the painting, and offered $200. Herman Baron, head of the A. C. A., reported this to Gropper, who spurned the offer, insisting that he would not accept less than $1000 . . . "But, Gropper," protested Baron, "I thought you were a People's Artist."

Earle

They may not be as "gay" as the title sounds, but they are gay enough so that "The Gay Sisters" is being continued a second week at the Earle Theater. Anyhow, the word "gay" in the title, as must be pretty well understood by now, is merely the abbreviation of the family name of Gaylord.

These three Gay sisters, as a matter of fact, lead an extremely hectic life. After having adjured them never to sell the land—of which the Gaylord family owns approximately a half-billion dollars' worth—their father marches away to lose his life on the battlefields of France in the First World War, and 23 years later, his daughters find themselves involved in an endless litigation over the ironclad will he had left. Their Nemesis is the young Mr. Charles Barclay, who has come up from nothing to a position of vast financial and social power, and therein lies the conflict, romance and much of the humor in which the picture abounds.

The story is a cleverly contrived one, told through a great diversity of character, scene and action. The young ladies of the title, themselves, are in striking contrast and the source of constant surprise by their unconventional deportment. They are skillfully portrayed by Barbara Stanwyck, as the eldest; Geraldine Fitzgerald and Nancy Coleman, with George Brent and Gig Young, former Washingtonian, acquitting themselves handsomely in the leading male roles. The supporting cast bristles with "names."

Harry Anger's lively stage revue, headed by Stubby Kaye, the Acromaniacs, the Musicmakers, the Read Sisters and the rest, is, of course, being held over with the screen feature.

HEDDA HOPPER

Her Warrior Husband

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 7.—Corpl. Gilbert Roland, at Camp Crowder, is quite a favorite with the men—not because he's an actor nor because he's married to Connie Bennett, but because he's a knockout on the rifle range and a hard worker.

CONSTANCE BENNETT

When Connie appeared there, he watched the performance with the rest of the men—never asked for leave to see her until after her stunt was over.

Rudy Vallee doesn't know whether he'll be in the Army, Navy or Coast Guard, but hopes he can keep his radio show so he can contribute that money to Uncle Sam.

Edgar Bergen, whose classification is 1-A, is leaving for Washington, D. C., to see, among other things, whether he can continue with his show and donate that money.

The Dean Jaggers are in for a separation, which will be quiet, dignified, and without malice. It's just one of those situations. They could easily have been brother and sister, instead of husband and wife. They've been married six years; there are no children.

Dean's greatest part on the screen was as Brigham Young.

Now that James Cruze, who made "The Covered Wagon" and was one of our biggest and best loved directors of the "silent" days, has passed away, those of the industry who had forgotten him will begin the usual eulogy.

Jim married Alberta McCoy just a year ago and it's a great comfort to us who loved him to know that he called it "the happiest year of my life."

Zorina is leaving for New York to consult with Russell Birdwell. I understand she had a three-picture deal contract. "For Whom the Bell Tolls" was one of them, with no ifs, ands, or buts, so it wouldn't surprise me if a lawsuit started popping over her being dropped from the cast. That's happened before.

Remember when Merle Oberon—pardon me, Lady Korda—sued because Marlene Dietrich replaced her in "Garden of Allah?" Merle collected, too.

Rouben Mamoulian is seeking Irene Dunne and Cary Grant for "Don't Spoil Your Husband." Well, Irene's never spoiled one yet.

Richard Thorpe has another hit "White Cargo." It isn't every director who can get Hedy Lamar to black up, either. Wow! Do the sailors go into their stuff when she comes on the screen!

Rose Hecht is just out of the hospital, after an operation on her feet.

Clem Bevans, who's 65, and his wife have been looking for three years for a little girl, and next week they'll get her. What a place she'll walk into! They have a playroom, a garden—the works, all prepared.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

It is all very confusing at Griffith Stadium these days, and we don't mean the recent successes of the Nats, although that is a matter which is also quite baffling.

POVICH

We speak of the Washington baseball customer who no longer is necessarily a Washington fan. The vocal support that a visiting club gets in Washington is tremendous. On a day when the Nats are getting their brains knocked out, the glee and shouting is terrific. Just a couple of years ago, the crowds used to sit in glum chagrin when the Nats were getting licked.

But in these days of Boom Town Washington, the native fans are outnumbered by the come-latelys from the North and West, and the average customer is apt to feel little allegiance to the Nats. The influx from New York was evident the other night at Griffith Stadium. The Yankees were threatening to beat Sid Hudson in the late innings, and they were getting full-throated support from thousands in the stands.

Down in the Griffith Stadium front office, outside the park, the office workers used to be able to determine the progress of the game from the shouting that was wafted in their direction. A lot of noise at frequent intervals meant the Nats were doing all right. They could hear the load groans and moans, too, and then they knew that the going inside was rough for the Nats.

Can't Trust Crowd Reaction

"But we're all pretty bewildered now," related Edward B. Eynon, jr., the club's business manager who is busy counting the gate receipts during most of a ball game. "We hear a lot of joyful shouting and cheering and think that maybe one of our boys has tripled with the bases loaded, or something, only to learn that Joe DiMaggio has just doubled two Yankee runs across the plate. We can't depend on crowd reaction any more. We can't trust it to tell us how the game is going."

Even in the old days when every man who bought a ticket to the ball game was, presumably, a Washington fan and gloated or suffered according to the success of the Nats, there was one afternoon a week when the front-office force paid no heed to the shouting of the crowd as an index to what was going on inside the park. "That was Ladies Day," says Eynon. "We used to get all thrilled when we heard the ladies send up a great shout and hand-clapping. I'd call up the press box and ask how many runs we had scored, only to learn that one of our men had just popped up. Those women cheered anything and everything."

The metamorphosis of the Washington baseball customer gives the visiting club a great break. In no other town does an invading team get as hearty support. It is no lack of allegiance on the part of the Washington fan. He is there, but more often than not he is outnumbered by customers from somewhere in the general section of the visiting team.

Service Men Are Paradox

And the soldiers and sailors who are the guests of the management only accentuate the divided support for the home club. For some reason, whenever service men attend games in a body, they invariably root for the visiting club. It is true not only in Washington. In Boston, for example, where the service men are invited from nearby Camp Devens and the Boston coast forts, they don't root for the Red Sox. The Nats or any other club that goes into Boston can always count on the support of the service men. That quirk is unexplainable except on the grounds that the service men are naturally iconoclastic and are impelled to take issue with the majority. Or maybe they simply think it is more sporting to give the visiting club their support.

In other towns, fan support has followed much the same pattern of former years. In Chicago, for example, the visiting club can expect little sympathy. The fans are unanimously for the White Sox. Unlike Washington, the fabric of Chicago fandom hasn't changed. In Boston, they may boo the Red Sox, but only because their disgust has stemmed from deep loyalty. Until the Washington scene changed, New York was the place where the visiting club always received the squarest shake from the fans. A Yankee Stadium crowd contained more sympathy for a visiting club than that of any other city.

Could Happen in Brooklyn

On the Red Sox's last visit to Washington, a Washington crowd gave its greatest demonstration of the year in cheering young Johnny Pesky after two consecutively sensational plays in the Boston infield. It cheered lustily for minutes on end, and stood on its collective feet during the ovation to Pesky. But it wasn't pure recognition of Pesky's skill by non-partisan fans that incited the applause. A good part of the demonstrators were former New Englanders.

Brooklyn, of course, still holds the championship for extreme loyalty to the home town club. Dinty Moore, the New York restaurateur, was telling us last year how he and a party of friends, rooters for the Giants, went to Brooklyn to see the two teams play. One of the party, with no particular allegiance to the Giants, or the Dodgers, for that matter, languidly rose from his seat to stretch his legs. From somewhere behind, he was fetched a punch in the nose. The luckless fellow had chosen the first half of the seventh inning to stand up and stretch! In Brooklyn.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

'All-Army Eleven Ups Soldiers' Stock

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 7.—It gives a guy a clean, optimistic feeling to be around the All-Army Football Team, quartered here under the calculating eye of Col. Bob Neyland, one of the greatest coaches ever produced.

CONSIDINE

A fellow who looks at the covers of magazines, which show those chinless privates in ill-fitting uniforms, or who reads the invariably illiterate letters which American soldiers are supposed to send to their girls, tends to get the wrong slant on the American soldier. You ought to see the American soldiers on this football team. You never saw such physical specimens in all your life. Enormous, well-trained, bronzed young men who look good enough right now to whip their weight in wildcats or double their weight in Axis foes. What men they are!

Not that they're a bragging lot. In fact we ran into one of them who must be the world's most modest athlete. He's Private Jackie Hunt, a swell looking kid from Huntington, W. Va. He's an apprentice machinist in the Air Corps, stationed somewhere in Arkansas. He told us in his shy way that he was the most surprised fellow in the Army when he was ordered to report here to join the All-Army Team.

It's a Surprise to One Husky Boy

"Sure knocked me on my ear," he confided in his soft drawl as he stripped his lean, muscular 190-pound frame and climbed into an old practice suit. "Didn't know it until last Saturday. Sure hope they didn't waste their money, bringing me "way up here."

We asked him what he meant by that. He seemed surprised. "I don't think I can make this team," he said, earnestly, looking around the locker room. "These boys are too good for me." We told him then that orders had just come from General Surles in Washington to release him temporarily from the Army All-Star Team in order to let him play for the College All-Stars in Chicago, against the Bears. He was genuinely surprised.

"Chicago! I'll never make that team, either." In case you don't know, Private Jackie Hunt of Little Marshall College, Huntington, W. Va., was the leading scorer of the United States during the 1940 season. He tallied 169 points with his tremendous all-around playing. He could, and did do everything one can do with a football. The Chicago Bears drafted him last winter, after his senior football year. You know how many mistakes the Bears make.

Hunt is a Huntington boy and gravitated naturally to Marshall College, though he had many offers from bigger and better known places, on whose teams he would have been probably as well known as Tom Harmon. We asked him if he ever regretted missing that chance. "No," he answered, after a while. "Marshall suited me just fine. I don't think I could have made the teams of some of those colleges that wanted me."

The Colonel Gives His Side of Story

All of which sounded almost like defeatism—until we saw Hunt in action a little later in the afternoon. He's harder to stop than a tank with a pea shooter.

Colonel Neyland relaxed a little after a practice to talk about his boys. He has playing for him one captain, the former Michigan State All-American, Johnny Pingel, a dozen lieutenants, including the great Princeton star, Dave Allerdice, and a host of noncoms.

"We had some trouble getting them," he said with a wry grin. "We couldn't get any player who is out of the country, of course, and nobody from officers' candidate school, or a point-of-embarkation post or air pilots. Some of the boys we heard were in uniform turned out to be in the Navy or the Marines."

Colonel Neyland faces a tremendous job of unteaching the boys their babel of systems, and teaching them the intricate Neyland plan which, among many other departures, puts the quarterback up against and just to the side of the center. All Neyland backs extend their hands, as if waiting for the pass from center. He uses a balanced line, single wing, and what amounts to the Notre Dame style of blocking.

Leo Nakama Blasts 8-Year Indoor Mark

Ohio State Star Knocks 28 Seconds Off Old Time; Another Mark Set

By the Associated Press

New London, Conn., Aug. 7.—A human fish, Leo Nakama, Hawaiian-born Ohio State ace, shattered the world's one-mile record tonight as the three-day national men's A. A. U. outdoor swim championships got under way.

Nakama, thrashing through the green water with rhythm and reason, finished the 30-lap grind, 110 yards, or twice the length of the pool in the van of Jack Ryan, a teammate, who was runner-up. The slim, dark-haired victor's time was 20:29, which blasted to pieces the 20:57.8 made by Jack Medica of the University of Washington eight years ago.

Nakama won the 1500-meter event last year, which was replaced by the mile here.

Eclipsed by Nakama's brilliant performance was the excellent 220-yard free style triumph turned in by Bill Smith of Hawaii, the defending 200-meter champion, whose time of 2:10.7 bettered the American mark of 2:13.1, recorded by Otto Jaretz of Chicago in 1940.

Freshman Handicapped

Smith battled it out with Alan Ford, 18-year-old Yale freshman who was handicapped by a strained shoulder ligament. Smith won by 4 feet.

Sammy Lee, Occidental College star now representing the Pasadena (Calif.) A. C., captured the 3-meter dive crown as well the fancy of the crowd of 400 spectators, compiling 155.84 points. He succeeds Earl Clark of Ohio State, who was absent. Miller Anderson, Clark's former teammate, was second with 142.97.

Ohio State's "A" team won the 330-yard medley relay event, besting Yale's first trio by 8 yards. Mark Follansbee sent the victors in front, and Jim Counsilman and Jack Hill went on to pick up additional distance.

As a result of its well-balanced power, Coach Mike Peppe's favored Ohio State Buckeyes piled up 26 points, 12 more than Yale's indoor champions. Nobody else has a chance for the team title.

ONE MILE (final)—Won by Keo Nakama (Ohio State); second, Jack Ryan (Ohio State); third, Danny Green (Texas A. and M.); fourth, Dick Peters (Yale); fifth, Don Deforest (D. and P., Upland, Pa.); sixth, John Barrows (Amherst); seventh, Joe Lucas (Bridgeport); eighth, Bill Trubee (Princeton). Time, 20:29 (New world record. Old record, 20:57.8, by Jack Medica, University of Washington, 1934.)

220-YARD FREE STYLE (final)—Won by Bill Smith (Alexander Community House, Hawaii); second, Alan Ford (Yale); third, Mike Peluso (Brooklyn, N. Y.); fourth, Jerry Kerstner (Columbus, Ohio); fifth, Paul Herron (Los Angeles A. A.); sixth, Don Schnabel (Ohio State); seventh, R. Lyon (Yale); eighth, Bill Despres (Olneyville Boys Club, Providence, R. I.). Time—2:10.7 (new American record. Old long course record, 2:15.1, made by Otto Jarvis of Chicago in 1940).

THREE-METER DIVE (final)—Won by Sammy Lee (Pasadena, Calif. A. C.), 155.84; second, Miller Anderson (Ohio State), 152.97; third, Frank Dempsey (Ohio State), 142.94; fourth, Charles Batterman (Ohio State), 142.56; fifth, Jim Streaf (Ohio State), 116.98; sixth, William Cast (University of Pennsylvania), 105.70; seventh, Ralph Buratti (Highway Pool, Philadelphia), 102.94.

Pirates Beat Cards, 13-6, For 5 in Row

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 7.—The Pittsburgh Pirates won their fifth straight game tonight with a 13-6 victory over the second place St. Louis Cardinals. The Pirates went on a hitting splurge in the second inning, scoring eight runs on seven hits.

The game was a free-hitting affair, the Pirates counting 16 hits and the Cards, 11. Neither starting pitcher was around at the finish. Hubert (Max) Lanier went to the showers during the second-inning uprising and starting Pirate Hurler Henry Gornicki followed him when the Cardinals rallied for three runs in the third. Aldon Wilkie relieved Gornicki and received credit for the victory.

The Pirates opened the second with three consecutive singles, the first by Bob Elliott who also hit a double before the inning was over. Vince DiMaggio knocked in three of the Pirate runs in the inning with two singles, his second coming with the bases loaded.

Giants Beat Phils, 6 to 4; Hub Winner

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 7.—The New York Giants turned back the Phils, 6 to 4, before 5800 spectators tonight as Carl Hubbell won his seventh game of the season.

Hubbell permitted the cellar-dwellers only six hits but two of them were home runs by Mickey Livingston and Albie Glossop, which accounted for all the Phils' runs. After Glossop hit his circuit blow with one out in the ninth, Hubbell was relieved by Ace Adams.

Hubbell pitched perfectly until Bobby Bragan, the Phils' catcher recently converted from shortstop, doubled with one out in the sixth.

Barna Triples

The Giants took a 2-0 lead in the third, sparked by Babe Barna's triple to center and Buster Maynard's single to left. Maynard figured in New York's three-run splurge in the seventh when he singled again. Harry Danning's fly and Bill Jurges' bingle completed the Giants' scoring in that frame.

Livingston's home run came in the seventh with a man on base and Glossop hit his in the ninth with Danny Murtaugh, who had doubled, on second.

The Giants tallied their final run in the ninth when Jurges singled Barana home.

Hoya Baseball Tops Card at Navy Today

Middies Hope to Avenge Two Earlier Losses At Hands of G. U.; Six Events Are Listed

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Aug. 7.—Navy's rapidly expanding summer sports program features a six-event card at the Naval Academy tomorrow, with the Middy-Georgetown baseball struggle standing out as the natural headliner.

After the Hoyas helped Navy into a tie for second place in the Maryland-District of Columbia Baseball League standing by trimming George Washington yesterday, it would seem natural if the Middies felt kindly toward their Washington rivals.

However, this won't be the case for Navy still has in mind two humiliating setbacks Georgetown has inflicted this year and would like nothing more than to administer a sound spanking to the Hoyas.

Last May, when Navy was running up a 10-game winning streak, Georgetown came to Annapolis and snuffed it out. Then July 22, opening loop competition, the Hoyas plastered Navy under a bitter barrage, 12 to 4, stomping off to a string of four straight victories against no defeats.

Navy, improving game by game, has won its last two starts against Catholic U. and Maryland. The twin-pitching combination of Paul Burdette and Bill Leahy was effective in both these games while some robust Middy hitting made their work comparatively easy.

Burdette and Leahy probably will divide twirling duties again tomorrow, Burdette starting and Leahy coming in later on if the former Plebe star holds his own and doesn't need earlier assistance.

Browns Beat Tigers, 3 to 2; Stephens Star

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 7.—Chet Laabs' twentieth home run of the season and Vernon Stephens' twinkling feet, which carried him across the plate from second base on Mike Chartak's infield hit in the eighth inning, aided the St. Louis Browns to a 3-to-2 triumph over Detroit tonight.

Laabs' circuit smash to the left-center grandstand came in the second inning with the bases unoccupied and lifted the Browns into a 2-to-0 lead. Walt Judnich's first-inning single had scored Don Gutteridge, who led off with a double.

Stephens Streaks

With two away, he walked Stephens and Laabs. Chartak poked a feeble roller to Rudy York, and while the first baseman was diving for the bag in a futile effort to beat the runner Stephens rounded third without a letup and steamed in for the winning counter.

Detroit scored its runs in the

Neyland Begins Schooling Army Stars in His Tricks

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 7.—Digging down into the bag of tricks he used at Tennessee, Head Coach Bob Neyland of the Eastern All-Army football team gave his soldier stars today a few of the plays he's planning to use against the New York Giants next month.

Colonel Bob, who's going to use the Tenessee system—single wing back from punt formation—"because it's the only one I know"—appeared satisfied as his charges ran through the plays and drilled in fundamentals on Yale's practice field in preparation for the three-game series for the benefit of the Army Emergency Relief which opens at New York on September 12.

"I'm very well pleased," said Neyland, "at the shape the boys are in. The men are less lame than I expected."

The colonel said he planned to start contact work and light scrimmages early next week when the full squad of 80 men, virtually all of them former college stars, will be on hand.

Arrivals today brought the squad now in training here to 44. They were First Lieut. W. Carey Cox, former center at the University of Alabama, First Lieut. J. M. Bruhl, one-time guard and tackle at Colorado State; Pvt. Rex Gandy, former tackle at Baylor; Corpl. J. G. Melius, tackle at Villanova, and member of the 1938 Eastern All-Stars; Corpl. David E. di Fillippo, guard at Villanova; Pvt. Don Pflasterer, former halfback and captain at the University of Omaha, and First Lieut. R. L. Burruss, center and captain of the Nebraska University 1940 team.

Guldahl, Wood ShareCanadian Open Golf Lead

By the Associated Press

Toronto, Aug. 7.—Little Ben Hogan, the big money and shot maker from Hershey, Pa., needed 71 strokes today in the second round of the Canadian Open Golf Tourney and reached the halfway point with a total of 136—one stroke behind the deadlocked first-place pair of Ralph Guldahl and Craig Wood.

In the first round Hogan smoked around the Mississauga layout in 65.

Today, however, it was Guldahl who shot the spectacular golf. The big Santa Fe, Calif., pro was in trouble all the way but his recovery shots kept him in the running and his putting was deadly. The combination brought him a 35-35—69 over the par 72 course.

Wood also had a 69, equalling par out with a 36 and then applying the pressure for a 33 on the home nine.

One of Guldahl's best recovery shots of the day was out of a bad trap on No. 17. His drive was only feet short of 300 yards but wide, the ball coming to rest in the middle of the trap.

Taking plenty of sand, Guldahl pitched to within seven feet of the pin and then two-putted for a par four.

Even his driving was bad. He took a bogey six on the fifth—the hole five players eagled yesterday—when his drive bounced out of bounds. And his second shot would

Reese's Miscue Allows Winning Run; Al Javery Pitches for Braves

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 7.—The lowly Boston Braves smacked down the Brooklyn Dodgers 2 to 1 in eleven innings tonight, scoring the winning run when Nanny Fernandez tripled after two were out and raced home as Peewee Reese fumbled Max West's grounder which Relief Pitcher Hugh Casey had deflected.

The game was completed just a few minutes before the dimout regulations would have halted play, but even though the Dodgers fell behind in the top half of the eleventh and the score would have reverted to a tie if the contest was stopped, Brooklyn made no attempt to stall.

In the last half of the eleventh the Dodgers went down in order on six pitches by Al Javery, who went the route for the Braves.

Boston was held to seven hits by Curt Davis and Casey, but scored first in the second inning on singles by West and Ernie Lombardi and Eddie Miller's long fly.

Javery, who yielded 10 hits in acquiring his eighth victory, had comparatively smooth sailing till the eighth, when the Dodgers tied the score on a double by Arky Vaughan, Dixie Walker's sacrifice and a fly to right by Joe Medwick.

Brooklyn had tried to break through in the seventh, when both Davis and Catcher Mickey Owen were lifted for pinchhitters, but all the National League champions received for their effort was the banishment of Manager Leo Durocher for protesting against Augie Galan being called out at first by Umpire Lee Ballanfant.

Huge Tackle Joins Redskins

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 7.—Thirteen members of the Washington Redskins football team stopped over between trains here today en route to their San Diego, Calif., training camp to pick up Milburn "Tiny" Croft, largest rookie ever to sign in the National Football League. Croft is a 305-pound tackle from Ripon College, Wis.

Sammy Baugh, the Redskins' passing paragon, will join the team at Clovis, N. M.

Forty-three men are expected to report to Coach Ray Flaherty on Monday when the Redskins begin training for their game against Wallace Wade's West Army All-Stars at Los Angeles August 30.

Don Hutson, who set eight scoring and pass receiving records last fall, signed his 1942 contract with the Green Bay Packers today. He will start his eighth season with the opening of the Packer's practice Monday.

Weatherite Survives Rough Race to Score at Cumberland

$16.40 Shot Victor by Half Length

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 7.—Jockey Eddie Smith of Washington, D. C., had a rough trip around the racing strip here this afternoon, but at the all-important time he was still aboard a filly named Weatherite, half a length in front of his closest rival, and the winner of the featured Elks' Purse.

Smith and the 4-year-old daughter of Prince of Wales and Port Weather were two of a kind today. Each refused to give up and after the competitive action ceased, backers of the filly, owned by Mrs. G. O. Russell, visited the mutuel department to collect at the rate of $16.40 for each $2 investment.

Mrs. A. Beven's Try Flying, the odds-on favorite in the field of eight going 4½ furlongs, was second and a half length in advance of W. M. Beougher's Royal Echo. The winner was clocked in 55 2-5 for the sprint court.

The race was roughly contested from start to finish. There was a jam at the first turn in which R. Roy McClarin's Calory was the chief sufferer and there were minor bumpings and shut offs almost all the way. Try Flying, setting the pace under Jockey Al Bocson's riding, escaped all interference. Weatherite came up on the rail and kept going despite being wedged in along the rail.

A pay-off of $113.50 was collected by 68 daily double investors. W. B. Casilear's Lost and Found, a first-time starter, purchased from A. G. Vanderbilt last June for $250, won the first race by a half length from J. D. Rogers Heckelsie, the favorite. These two battled it out all the way with Jockey Sammy Palumbo drawing out the $32 shot in the final 20 yards.

The second event went to G. Gude's Teco Tack. This daughter of Hard Tack took command early and led thereafter, winning from Fair Flame Rostan and five others. Teco Tack paid $4.30.

M. B. Goss' My One won the fourth race under a good ride by Jockey Al Bocson. This favorite came from behind to take command and led Seneschal and No Fair to the wire in the test of six and a half furlongs.

Selections at Cumberland

Dear Al:

Monday is an off day at this track. Everybody will miss Lucky Teeter's show this year. The popular daredevil motorist, killed recently, was something of an institution at the Cumberland Fair. Jockey Clarence Wright will begin riding here on Tuesday. M. B. (Pop) Goss of Winchester, Va., has sold Agnes Knight to former Jockey Johnny Leyland at private terms. Scoria was the first horse reported "nerved" at this meeting. That makes seven on the list since the half-miler opened. The others are Calory, High Aim, Witch's Circle, Seasonal, Jumelus and Worthowning. Lieut. J. H. Williams of Annapolis, visited with the press box boys yesterday. Trainer Augie Gibson says that Walter Haight runs best when he lets the colt listen to the radio the night before he goes to the post. That was a mighty game race the Mowlee 3-year-old ran here last Thursday when beaten a short head. Shirley Plummer, whose father is a Bennings fan, is the star blues singer at the Maryland Cocktail Lounge, where the debonaires hold forth. Cumberland opens its program with the playing of the National Anthem and is the first Maryland track to do so. Let's keep it up. Joe Fleischer, who takes the pictures around most tracks, is vacationing—where?—at the race track. Lost and Found, winner of the first race yesterday, is just about the best looking 2-year-old seen around the halvers this year. He is by Discovery out of Sweep Out and if you think that breeding over you will have to admit he is aptly named. L. E. Colbert's Phair Ydler is reported to have broken an ankle in training yesterday morning. The mare may be saved for breeding. Word comes from Pascoag, R. I., that Jockey Herb Claggett, injured there, is on the mend and hopes to ride at Harve de Grace. A test of Groucher's Boy after his dismal showing here Thursday, revealed that he was suffering from a kidney ailment, according to the stewards. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—On a fast track BRAXTON would be hard to beat. This one has been freshened and has plenty of speed. In mud ALSELEDA should take the top and stay there all the way. STRUMMING has tailed off in form but is still a threat.

Second race—HEDDA GAB came from behind and showed a good effort last out. Seems ready for the top call in this field. TERRY MAY'S last left nothing to be desired. CUSHLAMACREE has had many chances but could awaken here.

Third race—LINDEN GIRL gets the inside post position and has the speed to make the most of it. I see no reason for mistakes. ELIZABETH K. closed willingly to score in her last and is dangerous. SEVENTEEN GUNS is a possibility.

Fourth race—OWALLER is tossed in this with light weight and could be the right one in an open sprint. HIBLAZE is fit as hands make horses and belongs close. BUTTERMAN is sharp now and will be a factor.

Fifth race—The entry of LAURIDEN and EL JELIS should provide the winner in this distance test. Either will turn the trick I do believe. STORMY NIGHT is due respect off that Bel Air victory.

Sixth race—IDLE NIGHT is sharp as that recent effort suggests and needs only the right handling to get home in front. STAR CANTER has speed and will be the one to catch. JAMES PAL for the show end.

Seventh race—BURNER has a slight class edge on this kind. Should be along in time to take the major award. TANTRUM'S last was a fair performance. CHANNING is getting ready to score and deserves some attention.

Eighth race—TANGANYIKA has plenty of punch and I'm going to take my chances with the Bedwell representative. NUTMEG LASS likes this oval and probably will set the pace. SOME GROUCHER for the minor award.

Substitute race—SADLING BELL gets my call if this event is used. NAVIGATION and DON DASH for the place and show.

Bath County Horse Show Set Today

Hot Springs, Va., Aug. 7 (AP).—With 118 horses entered in 34 classes, the Fifteenth Annual Bath County Horse Show will be held here Saturday.

Usually a two-day affair, the show has been cut to only one day this year because of the war. However, the large number of entries has caused officials to add a night show to accommodate the large program.

The Free Bed Fund of the local Community House Hospital will benefit from the receipts.

Mrs. William Haggin Perry of Cobham is bringing among other hunters her last year's triple champion, Cornish Hills.

Grid Dodgers Sign Nixon as Coach

Brooklyn, Aug. 7 (AP).—Mike Nixon, former University of Pittsburgh backfield star and more recently on the coaching staff at West Virginia, signed up today as an assistant to Mike Ghetto, the new pilot of the Brooklyn Professional Football Dodgers.

Nixon, who performed for the Panthers from 1932 through '34, leaves tomorrow for the Dodgers' training camp at Princeton, N. J. After winding up his collegiate capers, he was on the Pitt coaching staff for five years, played one year of pro ball with the Pittsburgh Pirates and then was hired by West Virginia in 1940.

Alsab Slated To Run Today At Chicago

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 7—Alsab, 1941 juvenile champion, out of action for two months because of a leg injury, may return to the races at Washington Park tomorrow in a very ordinary sprint instead of testing his legs in a stake event.

Albert Sabbath, Chicago attorney, owner of the celebrated bargain colt, had figured on racing Alsab in the $7500 added Sheridan Handicap for 3-year-olds and upward at a mile and an eighth. However, Alsab's name was missing from the entry list today. Instead, he was entered in a $2500-added handicap at 6 furlongs.

Alsab's trainer, "Sarge" Swenke may not start him if the racing strip is soft, as 6 furlongs is not Alsab's best distance. He is strictly a router. If he races, Alsab will have to face such older sprinters as Woof Woof, Shut Eye, Smacked, Jack Twink and Equistar.

The Sheridan Handicap, first run in 1884 and named after Gen. Phil Sheridan, first president of Washington Park, drew 15 with Best Seller drawing top weight of 122 pounds. Included in the entries are Sirocco, Steel Heels, No Competition, Staretor, Jamerica and Take Wing, another bargain horse.

Take Wing was claimed by Clyde Trout, a Bloomington, Ill., horseman, for $3000 at Arlington Park and since has won two stakes, the $10,000 Stars and Stripes and another for $4000.

Nationals' First Ladies' Night Set for 8:30 Against Red Sox

Masterson Gets Mound Call Tonight

Nocturnal Ace Boasts Two Shutouts Under Lights; Double Bill Scheduled Tomorrow

Washington's August Wonders, the Nats, were plunged into a vigorous weekend schedule of three games within 20 hours when last night's scheduled battle with the Red Sox was postponed on account of (military secret).

Today's scheduled game with the Red Sox was rescheduled for tonight and will be historic, in a sense. For tonight will be the first Ladies' Night in the history of Griffith Stadium. The game will start at 8:30 o'clock.

Instead of the single game scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, the Nats will meet the Red Sox in a double-header.

The surprising Washington Club, which has won 14 of its last 21 games and is now eyeing fifth place, is fresh from two consecutive victories over the Yankees.

Masterson to Pitch

For tonight's affair with the Red Sox, Manager Bucky Harris will wheel out his best nocturnal pitcher, Walter Masterson, who has done his best pitching under the stadium lights. Masterson has two night-game shutouts to his credit this season. Joe Dobson is scheduled to start for Boston.

The Red Sox themselves have been getting superb pitching of late. In their last two contests, Tex Hughson and Bill Butland turned in shutout victories over the Athletics which moved Joe Cronin's club to within a half game of second place.

The Nats have been winning on the strength of clever pitching for the last three weeks, and despite a shaky infield which has been missing double play chances. The rookie pair of Shortstop Johnny Sullivan and Second Baseman Ellis Clary has, however, been offsetting their fielding deficiencies by getting on base and scoring runs.

Leonard May See Action

If the Nats' starting pitchers do not go the route in the series against the Red Sox it is probable that Washington fans will see Dutch Leonard in action for the first time since he broke his leg in late April.

The other night when it appeared that Buck Newsom was weakening against the Yankees in the eighth inning, the man whom Manager Harris sent to the bull-pen for possible relief duty was Leonard.

Pauline Betz, Schroeder Are In Net Finals

By the Associated Press

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., and Pauline Betz, Los Angeles, advanced to the final rounds of the Eastern Grass Courts tourney today while Sidney B. Wood, former United States Davis Cup star, was eliminated by another Californian.

Wood, who underwent a minor operation yesterday, hobbled about the court as George Richards, 18, of Montebello, Calif., triumphed 6-4, 6-1.

Schroeder reached the men's final by stopping William Tablert of Cincinnati, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4. The Californian raced to the net after every service and had little difficulty with the Ohioan.

Miss Betz, runnerup in the 1941 tourney and ranked second in the nation last year, eliminated Margaret Osborne of San Francisco in a gruelling three-set match, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Dale Alexander Whiffs In First Attempt at Politics

Greenville, Tenn., Aug. 7 (AP).—Baseball club owners: If you need a manager or coach, you probably can sign up Big Dale Alexander who won the American League batting championship 10 years ago.

He aspired to wear the badge of sheriff in his home county, but unofficial returns gave the verdict to Republican B. H. Renner, 4876 to 5196.

Failing to win, Big Dale had said he would return to baseball.

Center Market Beats Heurich; Murnane Wild

Wildness on the part of Johnny Murnane, Heurich hurler, yesterday gave Center Market a 6-2 triumph and a first place deadlock with the losers in the torrid second-half Washington Post-Industrial League race. Murnane walked nine batters, forcing home two runs in both the second and fifth innings.

Joe Wells handled the Marketmen's pitching, turning in a 7-hitter and walking no one. Best blow of the day was Charley Kendall's double for Center Market in the sixth, driving Durkin across the plate.

The title will be decided next week when Center Market plays H. and J. Construction on Tuesday and Heurich faces Cameo Furniture on Wednesday.

Union Printer Nine Defeats Naiman, 4-2

Union Printer nine locked up at least a tie for the second-half Departmental League championship yesterday when it nosed out Naiman Photos, first-half winner, by a 4-2 count on the Ellipse. The winners thus have won eight of their ten games while Naiman has won only six.

Three errors gave the Printers a 2-0 lead in the first inning and in the second they got the winning run on walks issued Halloran and Mosedale, and Catcher Wicklein's wild throw to second.

Gimp Bailey went the distance for the Printers, hooking up in a pitchers' battle with Billy Robertson. They allowed four and five hits, respectively.

Herren Wins Boys' Tennis Championship

Alabama Youth Turns Back Tom Molloy In Straight Sets; Budge, Patty Score

By the Associated Press

Culver, Ind., Aug. 7.—Dixie annexed two boys' national tennis titles today in the annual junior and boys' tournament.

Wade Herren of Birmingham, Ala., seeded No. 2, won the boys' title with straight-set victories over unseeded Tom Molloy of Memphis, Tenn. The score was 8—6, 6—3. Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, Calif., who since has graduated to the junior ranks, won the crown last year.

But it wasn't all defeat for Molloy. He and Billy Smith of Orlando, Fla., paired in the boys' doubles finals to conquer a team of Princeton, N. J., brothers—Dean and McDonald Mathey 6—2, 6—2.

Budge Patty of Los Angeles, defending his singles crown, played stellar tennis to shelve Arthur MacDonald of San Gabriel, Calif., 6—3, 6—2, and advance to the finals.

Patty will meet Tom Falkenburg of Hollywood, who eliminated his younger brother, Bob, playing as a junior in the meet for the first time. The brothers' duel kept spectators on their seats as each fought for every point in the long two-set match, which Tom finally won, 9—7, 8—6.

This was the first time the brothers had been opponents in national competition.

Weather conditions interrupted the junior doubles semi-finals and play will be completed tomorrow. Bob Falkenburg and Patty took the first set, 7—5, and Jim Brink of Seattle and Fred Kovaleski of Hamtramck, Mich., the second, 6—3.

The other match will pit Tom Falkenburg and MacDonald against John Brock of Los Angeles and Ted Norpoth of Houston, Tex.

Leahy, Recalling '04 Badger Opener, Starts Worrying

By International News Service

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 7.—Frank Leahy had established some kind of a record tonight.

The Notre Dame football coach announced he is deeply worried over the Irish's opening game against Wisconsin.

The Badgers handed the Irish the worst defeat of their gridiron history, a 58-to-0 drubbing administered in 1904, Leahy recalled, adding that that game was the season's opener.

Savold, Musto Here Today

Turner's Arena will be the scene today of workouts by Tony Musto and Lee Savold, main event principals of Monday night's boxing show at Griffith Stadium. Musto, the underdog of the scheduled 10-rounder, will train at 1 o'clock and Savold will enter the ring an hour later. He will drill with Stablemate Pat Comiskey.

The heavyweight opponents arrived last night. Savold and Comiskey were accompanied by Co-managers Bill Daly and Hymie Wiseman. Comiskey is scheduled to box Jack Monroe, Toledo Negro heavyweight, in a 10.

Beau Jack, Negro lightweight, who fights Joe DeJesus in another 10, will arrive tomorrow and limber up at the arena. He has been training in New York's Stillman's Gym.

The supporting card has been completed with the exception of an opponent for Nick Latsios, who is turning pro on this show. A six-round bout pairs Roscoe Perry and Lew Hanbury, lightweights; three four-rounders will pit Danny Petro against Joe Boone; Charley Petro against George Smyre, and Latsios is in the other with an opponent to be announced later.

The main event fight will again be broadcast by Ray Carson over Station WWDC. The bout is expected to be staged at 10:15 p. m.

Meanwhile, Guldahl and Wood were applying the heat from the start. The Californian, who hasn't won a major title since the Milwaukee Open of 1940, was putting for birdies on 12 of the greens and said his score might have been lower except for an ache in his hip that kept him from distributing his weight equally on both feet.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo, low amateur in the recent Tam O'Shanter Tourney in Chicago, led the Simon pure field with 138, adding a 67 today to his first-round 71. Skee Riegal of Miami, Fla., was second with 141, cutting one stroke off his first-round score today.

The low 60 scorers and ties after today's play qualified for the final 36 holes tomorrow.

Terps Blank Hopkins, 8-0, In Lacrosse

Scoring in every quarter, University of Maryland's varsity lacrosse team today defeated Johns Hopkins University by a score of 8-0, its second victory in three weeks over its old rival.

Jack Hoyert, who seems to have found his stride this summer, led the Terps to their easy win by making four goals and assisting Gerlacki and Vandenberg in making two more. Ray Gerlacki and Milt Vandenberg were the only other Old Liners to score, each getting two markers.

Hoyert opened the scoring early in the first quarter when he took the ball from center of the field and ran to left side before making an unassisted score. Milt Vandenberg closed first quarter scoring when he shot one past Goalie Greenbaum late in that quarter.

The fans rose to their feet in the second quarter when Gerlacki scored after only seven seconds of play without an assist. From that point on he was a walkaway for the Maryland team. They added two more points in the second quarter one in the third and two in the final quarter.

Baseball Tops Navy's 6-Event Slate Today

Maryland Schedules Lakehurst Eleven

Georgetown University, undefeated first-half winner of the D. C.-Maryland summer baseball league, opens its second half schedule today at Navy, while George Washington entertains Maryland on the Ellipse here.

Earl Branfield, tall, lanky right-hander from Ohio, will take the mound for Georgetown today as the Hoyas seek to improve their fine summer record of seven victories and one loss.

Max Hunt, veteran right-hander, likely will start for Maryland today, with Billy Robertson opposing.

University of Maryland has scheduled a football game with the Lakehurst, N. J., Naval Training Station to be played at College Park October 3, Dr. H. C. Byrd, university president, announced yesterday.

Byrd revealed that Clark Shaughnessy, new head football coach, is expected to return from Chicago the last of the month to open fall practice September 1.

Mrs. Gray Leads, 5-0, As Rain Halts Match

A semifinal match of the D. C. Women's Tennis League championships yesterday between Mrs. David Gray and Charlotte Decker was rained out as Mrs. Gray led 5—0 in the first set at the Reservoir Courts.

This match will be continued today at 4 p. m. At the same time the second semifinal, between Sara Moore and Ena Dellinger, will be held. Finals will be held tomorrow.

Goldstein, Va. Boxing Great, Joins Army

BOBBY GOLDSTEIN

Bobby Goldstein, former Southern intercollegiate boxing champion and coach of last year's Maryland University ring team, has been sworn in as a second lieutenant in the Army Air Corps and will report to Maxwell field, Ala., in a few days, it was announced yesterday.

Goldstein, a brother of Sports Promoter Goldie Ahearn, attended the University of Virgniia, where he starred in boxing for four years, his last year as captain of the team. He was named to Spike Webb's all-American boxing team in 1934.

Goldstein expects to do physical education in the Army. In his first year as Maryland coach, in 1941-42, Goldstein's team won the Eastern intercollegiate tournament, held at the University of Virginia.

Goldstein was connected with the Mutual Life Insurance of New York since his graduation from college. He is married.

Mrs. Stokes Wins Manor Golf Crown

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes made off with her third straight Manor Club Women's Championship yesterday by defeating her perennial rival, Mrs. L. G. Pray, 5 and 4, in the 18-hole finals.

Mrs. Stokes thus carries a brand new club title along with her city and State crowns into the Middle Atlantic next week. The club victory afforded the District's outstanding woman golfer with a tune-up week for her crack at grand slam honors.

The heavy course was not catering to low scores yesterday but for the 14 holes of the title match Mrs. Stokes played fine golf and had par for a 77, including a birdie deuce on the fifth hole where she dropped a seven-foot putt and a 10-footer for a birdie on the twelfth.

Mrs. Pray, who was not playing her game, was further bothered by a trio of three-putt greens on the front nine and was four down at the turn. Mrs. Stokes played the round out and finished with a 79, an excellent score under the conditions.

Mrs. C. C. Dannaker won the second flight over Madeline Bast, 2 up, and Mrs. J. E. Nell the consolation over Mrs. Max Taylor, 5 and 4. Mrs. Mack Myers won the first flight consolation over Mrs. J. R. Daily, 2 and 1. The third flight went to Mrs. S. B. Cropley over Mrs. D. S. Platt, 3 and 1, and Mrs. Alphonse Leemans won the Inside Nine championship over Mrs. J. P. McMahon, 5 and 4.

Par Out	443 534 435—35
Mrs. Stokes Out	454 625 635—40
Mrs. Pray Out	574 636 545—45

Transportation Solved For Mid-Atlantic Golf

In an effort to boost the entry for next week's Middle Atlantic Women's Championship the Congressional Country Club station wagon will make several trips to the Chevy Chase Circle to convey contestants to and from the club each day.

The tournament opens with a qualifying round on Monday and the station wagon will leave from the Grafton Street side of the circle at 8:30, 9 and 9:30 a. m., providing the players make reservations at the club.

With all rooms taken at the club, the association hopes to take care of the out-of-town contestants in temporary dormitory quarters, Dr. R. A. Keilty, secretary of the golf body, announced flights would be provided for all players and handicaps are not necessary.

ARGYLE

Mrs. G. D. Horner closed entries yesterday for the Argyle Invitation Class B Women's tournament to be played on Wednesday and announced pairings would be released for Tuesday morning. The Class A golfers will play in their section of the Invitation a week from Wednesday, after the Middle Atlantic. Entries close next Friday.

CONGRESSIONAL

Mrs. George Jani was the Class A winner and Mrs. Harlen Chapman won in Class B in Congressional's weekly Ladies' Day tournament, a white elephant affair. No scores were reported.

Five Interhigh Grid Games For Coolidge

In its first year of competition in the annual public school football series, Calvin Coolidge High will play more games than six of the eight teams in the race, it was revealed yesterday with the release of the unofficial 1942 schedule.

Five outings are on the Colts' schedule, the same number as will be played by Roosevelt. All other schools will play only four league games.

The Colts, though their school is located at Fifth and Sheridan Streets Northwest, have been placed in the Eastern Division of the two-section league. They will compete with Anacostia, Tech and Eastern for a chance to play the Western Division winner—either Western, Central, Roosevelt or Woodrow Wilson—in the championship game November 26.

A total of 17 games are on the board, highlighted by the annual Tech-Central battle October 31, the Western-Wilson sectional rivalry November 7 and the yearly Tech-Anacostia fight October 23.

In most cases, coaching changes necessitated by the war have not been completed, though these will be cleared by September 1 when practice starts. The first game sends Coolidge against last year's runner-up, Anacostia, on October 2, Central, the defending champion, gets its first start a week later against Wilson.

October 2, Coolidge at Anacostia, Western at Roosevelt; 9, Tech at Eastern, Central at Wilson; 16; Coolidge at Western, Central at Roosevelt; 23, Anacostia at Tech, Coolidge at Eastern; 30, Roosevelt at Wilson, Eastern at Anacostia, 31, Tech at Central.

November 6, Coolidge at Roosevelt; 7, Wilson vs. Western at Central; 13, Wilson at Anacostia, Coolidge at Tech; 20, Western at Central, Roosevelt at Eastern.

November 26, championship playoff.

National Ice League Plans For Season

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—The Ottawa Evening Journal says that it has been informed officially that selective service regulations will not prevent the operation this winter of the National Hockey League.

The paper says that Frank Calder, National League president, conferred yesterday with Elliott M. Little, director of National Selective Service, on prospects for the coming season and "was given a bleak, but not entirely black picture.

"Exactly what pro hockey's winter operations would be will not be decided until Mr. Little has received from Mr. Calder a complete list of the league's players, setting out their marital status, ages and eligibility for armed service.

"For reasons of morale, selective service officials believe that hockey should be kept alive—in the amateur leagues of the armed forces, for the duration—and in the senior professional league, for this winter anyway."

Bobo Is Shocked By Ban on His Fighting Career

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 7.—Harry Bobo, Negro heavyweight aspirant who was barred from boxing in Pennsylvania on the grounds that his vision was impaired, said today he was "shocked" by the State athletic commission's action and expressed hope he would be given an opportunity to continue fighting.

Bobo, who has scored 22 knockouts in 33 fights and three years ago held the Junior National A. A. U. heavyweight title, said he "did have some trouble" with his eyes, "but I don't have now." He added:

"My eye was hurt in a fight with Gus Dorazio, but I've fought Melio Bettina, Bob Smith and Claudio Villar since then and each time the boxing commission physicians okayed me. I don't understand why this was suddenly brought up.

"I'd like to continue fighting. I'm perfectly capable. I don't have any trouble seeing my opponents."

Ensign, Army Private Pace Skeet Shoot

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 7.—An Army-Navy duel between a keen-eyed ensign and an unerring private, both of whom shattered 100 straight targets, enlivened today's 12-gauge shooting in the National Skeet championships.

A near record of 10 perfect scores were posted during firing at the first 100 clays in the 250-target event, extending into Sunday, in which 253 marksmen are competing.

The Navy's W. C. "Billy" Perdue, 20-year-old former Springhill (Ala.) real estate agent now stationed at Pensacola, Fla., hit 100x100 to tie the Army's Dick Shaughnessy at the head of the pack. The 20-year-old Dedham (Mass.) marksman has posted scores of 96, 99, 100 and 100 in three days of firing.

Other amateurs who shot perfect scores were Dr. F. R. Westermeier, Buffalo; Ray McFarren, Wooster, Ohio; Dave Sklar, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Lieuts. Dick Schwab, Houston, Tex., and Rufe Watson, Laurel, Md., and Dr. L. W. Childs, Lake Kerr, Fla. Professionals Grant Ilseng, Chicago, and Ed Lindsay, Paris, Tex., also fired with faultless aim.

In team shooting, the Navy led the field with 492 X 500, edging the Army by two birds. The Michigan State team compiled 492 to take second place, while the Buffalo, N. Y., foresters were tied with the Army at 491.

Mrs. M. L. Smythe, Aurora, Ohio, who two years ago here became the first woman to break 100 straight in national competition, in the event, today splintered 99 targets to lead feminine contenders. Mrs. Potter Palmer, 3d., Chicago, Ill., broke 98 birds.

H. Lutcher Brown, veteran Texas oil man, who is pressing Shaughnessy for high-over-all honors, dropped one bird, as did his 15-year-old son, Freddie. Their combined score of 198 gave them a slim lead over young Shaughnessy and his parent J. M. Shaughnnessy, who had 197, for the father-son title.

Railroads Face Difficult Time, Gen. Gross Says

By the Associated Press

Brig. Gen. Charles P. Gross, chief of the new Army Transportation Corps, said yesterday the Nation's war effort faced increasing handicaps because of mounting demands on the railroads.

"The railroads have about used up their reserves of equipment and we are approaching a rather serious and even critical condition," Gross told reporters.

"This year will see 34 per cent more ton miles of freight movements than in 1929 and 48 per cent more than 1918, the peak year of the first World War.

"Right now the railroads are using some 1200 locomotives to haul oil which were available for other movements last year."

Gross complained at a press conference that new equipment had not kept pace with war demands, but expressed confidence the situation eventually would be relieved.

Creation of the transportation corps, a counter part of similar agencies of 1918-19, was announced Thursday by the War Department.

Manufacture of "railroad standard" watches was limited by the War Production Board yesterday to those required to fill military orders or orders placed by certified railroad employes.

Railroad standard watches are large, usually key wound, and are made especially for railroad men.

As the same time, WPB announced that imports of sheep shearlings would be restricted after 12:01 a. m., August 17, and that applications for authority to import must be filed with WPB after that time. Tanners holding unfilled Army Air Force contracts are the only persons eligible to import shearlings.

Additional leather for civilian shoes will be made available under orders permitting tanners to use any goat skins which can not be processed into more than 6¾ square feet of leather. Goat skins are used for upper leather of shoes.

Under previous orders, tanners were required to reserve for military use all goat skins which would produce more than 5¾ square feet of leather.

The War Production Board yesterday prohibited placing or acceptance of orders for turbo-blowers, important in the steel expansion, copper, synthetic rubber and other war production programs, without specific WPB approval.

The restrictions do not apply to turbo-blowers for delivery to the Navy or Maritime Commission for shipboard use, or to any privately owned shipyard or plant for installation on ships built or repaired for the Navy or Maritime Commission.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 7 (AP).—The sharp wheat price rally started yesterday was halted today following private estimates of large crops in Kansas, major United States producing State, and Canada.

The market tried to continue its recovery at the opening but buyers melted away and small fractional gains were lost. Thereafter prices fluctuated nervously over a ⅝-cent range, alternating above and below previous closing levels and finishing unchanged to ⅜ lower compared with yesterday, with September 1.17½@1.17⅜, December 1.20½@1.20⅜.

Outside investment and commercial trade remained slow and the bulk of transactions came from professional dealers. This trade apathy was blamed on the war and the artificial character of the market because so much new wheat is being held back for Government loans. Traders said prices range from 15 to more than 20 cents below loan rates at various markets and that would-be sellers are restrained by the fact that this is restricting farmer offerings and movement of new wheat to terminals while prospective buyers cannot ignore record breaking supplies.

Other grains fluctuated erratically with wheat, corn closing ⅛@¼ lower than yesterday; September, 87¼@87⅜; December, 90⅛@90¼; oats, ¼ off to ⅛ up; rye, ½@⅝ down and soybeans, ¼ lower.

The Outlook

By William Pinkerton and James Marlowe

Economist Urges Smashing of Junker Power In Politics to Keep Europe at Peace

A well-known economist tells a significant story of how the rich German landowners—the Junkers—insisted upon making Germans eat high-priced wheat grown on poor soil.

This was part of the ominous Nazi blood-and-soil mysticism, explains J. B. Condliffe, professor of economics at the University of Southern California.

It played its vital part not only in leading Germany upon its adventure of military conquest, but in contributing to the severe agriculture unbalance in the world, of which America's great unsold wheat surplus is a symptom.

Condliffe, a native Australian, experienced as a member of the staff of the League of Nations and as a professor in New Zealand and England, writes:

"There is not likely to be any peace in Europe if the political power of the feudal, militarist, landowning Junkers is not smashed. They survived the defeat of the Kaiser, but they should not be allowed to survive the defeat of Hitler."

In his new book, "Agenda for a Postwar World," published yesterday (W. W. Norton & Co.), he traces the situation from Bismarck's "Compact of Iron and Rye," by which Germany entered upon a policy of high-tariff protectionism and "anchored the effective control of political power upon a combination between heavy industry and the feudal landowners."

Meanwhile such countries as Britain, Holland, Belgium, Denmark adjusted themselves to the "agricultural revolution" arising from the opening of great new and efficient grain producing areas, such as the American Middle West.

They sacrificed the growing of grain at home "in order to take advantage of cheap food for their urban masses of industrial workers."

Just before the present war, wheat prices in the Reich were three times as high as those in nearby Rotterdam.

Nutrition studies, Condliffe explains, show the need for great increases in production of dairy products and perishable fruits and vegetables for Europe's great industrial centers.

With proper adjustment to modern nutrition standards, there should be no surpluses of agricultural products. He continues:

"Some part of the soils of estern Germany ought really to go back to forest use. Other and better soils should be distributed in small holdings, primarily for dairying.

"The case of the Junkers is very clear, but it does not stand alone. With them should go the remaining feudal elements of Europe, such as the great landowners of Poland and Hungary."

Condliffe pictures the United States as the economic fulcrum of the postwar world and says:

"A strong and prosperous United States is the most important contribution that Americans can make to the reorganization of the postwar world; but the United States cannot be strong and prosperous unless it shares actively in reorganizing the prosperity and strength of other countries. American manufacturing activity was calculated even before the war to account for about 45 per cent of the world total. Immediately after the war this figure will certainly be higher."

He foresees vast opportunities for great industrial nations such as America to use their excess productivity in development of the enormous backward areas of the earth. He writes:

"The most baffling economic problem faced by countries with low living standards is not so much their poverty as their inefficiency and lack of initiative. Inadequate nutrition and endemic disease sap the vitality of great masses of the world's population.

"Lack of capital inhibits the construction of public health facilities, of transport and productive mechanisms that would enhance the value of their labor, of educational systems that would improve efficiency. The impoverished countries become caught in an inexorable cycle of population increases pressing constantly upon limits of subsistence."

Professor Condliffe, however, says it would be futile to draw up detailed blueprints for the postwar period now. What must be done, in his opinion, is to try to develop policies that will take us in the right direction and avoid pitfalls. For instance, he says:

'Every care should be taken to ward off two dangers: First, inflation, then an aggravation of economic nationalism in the ensuing period of deflation."

Much Government regulation must be continued, he warns. "There will be a great revulsion against bureaucracy in all its forms after the war," he says, and suggests "this should be used to retore individual freedom in an orderly framework."

But cautious relaxation of controls over a transitional period he finds vital, asserting "this is not a war to make the world safe for bureaucracy."

Employment At 54,000,000, A Record High

By the Associated Press

Employment increased 700,000 from June to July, bringing the total number of persons at work to a new record high of 54 million, the Work Projects Administration reported yesterday.

Unemployment, however, remained unchanged at 2,800,000, the WPA said, explaining that while 700,000 persons found jobs an equal number entered the labor force, mostly young people leaving school and seeking employment for the first time.

The total labor force, those employed plus those seeking jobs, was placed at 56,800,000 during July. The number of employed set a new record for the third successive month.

WPA said employment had increased by 6,400,000 since July 1940 and by 3,100,000 since July a year ago. The greater part of the increase was in nonagricultural employment, which reached 42,300,000 last month, up 500,000 from June and 5,500,000 from July of two years ago, according to the agency figures.

Agriculture employment was estimated for July at 11,700,000 a rise of about one million in the last 12 months.

Generally successful absorption of young workers into jobs was indicated, the WPA said, by the fact that unemployment had remained at practically the same figure since April, whereas the total labor force had increased by more than three million workers.

Central Maine Asks To Sell Notes Privately

Philadelphia, Aug. 7 (AP).—The Central Maine Power Co. has filed an amendment with the Securities and Exchange Commission proposing the private, instead of public, sale of five million dollars of 10-year serial notes, maturing in 1943-52.

Central Maine's orginial registration listed the notes for public sale along with 14 million dollars of first and general mortgage bonds: Series M, due 1972. The registration also proposed the issuance of 261,910 common shares, $10 par value, to be offered to holders of common and 6 per cent preferred stock. The unsubscribed common shares would be sold to New England Public Service Co., direct parent of Central Maine.

Another Special Issue Alloted by Exchange

New York, Aug. 7 (AP).—For the second time this week floor brokers on the New York Stock Exchange today engaged in such spirited bidding among themselves for a special offering of stock that allotments had to be resorted to by exchange officials.

Smith, Barney & Co. made a special offering of 9900 shares of Pure Oil Co. common stock at 8⅞ with the commission fixed at 35 cents a share. Within 10 minutes floor brokers had bid for more than three times the amount offered, or 30,045 shares. Allotments ranging from 4250 shares down to 10 shares were finally worked out by the committee on floor procedure.

Earlier this week an offering of 28,700 shares of General Electric brought such a rush of orders that it took several hours to determine just how much each buyer would get on allotment.

Wheat in 3 Provinces May Double '41 Harvest

Winnipeg, Aug. 7 (Canadian Press).—The Winnipeg Free Press in its fourth crop report of the season estimated that the three prairie provinces would harvest more than 550 million bushels of wheat, a crop twice as large as last year, while the Winnipeg Tribune, in its fifth report, said the crop would be "substantially more than 500 million bushels."

The crop is approximately two weeks later than last year, the papers said, and average dates on which wheat harvesting will begin were given in the Free Press as August 13 in Manitoba and August 20 in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Near Record Yield Of Corn Is Forecast

Chicago, Aug. 7 (AP).—Rich green leaves, long waving tassels and heavy silken shoots averaging two to the stalk in many fields promised today record, or near record, yield of corn as the Nation's vital war crop progressed through the ear forming stage.

Crop experts pointed out that should improvement occur between now and harvest as it did last year, which is possible because of the big hybrid acreage and excellent moisture situation, a crop of more than 2,700,000,000 bushels is likely, compared with 2,672,000,000 last year.

U. S. Charges New Monopoly To Radio Field

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 7.—Thurman Arnold, head of the Anti-trust Division of the Justice Department, declared in Federal Court today that the Radio Corp. of America, the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and other big radio corporations "are now engaged in a new monopoly covering the whole radio field."

Arnold's charges came during argument on a Government petition to dismiss a 10-year-old consent decree against nine radio and electrical manufacturing firms which the Government charged had violated anti-trust statutes.

Declaring that the old consent decree had become an "unholy vehicle for the enforcement of the law in this case," Arnold told Judge Albert B. Maris that Attorney General Francis Biddle believes the decree now is ineffective.

The decree divorced the RCA from General Electric Co. and Westinghouse and prohibited the firms involved from claiming exclusive rights to certain radio patents.

Other Companies Involved

Other companies affected were International General Electric, National Broadcasting Co., Inc., RCA Communications, Inc., RCA Photophone, Inc., RCA Radiotron Company, Inc., and RCA-Victor Co., Inc.

Arnold declared "the course of events since then (1932 when consent decree was entered) indicated that the decree has not removed the unlawful restraints of trade and prohibited the monopolies."

He added that the original 14 defendants in the case "together with new parties are now engaged in a new monopoly covering the whole radio field, including television and frequency modulation."

Bruce Bromley, New York attorney for the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., strenuously objected to vacating the 1932 decree, asserting Arnold's motion was a "typically ingenious device to get rid of . . . the defense we could enter to a new suit which he plainly contemplates bringing against us."

The Government dropped its suits against five companies when General Electric and Westinghouse agreed to dispose of stockholdings in those firms.

New Evidence Uncovered

Counsel for the other corporations also objected to dismisal of the decree. They contended that the defendants had made new license agreements with their customers on the strength of the decree and that the firms would lose millions of dollars if it were vacated.

Arnold said an investigation in 1940 by the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House of Representatives had "uncovered evidence" which indicated the old decree should not be allowed to stand.

The decree was entered in the United States District Court at Wilmington, Del. Judge Maris, a member of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, was especially assigned as a district judge to consider Arnold's motion. His decision will be handed down in Wilmington.

Locomotive Works Reports $2,551,731 Net

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 7.—"Judging by the first six months' orders, it is likely that American Locomotive Co. will design and build more locomotives than in 1940 and 1941 combined," said William C. Dickerman, president, today in his statement covering the first half of 1942

"Meanwhile," he added, "in the United States and Canada the company has been growing into one of the biggest tank builders of either nation and a major ordnance supplier of the United Nations."

Dickerman's statement disclosed an extraordinarily rapid growth of business for the company in the first half of 1942.

Unfilled orders as of June 30 amounted to 637 million dollars. Three months ago the figure was $299,400,000, and six months ago it was $253,200,000.

Net income for the period was $2,551,731, equal to $1.72 a share on the common stock, compared with $2,141,520, or $1.18 a common share, in the first half of 1941. The tax bill in the first half of this year was $11,945,000, against $1,160,530 a year ago.

Dickerman said a large building program, largely financed by the United States and Canadian Governments, was nearing completion, which would greatly increase the company's capacity above its present already expanded output.

Oil Men Trace Ills to Divided U. S. Control

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 7.—The Atlantic Coast Oil Associations Conference suggested today appointment of an administrator "who has authority to coordinate the Government departments that affect petroleum."

In a letter to Jesse H. Jones, administrator of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the conference asked him to use his "influence to press for an executive order that will make such an administrator possible without delay."

"The ills of our industry stem from a divided command," the letter said. "To a businessman it would be suicidal if his sales manager and his office manager and his transportation manager refused to cooperate with each other and, further, took every possible opportunity of discrediting each other's department.

"It seems to us that this is what is happening in Washington and has been happening for some time. We know of the friction between the Office of Price Administration and the Office of Petroleum Coordinator. We know that there is little cooperation between the Office of Petroleum Coordinator and the Office of Defense Transportation. We feel very strongly that the War Production Board looks upon many of our problems quite differently than does the industry itself.

"This is due to the fact that the large, integrated companies on the Eastern Seaboard are just as divided as are the various departments in Washington, for they, too, seen to be unable to formulate over-all constructive policies for presentation to our Chief Executive."

The communication, signed by Executive Secretary Clyde G. Morill, said that the conference represented small businessmen who market 75 per cent of the light fuel oil on the Atlantic Seaboard.

Late Earnings Statements

By the Associated Press

Phelps Dodge Corp., one of the leading copper producers, reported for six months ended June 30 net profits of $5,532,999 after charges and setting aside $9,200,000 for Federal and State taxes and $250,000 reserve for postwar losses. This was equal to $1.09 a share in the capital stock. In the comparable period of 1941 net profit was $7,014,854 after a tax bill of $3,500,000, equal to $1.38 a share.

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corp., reported for 26 weeks ended July 4 net profit of $507,571, equal to 35 cents a common share, against $213,440, or 13 cents a share on the same basis, in the like weeks of 1941.

Scott Paper Co. reported net earnings for the first six months of this year were $837,890, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $1.06 a common share, against $869,965, or $1.11 a common share, in the comparable period of 1941. William F. Mohan, company vice president, said revision of first quarter earnings on the basis of changed Federal tax provisions made them equal to 55 cents a share instead of the 66 cents which had been reported for the three months.

Link-Belt Co. reported consolidated net income for the first six months of $1,019,578, after provision of $100,000 for possible inventory decline, equal to $1.32 per share of common stock, compared with $1,307,015 or $1.76, the corresponding 1941 period.

American Hide & Leather Co. reported for the fiscal year ended June 30 net profit of $840,269, equal to $1.02 a share on the common stock, against $567,922 or 53 cents a common share, in the preceding fiscal year.

Liquid Carbonic Corp. reported for nine months ended June 30 net profit of $812,497, equal after provision for four months preferred dividend requirement, to $1.05 a common share. This compared with $1,023,215, or $1.40 a share on the capital stock outstanding at that time.

Shares Continue Immunity to Cloudy News From Abroad in Light Trading Session

New York, Aug. 7.—The stock market displayed further immunity to confusing international news today and, while dealings were among the lightest in about two years, leading issues managed to edge into moderately higher territory.

The battle crisis in the Caucasus continued as a buying restraint, as did the Anglo-Indian situation. There was a persistent dribble of investment nibbling, however, on the idea liquidation had dried up to virtually nothing.

The list was a shade irregular at the start but bids soon appeared for steels, motors and other favorites. Gains at the best ranged from fractions to around a point. These were reduced in most cases at the close and there were plently of minus signs.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 36.2, erasing a similar decline of the day before. Transfers of 212,250 shares compared with 248,773 Thursday and were the smallest for a full session since July 1 which was a low mark since August 26, 1940.

Helpful to sentiment were opinions heard in Wall Street that current prices for securities might indicate falling corporate earnings and threatened dividends had been well discounted.

Among the stocks Bethlehem and Chrysler finished up ⅞ each. Lesser improvement was retained by U. S. Steel, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Anaconda, Standard Oil (N. J.), International Harvester, United Aircraft, American Can, Union Carbide and Eastman Kodak. Du Pont pushed up 1⅜.

In the losing column Liggett & Myers "B" dropped 1½ on a few sales. Westinghouse was off 1. Minor set-backs were recorded for Montgomery Ward, Allied Chemical, American Telephone, Pennsylvania and Owens-Illinois.

Bonds were narrow and commodities mixed. At Chicago wheat was unchanged to off ⅜ of a cent a bushel, corn down ⅛ to ¼ and hogs steady to 15 cents lower. Cotton lost 15 to 35 cents a bale.

Great Atlantic & Pacific was up 2¾ in the curb and advances were held by Glen Alden Coal, Creole Petroleum and Pantepec. Gulf Oil and Humble Oil slipped, along with Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Sherwin Williams. Turnover here aggregated 46,470 shares versus 51,020 yesterday.

Retail Sales Show Increase During Week

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 7.—An increase in retail sales during the past week, compared with the previous week, was reported today by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., which credited August promotions with stimulating business.

"An estimated decline of 5 to 10 per cent this year leaves volume well above other recent years despite the conservative buying, increased savings and greatly restricted supplies of hard goods and credit," the mercantile agency reported.

In wholesale quarters sales were reported better than had been expected, although conservative purchasing continued to be the rule. Smaller retailers increased budgets in expectation of more customers as a result of travel restrictions, wartime industrial booms or high farm incomes, the survey showed.

By regions, the week's dollar volume was spotty. In the Southwest the range was up 1 per cent to down 5 per cent, the Northwest up 1 per cent to down 3, Pacific Coast up 5 to down 3, and increases were East, 7 to 14 per cent, New England, 4 to 10, Midlde West, 5 to 8 and South, 1 to 5.

Fuller Warns That Inflation Can Defeat U. S.

Chautauqua, N. Y., Aug. 7 (AP).—Walter D. Fuller, chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers, said today America could win the war and still be defeated by inflation.

"Inflation is as much our enemy as Hitler or Hirohito," Fuller said in an address prepared for delivery before the Chautauqua Institute Assembly.

"It is an unseen enemy that creeps up on us. And it is creeping now."

He urged Americans to "be practical about everything that aids inflation—about blanket wage increases, about class taxation and about favoritism to the pressure groups."

The fear of businessmen regarding inflation, Fuller added, was that they would be weakened to such an extent they could not finance the transition to peace.

"Business and industry must remain strong so as to be in a position to reemploy men and women in peaceful pursuits," he said.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 7 (AP).—Scattered liquidation and light hedging pared earlier gains in cotton futures today to net losses of 15 to 35 cents a bale.

The trade was primed for a Government crop forecast tomorrow of little more than 12,400,000 bales and evening-up operations made up the bulk of limited dealings.

Support came from trade and local buyers while New Orleans interests were on both sides.

M. O. Stabler's Funeral Rites Set for Today

Funeral services for Mortimer O. Stabler, 73, retired farmer, who died Thursday at the Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, after a short illness, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Friends Meeting House at Sandy Spring. Burial will be in the Friends Cemetery, Sandy Spring.

A son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Asa M. Stabler he was a lifelong resident of the Spencerville neighborhood. The Montgomery Farmers' Club of the Sandy Spring area and the annual Montgomery County farmers' convention were among organizations in which he had long been actively interested. He was one of the Montgomery County's leading Republicans and on a number of occasions was the candidate of his party for public offices. He succeeded his father 14 years ago as the Montgomery County representative of the Grangers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co.

Mr. Stabler is survived by his widow, Mrs. Duane D'Vorak Stabler, and a brother, Herbert O. Stabler of Atlanta, Ga., long connected with the United States Forestry Service.

Funeral Services Are Held Here For Frank Dolan

Funeral services for Frank Dolan, former newspaperman, who died Thursday night at his home, 918 Eighteenth Street Northwest, were held last night from the Chambers' Georgetown funeral home. Burial will be in New York City.

Mr. Dolan had been employed recently in the Office of Defense Transportation. Before moving here, he had been a Hollywood script writer and had served as a reporter on New York newspapers. While on the staff of the New York News he exposed a gang of rum runners in Nassau and was shot in a leg by the gang leader. He covered such stories as the Snyder-Gray and Hall-Mills murder cases and the romance of Daddy and Peaches Browning. He was once associated with Sun Yat Sen, first president of the Chinese Republic, for whom he published a newspaper in Shanghai.

Mr. Dolan accompanied Gen. John J. Pershing into Mexico in 1916 in the pursuit of Pancho Villa and was a World War veteran. He was born in Brookline, Mass.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Nancy Dolan, of Dallas, Tex.; a daughter, Miss Betty Ann Dolan, of Eralville, N. Y., and a sister, Mrs. Anne Dolan Walker, of New York City.

It'll be a popular subject, at least around Washington, that you'll be hearing about over WJSV and the Columbia network at 12:15 p. m. Sunday on the program known as "Womanpower."

For the topic will be the girl Government worker—all 123,000 of her—and what she can and is doing to aid in our monumental war effort.

Allan Wilson has written tomorrow's dramatic script of "Womanpower," which is dedicated to telling women how they best can aid the war effort, around the girls who also serve, undramatically perhaps, but importantly, by doing the great mass of work entailed in typing, the taking of dictation, the filing of records, the keeping of the books and the thousand and one other jobs without which the war program would become pretty well tangled.

Following the dramatization, the girls are going to have an able spokesman for their efforts in one of themselves. That will be Miss Mary Higgins, who is secretary to Paul V. McNutt and to whom falls the duties of helping run a smooth-working organization in such Government agencies as the Federal Security Agency, the War Man-Power Commission and the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services—which sounds something like a handful.

"Womanpower" is produced entirely at WJSV for the network and has prominent guests to tell what's what each week.

A formula for squeezes is offered by George M. Bolling, of Easton, Md. "I am sending you a hand from a recent family game," he writes. "The bidding is not worth quoting and the play is easy, but it is interesting because the squeeze can be foreseen very early, and the method of forecasting them is, I believe, simpler than any I have seen in print.

"I use a formula, x=m-n+1. In this x is the number of the squeezing trick, m is the number of tricks to be played, and n is the number of 'busy' cards which one adversary must hold."

West is the declarer at seven spades and North leads the club king. The cards:

West	East
♠K J 7 4	♠A Q 10 8 6
♡A 8 5 3	♡K 6 3 2
◇A K Q 8	◇9 4 3
♣2	♣A 8

"Declarer can count 11 tricks in top cards besides a ruff in clubs," continues our contributor. "If either adversary must stop both red suits, he has seven busy cards—three hearts and four diamonds. Now 13 minus 7 plus 1 equals 7, that is, the seventh trick will squeeze. Declarer wins the club ace, ruffs a club and runs five rounds of spades. The last finds South holding jack, ten, small of diamonds, and whatever discard he makes is fatal."

Declarer will win four diamonds and two hearts or three diamonds and three hearts to take 13 tricks.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

Last Day of Queen's State Visit to Capital

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

After a two-day state visit packed with speeches and exchange gestures of friendship, Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands left Washington last night to rejoin her daughter and two young granddaughters at the "temporary seat of the Dutch government" in the Berkshires.

President Roosevelt saw his royal visitor to the station and gave her a warm goodby. What they said to each other about war and peace plans is for the history books.

Highlight of the monarch's last day in the Capital was the awarding of decorations at noon to five American naval officers who participated in the Battle of the Indies. Under rules of diplomatic protocol, this ceremony took place on Dutch soil.

The Queen's orange and blue standard was raised over the residence of the Netherlands Ambassador, on Wyoming Avenue, and following the award of decorations the motherly ruler drank an orange juice toast to the five heroes.

Their names and the decorations they received were: Comdr. T. H. Binford, commander of a destroyer division which participated in the Battle of Lombok Strait in February, the Militaire Willemsorde, fourth class; Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander in chief of the combined Dutch, American and British fleets in the southwestern Pacific, the Grand Cross of the Order of Oranje-Nassau with swords; Rear Admiral William A. Glassford, American chief of staff of the combined fleets, the Cross of Grand Officer of the Order of Oranje-Nassau with swords; Comdr. H. E. Eccles, commander of the destroyer Edwards, who was praised for "high efficiency" against a superior Japanese naval force in Lombok Strait, the Bronze Cross with citation; Lieut. Comdr. H. P. Smith, commander of the destroyer Stewart, who participated with "skillful and gallant" action at Lombok Strait, the Bronze Cross with citation.

Among 14 guests at the White House for the final luncheon were Wendell L. Willkie, Army Chief of Staff George C. Marshall, Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold of the Army Air Corps, Admiral Ernest J. King, Admiral William D. Leahy, Elmer Davis, Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, Mrs. Warren Robbins, Mrs. Bruce Gould, Anne O'Hare McCormick and Sir R. I. Campbell, the British Minister.

Yesterday morning the Queen appeared at President Roosevelt's press conference and visited headquarters of the American Red Cross. She was introduced at the press conference by the President as "this really great head of a government — head of an Allied Nation who is seeing this war through with us."

Two children of the Junior Red Cross received a brilliant smile when they presented Her Majesty with a bouquet. They were Betty Hollis, 11, 427 Seventeenth Street Southeast, and Edward Raley, 12, 1310 Potomac Avenue Southeast, both pupils at Buchanan School.

Story of Unselfish Devotion

Recluse Clears Mystery Of Life With Blind Brother

By Charles Mercer
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 7.—An elderly man, dressed in the garb of 30 years ago, walked seven miles today from Harlem to Park Row.

His name was Langley Collyer and his destination was the Bowery Savings Bank. The curiosity of this town of 7,500,000 was fixed on him, for he had tried to shut out the world.

His mission was to prevent bank foreclosure on the four-story mansion at 128th Street and Fifth Avenue in Harlem where he and his blind brother, Homer, have lived in seclusion for so many years that gossip has endowed their home with the mystery of a murder thriller mansion.

At the bank Langley talked to F. Donald Richart, vice president in charge of real estate, who told him that a "generous amount of time" would be arranged to complete repurchase of the house which was threatened with seizure as the result of foreclosure of a $6700 mortgage against the brothers.

Last night Langley raised the curtain on the mystery of his secluded life for a reporter whom he found sitting on the steps waiting to tell him of the eviction notice of which he had not been aware.

He disclosed no gruesome mysteries, but rather told frankly a story of unselfish devotion to his brother, Homer, who went blind in 1933 and became paralyzed two years ago.

He said that he was aware that he and Homer had created a ghost legend in the neighborhood because they were never seen in daylight and he explained their mode of living.

"I barricade the windows and double-bolt the doors to keep thieves out," he said. "The people in the neighborhood have tormented and abused us for years. The children have broken more than 200 windows and finally I stopped replacing them and boarded them instead."

The son of a physician, Langley explained that he was treating his brother's ailments himself, aided by some 15,000 medical books in the house. They are without outside gas, electricity or a telephone.

He said that he can make his own "home-made" electricity from a generator built from old automobile parts and had made Homer several old-fashioned crystal radio sets. They cook and heat with kerosene and use it for lighting.

The house is filled with books and several pianos amid the furniture of a bygone age, Langley said, and he's saving thousands of newspapers so that Homer, a former admiralty lawyer, can catch up with the news when he regains his sight.

Apparently Langley doesn't miss modern conveniences. For instance, a telephone. "Homer can't lift himself out of bed to answer," he said, "and there's no one in particular I want to talk to."
